TRAIN KILLS ONE, INJURES ANOTHER ON MOTORCYCLE

E. J. Mort, Fatally, and K. I. Youngberg Seriously Hurt When Run Down on Burlington Tracks.

APPARENTLY SAW DANGER TOO LATE

They Had Just Driven Up Steep Grade at Biddle and Main When Accident Occurred.

An inbound Burlington railroad passenger train struck a motorcycle with a sidecar at Biddle and Main streets last night, killing Earl E. Mort, a painter, 1406 South Tenth street, and gravely injuring the owner and driver of the machine, Karl I. Youngberg, a steeplejack, 1194 South Broadway.

Youngberg was driving the motorcycle west in Biddle street up the steep grade. Both were thrown from their seats and their skulls were fractured.

Youngberg, who is also a contracting painter, with an office at 1401 South Broadway, had taken Mort to the Ashley plant of the Union Electric Light and Power Company, on the river front, a block from the scene of the accident. Mort was employed there and went to call for mail. The men were returning from the plant at 1:15 o'clock when the train struck the machine from the rear as the driver made an attempt to avoid the crash.

A railroad switchman heard the crash and ran to the aid of the men. He found them lying on the cinder bed between two tracks. Apparently, as they were pitched out, their heads struck the rails or the ties of the adjoining track. The motorcycle and the sidecar to which Mort was riding were not badly damaged. The driver, turning in an effort to escape the train, had avoided being struck broadside.

Youngberg, 30 years old and unmarried, and Mort, 38, were inseparable friends. Six months ago Youngberg was injured in a 30-foot fall from an apartment house where he was repairing an awning. Mort is survived by his widow, Nettie.

THREE HURT BY FALLING WALL AT PENNSYLVANIA U. RELAYS

Jumping Persons Flung to Running Track at University as Racers Go Past.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 28.—Three persons were injured, one fatally, when a seven-foot wall between the south stand seats and the running track at the University of Pennsylvania collapsed today as Harley Paddock rushed to a new world's record for 175 yards.

The race in which Paddock was running against University of Pennsylvania sprinters, was one of the feature events of the Pennsylvania relay carnival. The crowd in the stand pressed forward to the front row seats and was leaning over and against the wall as the starter's pistol cracked. Just as the runners passed the weak spot in the brick wall a section of 25 or 30 feet long fell outward and flung the persons, many of them boys and girls, onto the track. Most of them scrambled back into the stand, but three were taken to the University of Pennsylvania Hospital nearby.

Those injured are John Carrington, 12 years; Lawrence Paolela, 15, and Edward Myers, 13, all of Philadelphia.

Dr. Arthur Light, physician to the Pennsylvania football field, who was on the field, attended several persons in the gymnasium and Franklin Field.

SENATORS VOTE FOR HEFLIN BILL AS ALABAMAN WILL BE STILL Though Norbeck Makes His Offer Fair, All the Senator Does Is Glare.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Senator Norbeck (Rep.), South Dakota, offered in the Senate today a vote for a bill by Senator Heflin (Dem.), Alabama, if Heflin would refrain from making a speech he announced he would make. The Alabaman had given notice of the speech when Senator Bingham (Rep.), Connecticut, objected to consideration of his bill to prohibit price predictions on cotton by the Department of Agriculture.

"I will vote for the bill," Norbeck interposed, "if the Senator will refrain from making his speech."

Heflin made no reply.

LINDBERGH HAS FLOWN 200,000 MILES IN 2520 HOURS ON 7800 FLIGHTS

WASHINGTON, April 28. LINDBERGH'S air mileage now is equivalent to eight trips around the world.

The famous pilot has obtained a renewal of his transport license from the Commerce Department, and has certified that his hours in the air numbered 2520, the number of flights 7800, and the number of passengers carried also 7800. The air mileage flown was 200,000 miles.

Lindbergh is listed as pilot No. 69, holding the highest form of certificate, entitling him to operate any type of plane in any type of service. The mileage flown by Lindbergh has been exceeded by a number of other flyers, but it is probable no flyer ever has carried as many passengers. The extraordinary total of his passenger list was attained by the recent demonstration flights in Washington.

KILLED BY FALL IN NEW CIVIL COURTS BUILDING

Body of Charles C. Beals, Manufacturer's Agent, Found by Watchmen.

The body of Charles C. Beals, manufacturer's agent, with offices in the Syndicate Trust building, was found late yesterday on the concrete second floor of the unfinished Civil Courts building on Twelfth boulevard. He apparently had fallen 40 or more feet from an upper story in the uncompleted structure.

Beals was under contract to supply steel doors for the elevator shaft designed for the new building. It is believed he went into the structure alone and was making measurements on the fifth floor—which is covered only by loose planking—when he fell.

The third and fourth floors have not been installed and are outlined only by steel girders riveted to uprights. Beals, it is believed, fell from the planking on the fifth floor to the second floor concrete where he was found.

One of Beal's shoes was at his side and his other shoe was found on a steel girder on the fourth floor. It is believed he may have taken off his shoes to climb over the steel girders, on which the fifth floor planking rests. It is possible that one of his shoes may have fallen and that in reaching for it, he missed his footing.

A. H. James, superintendent of the building, told police he heard a thud inside the building about 5:30 p. m. He called two watchmen and they found the body.

Beals lived at 229 Bomparte avenue, Webster Groves, was married, and had three children. His body was identified at the morgue by friends. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

AMERICANS MAY YET BECOME RATIONAL, KEYSERLING SAYS

But Thinking Still Induces Great Fatigue, Count Decides After 4½-Month Visit.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Four months in this country has convinced Count Herman Keyserling, philosophical writer, that Americans are not yet thinkers, although in time he believes they may become rational.

Any mental exertion, he said in sailing today for Germany, induces great fatigue in Americans. That result occurs, he said, even after an intense conversation or more than a few moments of concentration before a work of art.

He considers the American Negro more creative artistically than other inhabitants of the country and looks to Southern States for the cultural development of America.

He said Chicago came nearer to being an American city than New York, which he said was no longer the center of American activity, but a great clearing house.

BURNS RETRACTS CHARGES AGAINST OIL PROSECUTOR

Expresses Regret for Jury-Tampering Accusation Following Fall-Sinclair Mistrial.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 28. — In a letter to Horace R. Lamb, special assistant to the Attorney-General, William J. Burns has withdrawn charges he made last November that Lamb had tampered with a juror in the Sinclair-Fall oil conspiracy case that ended in a mistrial. He said he had been misinformed.

The letter, dated April 19, concluded:

"I sincerely regret that I made statements to the representatives of the press on Nov. 7, 1927, at the Court House of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in which I imputed wrong-doing on your part, and I wish to withdraw them entirely."

TWO TELL STORY OF THE MURDER OF 'PIGGY' WELLER

Bandsman at 'Villa Iris' and Anonymous Witness Say Cuckoo Gangster Was Ambushed.

LOUIS MANDEL, HIS PARTNER, ARRESTED

Police Think Quarrel Over Management of Bootlegging Business Was Cause of Killing.

Villa Iris, rendezvous of the Cuckoo gang, was deserted yesterday and last night and is apt to lose all its popularity as a pleasure resort for "good people" of the underworld, due to the sudden demise Friday night of "Piggy" Weller, its proprietor, and the resultant police search for his slayers.

"Piggy," who once served five years at Jefferson City for murder, stopped eight .45-caliber bullets in a typical gangster ambush on the front porch of Villa Iris, located on Illinois Highway No. 11, three miles north of East St. Louis, and near the Madison Kennel dog track.

Reports as to the taking off of "Piggy" are somewhat vague and confused, but there is a sharp definiteness in the view among habitues of Villa Iris that its rosy day is ended.

Victim's Partner Arrested.

Police, mindful of the tip that "Piggy" had recently fallen out with his partner, Louis Mandel, another notorious Cuckoo gangster, immediately set out to find Mandel. He was arrested at 1:30 p. m. yesterday at the entrance of Fairgrounds Park, Grand boulevard and Natural Bridge avenue. When halted by detectives, Mandel was taking the fresh spring air in a Dodge automobile accompanied by a man who described himself as Frank J. Murphy, manager of the Red Top Cab Co., and gave his address as the Y. M. C. A.

Three loaded pistols and a bountiful supply of extra cartridges were in the car. Mandel and Murphy were questioned later at Headquarters. It is not expected, however, that Mandel will gossip about the three pistols or about the sudden end of his former pal, "Piggy" Weller. Detectives recalled that Mandel was acquitted of the murder of Dr. A. H. Sante of St. Louis last year; that he has been arrested many times, and that he has never talked to police. An adequate description of the affair at Villa Iris Friday evening must be sought elsewhere.

Anonymous Phone Call.

The first word of "Piggy's" death came to East St. Louis police through an anonymous telephone message at 7:15 o'clock yesterday morning. When officers arrived at Villa Iris they found "Piggy" lying on his back on the front porch. He was fully clothed and had his hat on. Eight bullets had struck him in the forehead, nose and abdomen. A spatter of bullet holes in the floor of the porch caused the conjecture that the gunmen may have used sub-machine guns as well as automatics.

In the garish morning light Villa Iris showed the revelry of the night before came to sudden, terror-frozen halt. Inside the new dance hall (there is a Government padlock on the old one which occupies a wing of the Villa) everything was as it had been at some high point when the shooting started. Thirteen liquor glasses, raw hooch still fuming in them, stood on four tables. The white sand on the floor had been trampled by running feet—not all the feet of men.

Behind the bar at one end of the room lay a pair of brass knuckles and an instrument gently dubbed "the persuader"—a lead bat wrapped neatly in a Turkish towel. Half smoked cigars lay about and here and there a cigarette had burned itself out on a scarred table edge. In the corner where Villa Iris' three-piece orchestra composed of Fatty, the drummer; Charlie Chaplin (he doubled with cornet and saxophone), and Jay, the piano player held forth, there was the wreckage where a jazz tune had broken in the crash of forty-fives. The sheet of music topmost on the piano rack was the "St. Louis Blues."

Dead Man Robbed.

The killers who did for "Piggy" or else some of the guest or employes had loitered long enough after the tragedy to strip "Piggy" of whatever could be readily carried off. They filled their pockets with cigars and cigarettes and

G. O. P. MUST MEET CORRUPTION ISSUE, BORAH DECLARES

Clean Government of Outstanding Importance, Senator Warns Republican Leaders.

"CAN'T AVOID IT, AND SHOULD NOT"

Success Depends Upon Protecting People's Interest, He Says at Hamilton Dinner at Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 28.—Warning Republican party leaders that corruption would be one of the outstanding issues in the coming presidential campaign, Senator Borah of Idaho declared here tonight that party success was dependent upon giving the people courageous leaders, clean candidates, decent organizations and a platform of principles.

"Give the voters these," he said in an address at the annual dinner of the Hamilton Club, "and they will demonstrate that the Republican party belongs to neither crooks nor cowards—refuse them these things and I leave the future to tell its own story. In such an event, I do not seek to penetrate the veil."

In delivering his first pre-convention speech, Borah, who has been indorsed for the Republican presidential nomination by the Republicans of his State, chose clean government as his topic rather than the prohibition issue, an issue which he has given notice he will carry to the country before the Kansas City convention.

Undoubtedly An Issue.

"Corruption will undoubtedly be one of the issues of this campaign," he told a large group of prominent Republicans gathered around the dinner table. "We cannot avoid it if we would and we should not avoid it if we could. There are those, of course, who will charge that the party as a party has forfeited its right to the confidence of the American people. In such an event, there will be those who will retort by hunting out the evidence to show that there are corrupt Democrats.

"The Queensboro scandal in New York and the oil scandal will take their place in campaign literature. Teapot Dome and Tammany Hall will be weighed against each other on the hustings, and the voter will be urged to decide between acute and chronic corruption.

"But I beg the Republican party to believe that the issue in which the people are interested is broader and deeper. The issue is, as they see it: Shall the people have clean government and clean politics; how is it proposed to protect the interest of the people against the domination of selfish and commercial influences in the affairs of government and in the domination of parties? The improper use of money in politics presents a problem as broad and deep and vital as representative democracy itself, and the people know it.

The People Understand.

"Partisan fencing will not satisfy them. Purity of the ballot and integrity of officials are the beginning and the end of popular government. Without these the people are disfranchised and, sooner or later, become the victims of exploitation and oppression, and this they know. The fight for clean government is a fight for free government. This the people perfectly understand.

"The issue is here. It is a notorious fact that the officials of great cities, who hold in their keeping the decency and health of millions of men and women and children, go into parnership with crime and laylessness. It is now notorious that the governors of great states, trusted executives of great and noble commonwealths, barter their state's honor for a few paltry dollars; that men high in the Federal Government consort with those who seek the nation's wealth, that venality has left its filth in the exalted precincts of Federal power.

"No Ordinary Situation."

"The issue is here. It is no ordinary situation. The future of our party turns upon how we propose to meet it. Timidity has no place in such a fight. Silence is accessory after the crime. Retention of corrupt funds while talking about clean politics is an insult to the intelligence of the voter. We need not have the least uneasiness about support from the people. They will respond to any sincere and fearless effort to lift the Republican party to the level of the demands of the hour.

"The questions and problems of

A year ago he left St. Louis to make his home in Miami. When in St. Louis he lived at the Coronado Hotel. He was unmarried.

He is survived by two brothers, E. R. and A. H. Handlan and four sisters, Mrs. Lilliam Lemp and Mrs. M. Trautz of St. Louis, Mrs. Henry Hornsby of Joplin and Mrs. Harry Bisbee of Kansas City. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

VATICAN OBJECTS TO MUSKET DRILL FOR FASCIST GIRLS

Papal Newspaper Says Not Even Pagans Put Weapons in Women's Hands.

Copyright, 1928, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (The New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

ROME, April 28.—The Osservatore Romano, organ of the Vatican, again today takes up the cudgels against the Fascisti, this time protesting against Secretary General Turati's order that girls entering next week's athletic meets shall carry muskets and participate in special shooting matches. Turati in his order predicted there would be "murmurs," but added that musketry was a symbol of all that the new girls' sports organizations stand for.

The Osservatore replies that lest its protest be lost in other murmurs, it feels it a duty to disapprove of all athletic competitions for girls in general and musket practice in particular. Even the pagans, it says, never conceived the idea of putting arms into the hands of women. In these days when Fascism is seeking old Roman symbols, the paper says, it is deplorable that this invitation should be extended to young women to "carry a dagger between their teeth."

NEW YORK WILL GREET BREMEN'S CREW TOMORROW

Flyers Return to City by Train After Visiting Grave of Floyd Bennett in Arlington Cemetery.

NEW YORK, April 28.—The German-Irish crew of the trans-Atlantic monoplane Bremen came to New York for the second time today, and prepared to rest up over Sunday for the official welcome on Monday.

A crowd of hundreds greeted Baron Gunther Ehrenfried von Huenefeld, Capt. Hermann Koehl and Maj. James Fitzmaurice as they stepped from a train at the Pennsylvania station late this afternoon. It was an orderly crowd compared with the one that met them yesterday: Police quickly escorted them to automobiles in which they rode to the Ritz Carlton Hotel.

Yesterday the flyers arrived from Canada by air and continued to Washington by train to pay honor to the memory of Floyd Bennett, who died of pneumonia while on his way to help the ocean flyers, stranded on Greenly Island. Today, having placed wreaths and flags on Bennett's grave in Arlington National Cemetery, the three men returned to be on hand for the city's official welcome on Monday.

Mayor Walker Meets Flyers.

They were met in the trainshed by Mayor Walker and his reception committee, Bernt Balchen, who commanded the relief plane after Bennett was stricken; Commander Richard E. Byrd and Clarence D. Chamberlin.

The Mayor made a brief address of welcome in the flyers' special car and Commander Byrd, who was Bennett's closest friend and flying companion, greeted them with evident feeling.

Monday the flyers will be taken down the bay on the city tug Macom and at the Battery will be given the welcome of the city.

Flyers Speak Over Radio.

At their rooms in the Ritz Carlton, a microphone had been installed and the three flyers made brief talks over the radio. All commented on the enthusiastic welcome accorded them yesterday, and Baron von Huenefeld expressed the sorrow felt by his companions and himself over the death of Floyd Bennett.

A trans-Atlantic telephone conversation between Capt. Koehl and his mother in Germany was inadvertently included in the program when Koehl stood too close to the microphone while conversing.

Mrs. Koehl and Mrs. Fitzmaurice will arrive on the liner Dresden Monday in time to share their husband's triumph at the official city reception.

The North German Lloyd Line announced tonight that the vessel would dock at 10 o'clock Monday morning. Grover Whalen, chairman of the Mayor's Reception Committee, arranged to transfer the wives of the flyers at Quarantine from the liner to the city steamer Riverside for a quick run to the Battery.

WEEK'S GAINS PUT HOOVER AND SMITH FAR IN LEAD

Mellon Sits Tight With Pennsylvania's 79 Votes but National Politicians Regard Commerce Secretary as Probable Nominee

EXECUTIVE THOUGHT TO BE ALMOST "IN"

Democratic Speculation Turning to Vice Presidency With Cordell Hull Picked as Most Likely Choice.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The week has seen a marked advance in the political fortunes of Herbert Hoover and Gov. Smith, in the view of most unbiased observers at the capital. Hoover is the probable nominee on the Republican ticket and Smith the almost certain nominee on the Democratic.

The result in Ohio, where the Secretary of Commerce bagged 31 of the 51 delegates and ran away from the field in the preference vote, took out the sag which had begun to appear in the Hoover campaign. Ranged against Hoover in that State were the combined forces backing the aspirations of Lowden, Dawes, Curtis and Watson. They controlled the party machinery in 80 of the 88 counties of the State. Hoover had the Toledo, Cleveland and Cincinnati organizations. If Hoover had been able to take but half of the delegates, he would have achieved no mean victory. As it was, he got a substantial majority, including the seven delegates at large.

Led Fess by 62,000.

Among those on the defeated slate, which still carried the name of the late Frank B. Willis, was Senator Fess, who has been chosen to deliver the keynote speech at the Kansas City convention. Some idea of the impressive character of the Hoover victory may be gained from the fact that Fess' vote was only 112,000, as compared with 174,000 for the lowest on the Hoover slate of delegates-at-large.

In addition to his success in Ohio, Hoover during the week captured the 33 instructed delegates of Michigan and ran up a commanding majority in the preference vote in Massachusetts. The 39 delegates from Massachusetts will go to the convention uninstructed, but with strong pro-Hoover leanings.

Mellon Keeps Own Counsel.

Pennsylvania also picked uninstructed delegates—a block of 79. Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who will have a large if not the controlling voice in the disposition of these delegates, is not yet on the Hoover bandwagon. The fact is one of the reasons for the cautious "if" which accompanies most of the predictions that Hoover will win.

Mellon, it will be recalled, went on record last year with an expression of preference for Hughes, and there has lately been a significant revival of the talk about Hughes. This revival is a part of the same strategy that has kept alive the draft-Coolidge movement—a strategy which has as its aim the stopping of Hoover.

The Hoover people are saying, of course, that both the President and Hughes are out of the race, and that there is no candidate to whom Mellon can turn except Hoover. They base this conclusion on the assumption that Mellon could not support any candidate friendly to the McNary-Haugen bill, in which category all the avowed opponents of Hoover belong.

All this reasoning appears sound enough, but the Hoover managers would be much happier if they had some tangible evidence of Mellon's support.

Indiana Not So Easy.

The next popular test of Hoover's strength will be in the Indiana primary of May 8. Here he will have to buck the organization strength of Senator Jim Watson, whose delegates if elected, are slated for ultimate delivery to Vice President Dawes. The going for Hoover will undoubtedly be much rougher in Indiana than in Ohio. Until Hoover's good showing in Ohio, the Watson supporters expected to win without a struggle in Indiana. The Ohio result has stra-

KELLOGG REPLIES TO FRENCH ISSUES ON ANTI-WAR PACT

Right of Self Defense Unimpaired, No Conflict With League, He Says in Address.

ADJUSTABLE TO LOCARNO TREATIES

Hopes for Universal Acceptance, Secretary Tells American Society of International Law.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The attitude of the United States on the six major considerations which France has emphasized in its correspondence and in its drafts of a treaty for the renunciation of war, recently submitted to four other major Powers, was set forth tonight by Secretary of State Kellogg in an address before the American Society of International Law.

Taking up the first of these considerations, self-defense, Kellogg said there was nothing in the American draft which restricted or impaired in any way the right of self-defense. Every nation is free at all times and, regardless of treaty provisions, he said, to defend its territory from attacks or invasions, and it alone is competent to decide whether circumstances require recourse to war in self-defense.

The covenant of the League of Nations, the second consideration, Kellogg said, imposed no affirmative primary obligation to go to war. The obligation, if any, is secondary and attaches only when deliberately accepted by a state.

There was, in his opinion, he said, no necessary inconsistency between the covenant and the idea of an unqualified renunciation of war.

On the Treaties of Locarno.

As to the violation of the treaties of Locarno, Kellogg remarked that if the parties thereto were under any positive obligations to go to war, such obligation certainly would not attach until one of the parties had resorted to war in violation of its solemn pledges thereunder. It is, therefore, obvious, he pointed out, that, if all the parties to the Locarno treaties became parties to the Multilateral anti-war treaty proposed by the United States, there would be a double assurance that the Locarno treaties would not be violated by recourse to arms. The United States is entirely willing, he said, that all parties to the Locarno treaty should become parties to a proposed anti-war treaty.

Regarding the treaties guaranteeing neutrality, Kellogg said the United States was not informed as to the precise treaties France had in mind and could not therefore discuss their provisions. It was not unreasonable to suppose, he said, that France's relatfions with those states whose neutrality she had guaranteed are sufficiently close and intimate to make it possible for her to persuade them to adhere to the anti-war treaty.

If this were done, no party to the anti-war treaty could attack the neutralized state without violating the treay and hereby automatically freeing France and the other Powers in respect to the treaty-breaking state from the obligations of the anti-war treaty. If they were attacked by a state not a party to the anti-war treaty, the latter treaty would, of course, have no bearing, and France, he said, would be as free to act under the treaties guaranteeing neutrality as if she were not a party to the anti-war treaty.

Violation an Automatic Release.

There can be no question as a matter of law, said Kellogg, in connection with relations with a treaty-breaking state, that violations of a multilateral anti-war treaty through resort to war by one party thereto would automatically release the other parties from their obligations to the treaty-breaking state.

The United States from the beginning of the discussions has hoped that the anti-war treaty should be world-wide in its application, he said. From a practical standpoint, it is clearly preferable, said Kellogg, not to postpone coming into force of an anti-war treaty until all nations of the world can agree upon the text of such a treaty and cause it to be ratified.

It is highly improbable, he said, that a form of treaty acceptable to the British, French, German, Italian and Japanese Governments as well as the United States would not be equally acceptable to most, of not all, of the other powers of the world. The United States is not willing to jeopardize the practical success of the proposal which it has made, he added, by conditioning the coming into force of the treaty upon prior universal or almost universal acceptance.

Kellogg expressed his warm appreciation of the desire of the French Foreign Minister, M. Briand, to further world peace and also of the effective co-operation which the French Ambassador here, Paul Claudel, has given in seeking to realize that ideal.

Germany Approves Kellogg Proposal to Outlaw War.

BERLIN, April 28.—Foreign Minister Stresemann has lost no time in letting the United States know that Germany fully approves of Secretary Kellogg's proposal to outlaw war.

With the approval of President von Hindenburg and the Cabinet the Foreign Minister last night handed a four-page reply to Jacob Gould Schurman, the American Ambassador. It is understood that the German note not only welcomes the American proposal, but considers it one of the greatest practical steps toward peace undertaken by any Government since the war. It also emphasizes that the project is in accord with Germany's disarmament proposals as championed at Geneva by Count von Bernstorff in behalf of the German Government.

MINING MAN REPORTED HELD BY NICARAGUANS IS SAFE

A. H. Head Returns to Puerto Cabezas—No Word of Captive. George B. Marshall.

By the Associated Press.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, April 28.—Brigade headquarters tonight reported that Albert H. Head, mining man who had been reported missing and probably in the hands of insurgent raiders for several days, has arrived safely at Puerto Cabezas (Bragman's Bluff). The report did not say where he had been. There has been no word of George B. Marshall, American captured at La Lux y San Angeles mine.

A Marine aviator returning from Puerto Cabezas flew over La Luz y Los Angeles mine yesterday and reported that the property was not occupied by the insurgents, who had raided it and who are thought to be holding American prisoners taken there.

Seven insurgents who were captured by the Nicaraguan national guardsmen yesterday near Ticuantepe and Masaya have been lodged in the pentitentiary here.

Head's home is in Denver. He was reported captured when the insurgents seized the mine of the Bonanza Mines Corporation, at the same time the La Luz y Los Angeles mine was captured.

ROBBER WITH SWOLLEN EYE CAUGHT AFTER $25 HOLDUP

Twenty minutes after a robber with one of his eyes puffy and bloodshot and wearing a gray cap had held up the Roxana filling station at 2520 North Grand avenue, getting $25, police last night arrested a man answering that description seven blocks from the scene of the robbery.

The man was identified by Horace Fields, manager of the filling station, as the robber. The man admitted the robbery, according to police, and said he was Earl Carroll, 28 years old, a tuckpointer, of 2949 Thomas street.

Carroll said he had been working steadily and that he had turned over to his wife, earlier in the evening, his weekly wage of $35. He is the father of three children. He said his eye had been injured in a brawl with several men at a street carnival on Glasgow avenue. A warrant will be applied for.

WEEK'S GAINS PUT HOOVER AND SMITH FAR IN THE LEAD

ulated them to intense activity and from now to the end the campaign will be hotly waged on both sides.

Hoover is aided by a demand among many Republican voters for a general house cleaning in Indiana. It appears unlikely that he will upset Watson, whose machine is said to be running smoothly in high gear, but a defeat, in the circumstances, will do him no material damage. A sizeable vote against the machine will be, indeed, accounted a popular victory, and in any event the curse will have been taken off a setback by the result in Ohio.

All in all, notwithstanding the continued failure of Mellon to come into camp, it has been a good week for Hoover. The prestige of Dawes, who, though not an avowed candidate, looms up in the background of the Lowden movement, was hurt by the result in Ohio. Lowden gained in Oklahoma, where an uninstructed delegation of 20 favorable to the Lowden-Curtis coalition was named by the State convention, and he picked up a number of delegates in Ohio. His successes, however, were in no way comparable to those of his chief opponent.

One Shadow on Hoover's Hopes.

The present great threat of the Hoover candidacy lies in the possibility that the delegates from the farm states at Kansas City, by declaring unalterable opposition to Hoover, will frighten the convention into the belief that his nomination would endanger party success.

The shadow of Al Smith will be over that convention. It is conceivable that the fear of Smith—for nearly all Republican leaders appear to believe that Smith has the nomination sewed up—will operate fatally against Hoover. Fear kept Lowden from being the nominee of the Republicans in 1920, and the fear in that case grew from nothing more than the payment of Lowden money to two St. Louisans who later became delegates. Lowden, as the vote for Harding showed, could have been elected. Will the fear that the "Allies" are seeking to throw into the convention result in a stampede away from Hoover? It is not likely, but it is conceivable.

How the Candidates Stand.

The writer has seen no two compilations of present delegate strength that agree, but the following figures, which have been carefully checked, are the best available:

Hoover now has 192 instructed delegates, and Lowden 153. These totals take account only of delegates that have been positively instructed. To the Hoover total should be added 63 uninstructed delegates from the States of Maine, Massachusettes and Nevada. To the Lowden total should be added 20 from Oklahoma.

Curtis has 23 delegates from Kansas; Borah 11 from Idaho; Norris 19 from Nebraska, and 16 from Wisconsin.

Smith Almost "In."

The Smith story can be quickly told. He is almost "in." Senator Reed has made headlines by his campaign tour, but his delegates are scarce. The 48 delegates from Ohio chosen during the week are pledged to Pomerene, but Smith is expected to get a good share of them when the break comes. He is generally credited with 66 of the 76 uninstructed delegates from Pennsylvania, and with the entire Massachusetts delegation of 36.

A tabulation of the results to date shows a total of 366 instructed Smith delegates. This includes the 58 from Illinois, 90 from New York, 26 from Iowa, 30 from Michigan, 24 from Minnesota and 26 from Wisconsin. It does not include the following uninstructed but pro-Smith delegates: 36 from Massachusetts, 20 from Oklahoma, 8 from Utah, 6 from Porto Rico and 66 from Pennsylvania. The total of pro-Smith column is 136.

Adding this total to that of the instructed delegates, we get a grand total of 502. This does not include the doubtful Arkansas 18, who are claimed both by Reed and Smith, or any of the 48 now held in the name of Pomerene. It does not include any of the Kansas 20, pledged to Representative Ayres, or any of the Nebraska 16 pledged to former Senator Hitchcock. Smith should get some from both those states after the favorite sons drop out.

Smith is close to the majority mark of 551. He must get 734 to win. As for the other candidates, Reed has 36 delegates from Missouri, Walsh 8 from Montana and George 28 from Georgia.

Satisfied that Smith will be the nominee, the wiseacres have turned to the picking of a vice presidential candidate. Gov. Ritchie of Maryland has been mentioned, but he is handicapped by coming from a State that would probably go for Smith anyway. Moreover, if Smith is elected, Ritchie is virtually assured of a Cabinet post, the long-range prophets slate him for the Attorney-Generalship. Gov. Donahey of Ohio is a possibility. But the best bet for the vice presidency at this writing is Representative Cordell Hull of Tennessee, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee. He is from a doubtful State, he is well known and well liked; his selection would be a compliment to the South.

G. O. P. Possibilities.

On the Republican side the names most mentioned for the vice presidential nomination are Senator Curtis of Kansas, Senator Edge of New Jersey, Gov. Fuller of Massachusetts and Assistant Attorney-General Donovan, who hails from New York and is a Catholic. The question is whether the Republicans will go East for a candidate who would help to offset the strength of Smith in that section, or will go West in an effort to hold the disaffected farmers in line. One guess at this writing is as good as another.

A notable feature of the primaries thus far held has been the light vote cast. Only in Illinois, on account of the extraordinary conditions in that State, has there been a large vote. Generally speaking, the people in the primary States appear to have left the selection of delegates largely to the political workers.

Arizona's Nine Delegates Uninstructed, but Favor Lowden.

By the Associated Press.

TUCSON, Ariz., April 28.—Arizona will send an uninstructed delegation of nine to the Republican National Convention at Kansas City, it was decided today at the State Republican convention here. All of the deelgates, however, were reported to favor Lowden.

MAYOR DIRECTS INQUIRY INTO FEES PAID KOELN

Instructs Counselor to Report if City Has Any Interest in Extra $10,000 a Year Collector Gets.

City Conselor Muench was instructed yesterday by Mayor Miller to determine what, if any, interest the city has in the charge made by William R. Schneider, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, that Collector Koeln is retaining more than $10,000 in fees annually above the statutory limit for his office.

Schneider had declared that while Koeln's income from fees is fixed at $10,000, he not only takes that amount from fees for collecting general revenue, but also takes more than that annually for collecting the State income tax.

To that charge Koeln replied that his retention of the fees was approved by the Attorney-General in 1920, while Mayor Miller said that since the income tax fees came from State funds the city was not interested in the matter. Schneider countered with a letter to Mayor Miller declaring that Koeln charges the expense of collecting the State income tax to the city and that therefore the city is vitally interested.

Mayor's Statement.

"I have referred Schneider's letter making that statement to the City Counselor," the Mayor said yesterday. "I have asked him to determine what, if any, interest the city has in the matter. If it develops that the city is losing money, then the City Counselor will be asked to give a formal opinion as to what can be done about it."

Attorney-General Gentry has refused to express an opinion without a request from city or State officials. State Auditor Thompson yesterday said he would not ask Gentry for an opinion.

"We've settled with Koeln every year according to law, and I don't see that the situation calls for a new ruling," said the State Auditor. "There's nothing to it."

Inquiry at Jefferson City by the Post-Dispatch correspondent failed to bring forth any record of an opinion by the Attorney-General in which the retention of the income tax collection fees was approved. It is possible, however, that the opinion may have been lost since the file is not closely kept.

Ruling in Parallel Case.

An opinion on a parallel case, however, was given by Attorney-General Gentry last May 28. He held that the Assessor of St. Louis might legally retain $10,000 in fees for income tax work, over and above his regular salary drawn from fees for collecting the regular taxes. In the ruling the Attorney-General held that the fees under the income tax law were additional and had nothing to do with the payment of salary as Assessor. The opinion did not go closely into the interpretation of a constitutional amendment which limits fees for executive or ministerial officers of a county or municipality to $10,000 annually.

SENATORS CLASH IN HOT DEBATE ON BOULDER DAM BILL

Ashurst Opposing and Johnson Supporting Bill Roar at Each Other on the Floor.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Charges and counter charges flew thick and fast about the Senate Chamber today as Johnson of California and Ashurst of Arizona, squared away for their battle over the swing-Johnson Boulder Dam bill. The tall Arizona Democrat, carried the attack as he shouted his protest against the bill and the argument between himself and Senator Johnson grew so heated at one stage that the presiding officer's raps for order could not be heard. Later both Senators expressed regret for their heated exchange.

Senator Ashurst recalled that he had offered an amendment to the bill to provide $30,000,000 for flood control of the Colorado River to the Imperial Valley and that Johnson who is a Republican had voted against it.

"Did you or did you not?" questioned Ashurst, pointing his finger across the aisle at Johnson.

Senators Clash.

Johnson arose and started to explain the committee action on the flood control provision, but Ashurst interrputed him with the demand: "Tell the truth; don't dodge. I don't like your dodging. You don't dare to answer that question."

Meanwhile Johnson had left his desk and while walking toward the Arizonian was trying to get in a word, but Ashurst was pounding his desk with his hand as he barked his demands for an instant answer.

When he finally could be heard, Johnson pointed a finger at Ashurst and thundered: "I don't propose to be accused by the Senator from Arizona or by anyone else of dodging an issue."

The question of flood control as proposed in the committee was put in such a way, he continued, that it was a case of being for a flood control bill alone or for the Boulder dam bill, which provides also flood control, and that he voted for the latter.

"The flood control proposal of the Senate was not made in good faith," Johnson concluded, and again Ashurst was on his feet.

"It is singularly characteristic that the Senator is trying to escape by impugning the good faith of myself," said Ashurst. "I repudiate this and say it is unworthy of the Senator from California."

Some time later as he took the floor in his own right, Ashurst expressed regret for the incident, as did Senator Johnson. The Arizonan then launched into a heated assault upon the bill, which he said would rob Arizona of its only and greatest resource, water power. He gave notice that he expected to carry on to the finish against the bill.

Charge of Filibuster Ignored.

At the outset today, Senator Johnson charged that a filibuster existed against his measure and this went unchallenged by Ashurst. The Californian then announced he would employ all rules to block the filibuster.

Ashurst's dramatic opening of the fight attracted the close attention of the Senate. During much of the time he flourished a wand which he was using to point out spots on a huge map of the Colorado River basin which hung from the wall in the rear of the chamber.

At one juncture, Ashurst emphasized a point by swinging down his long right arm with a resounding thud on a desk just behind Senator Walsh (Dem.) Montana. Senator Walsh started, and two books lying on the desk were catapulted to the floor.

With his hair dishevled and his voice growing weak, Ashurst was reminded by Senator Walsh (Dem.) Massachusetts, to "take it easy" but he replied that "Let no man have fear of my voice giving out, of my knees weakening or of my back giving away."

"I may stumble," he continued, "but my colleagues will pick me up. There are others here who are ready and there might be more if it were not for presidential candidates. Get that?"

Senator Pittman (Dem.) Nevada, consumed much time in urging his amendment which was approved in committee to permit the payment of 18¾ per cent each to Arizona and Nevada from the excess profits of revenues from power sales from the project.

MRS. M. E. COMSTOCK'S FUNERAL TO BE TOMORROW

Funeral services for Mrs. Marilla Eddy Comstock, widow of Dr. T. Griswold Comstock, who died Friday night at her home, 3401 Washington boulevard, will be held from the residence at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mrs. Comstock was 59 years old and succumbed to the infirmities of age. She had no near relatives and had lived alone except for a few servants since the death of her husband, Dr. Comstock, long prominent as a physician, was one of the founders and once was head of the St. Louis Children's Hospital.

Formerly Marilla Eddy, Mrs. Comstock was the daughter of Jabish P. and Elizabeth Eddy, who came to St. Louis from the Iowa frontier in 1845 and nine years later bought the Yeatman homestead made famous by Winston Churchill as the Brinsmade mansion of "The Crisis." It stood where 4111 North Eleventh street is today. Mrs. Comstock spent most of h[illegible]hood in that historic structure.

HEAVY SNOW FALLS IN EASTERN STATES

Many Communities Isolated, South Suffers Record Cold Wave.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 28.—Sections of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Maryland were [illegible] ing slowly tonight from one of the worst April snowstorms on record. The storm, at times a blizzard, set in yesterday afternoon and continued until this morning. Roads were blocked, wires broken down and all methods of transportation handicapped. Highways were [illegible] ing opened tonight and communication to some sections had been established over shaky wires.

Parts of Pennsylvania reported 18 inches of heavy, soggy snow. In West Virginia 22 inches of snow fell in certain districts.

For a time today virtually all telegraph and telephone communication was impossible between Pittsburg and cities and towns in the storm area. The Associated Press was accorded the assistance of Westinghouse station KDKA and amateur wireless operators in sending out its news report.

Pittsburg streets were covered with slush tonight and the weather was chilly, but not freezing. The temperature dropped slightly late in the day.

Ten Deaths in South; Snowstorm Follows Flood.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 28.—Record low temperatures and heavy snow falls followed in the wake of high winds in the South today.

The Cumberland and Shenandoah valleys in Maryland and Virginia were drifted with snow, which contrasted strangely with the pink of apple blossoms. Asheville, N. C., with the mercury at 29 and a heavy snowfall was the coldest city in the South.

The weather bureau forecast frost in the whole region as far South as Central Florida, today, threatening fruit orchards and other crops.

Four deaths in Florida in yesterday's storms had brought the total of fatalities to 10 in three states since the floods and storms began early in the week. Many persons have been injured.

Two Freighters Driven Ashore Near Baltimore in Storm.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, April 28.—The freight steamships were driven aground near the Baltimore harbor mouth during the furious storm which lashed this region last night. The Commercial Courier, bound for Galveston, was stranded at North Point, and the Mexico, bound for Los Angeles, was aground off Seven Foot Knoll. Both craft were reported today to be in no danger and were expected to be floated at the next high tide.

ARMOUR'S DEBTS TIE UP $2,000,000 OF HIS MOTHER'S

HER DEATH SHORTLY PRECEDED HIS

He Owed $18,000,000—Wife and Daughter Recently Announced Intent to Clear Obligations.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 28.—Almost $2,000,000 of the estate of Mrs. Malvina B. Armour, late packer, has been held for security of debts of her son, it was disclosed today, when an inventory of the mother's estate was filed in Probate Court.

The inventory lists an estimate of $18,000,000 as the amount of Armour's obligations, and estimates the value of his mother's estate at about $2,000,000.

Only a few days ago it was announced that the late packer's wife and his daughter, Mrs. John J. Mitchell, were preparing to draw upon their own fortunes to clear up Armour's affairs.

The packer's mother, widow of Philip D. Armour, founder of the Armour companies, died last July, a few weeks before her son's death in London. She left an extensive estate, the inventory showed, most of it in stocks and securities.

One item showed 19,617 shares of preferred stock in the North American Provision Co., par value $100 each share, "represented by certificates issued in the name of Walter S. Engle, agent of the Continental National Bank and Trust Co., as trustee holding said stock and other securities in pledge as collateral security for the payment of certain indebtedness of J. Ogden Armour, deceased, stated to amount to more than $18,000,000."

Another item listed as "rights and credits in Armour & Co." valued at $329,857, appeared with this notation: "This account contains certain items which are subject to an agreement of pledge to secure payment of certain debts and obligations of Mr. Armour, deceased."

The greater part of the remainder of the estate consists of real estate, and includes the old Armour homestead at 2115 Prairie avenue, in the heart of the once fashionable old South Side residential district.

Other smaller items listed in the inventory were $24,171 in personal property, $31,928 in other Armour & Co. credits, and about $13,000 in cash and Liberty bonds.

The financial affairs of Mr. Armour, who was considered one of the wealthiest men in the world in years ago when his holdings were worth nearly $150,000,000, became tangled up in the post-war depression, and at the time of his death found his estate reduced to a shadow of its former greatness.

TWO TELL STORY OF THE MURDER OF 'PIGGY' WELLER

The contents of the cash register. They left a dime in a box near the piano marked "tips," but perhaps that was an oversight. They then took "Piggy's" pistol.

Physical details of the murder scene told perhaps all that will be learned of "Piggy's" sudden end. Villa Iris is built in the form of an L formed by the old and the new (or unpadlocked) dance halls. A porch runs along the inside of the L attached to a wall of the new dance hall. One end joins the old dance hall and at this end are wide French doors. The angle of the bullet hiller on the floor about the body indicates that most of the shots were fired by persons standing in the old dance hall who shot through the French doors at "Piggy" as he stood on the porch in front of an adjacent door leading into the new dance hall.

There was one bullet hole in the French doors pointing inward, showing that "Piggy" must have fired one shot at his enemies as he fell.

Stories of Killing Vary.

Police and reporters who tried to solve the mystery gathered surprising stories of how "Piggy" Weller got bumped off. George Gerstnecker Jr., one of the members of the orchestra told a reporter that a tough "mob" of more than a dozen men took possession of the roadhouse. He said they forced Tody Stocker, the doorman, to lure Weller by a telephone call to the roadhouse. Then, according to Gerstnecker, they ambushed "Piggy" from the old dance hall, the porch and the yard with machine guns, automatics, revolvers, sawed-off shotguns and miscellaneous weapons. When asked by a Post-Dispatch reporter why he had waited until afternoon to tell his story, Gerstnecker blandly remarked that

Parts of Pennsylvania reported 18 inches of heavy, soggy snow. In West Virginia 22 inches of snow fell in certain districts.

For a time today virtually all telegraph and telephone communication was impossible between Pittsburg and cities and towns in the storm area. The Associated Press was accorded the assistance of Westinghouse station KDKA and amateur wireless operators in sending out its news report.

Pittsburg streets were covered with slush tonight and the weather was chilly, but not freezing. The temperature dropped slightly late in the day.

Ten Deaths in South; Snowstorm Follows Floods.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 28.—Record low temperatures and heavy snow falls followed in the wake of high winds in the South today.

The Cumberland and Shenandoah valleys in Maryland and Virginia were drifted with snow, which contrasted strangely with the pink of apple blossoms. Asheville, N. C., with the mercury at 29 and a heavy snowfall was the coldest city in the South.

The weather bureau forecasts frost in the whole region as far South as Central Florida, tonight threatening fruit orchards and other crops.

Four deaths in Florida in yesterday's storms had brought the total of fatalities to 10 in three states since the floods and storms began early in the week. Many persons have been injured.

Two Freighters Driven Aground Near Baltimore in Storm.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, April 28.—Two freight steamships were driven aground near the Baltimore harbor mouth during the furious storm which lashed this region last night. The Commercial Courier, bound for Galveston, was stranded off North Point, and the Montana, bound for Los Angeles, was aground off Seven Foot Knoll. Both craft were reported today to be in no danger and were expected to be floated at the next high tide.

ARMOUR'S DEBTS TIE UP $2,000,000 OF HIS MOTHER'S

HER DEATH SHORTLY PRECEDED HIS

He Owed $18,000,000 — Wife and Daughter Recently Announced Intent to Clear Obligations.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 28.—Almost $2,000,000 of the estate of Mrs. Malvina B. Armour, mother of J. Ogden Armour, late packer, has been pledged for security of debts of her son, it was disclosed today, when an inventory of the mother's estate was filed in Probate Court.

The inventory lists an estimate of $18,000,000 as the amount of Armour's obligations, and estimates the value of his mother's estate at about $5,000,000.

Only a few days ago it was announced that the late packer's wife and his daughter, Mrs. John J. Mitchell, were preparing to draw upon their own fortunes to clear up Armour's affairs.

The packer's mother, widow of Philip D. Armour, founder of the Armour companies, died last July, a few weeks before her son's death in London. She left an extensive estate, the inventory showed, most of it in stocks and securities.

One item showed 19,617 shares of preferred stock in the North American Provision Co., par value $100 each share, "represented by certificates issued in the name of Walter S. Engle, agent of the Continental National Bank and Trust Co., as trustee holding said stock and other securities in pledge as collateral security for the payment of certain indebtedness of J. Ogden Armour, deceased, stated to amount to more than $18,000,000."

Another item listed as "rights and credits in Armour & Co." valued at $322,857, appeared with this notation: "This account consists certain items which are subject to an agreement of pledge to secure payment of certain debts and obligations of Mr. Armour, deceased."

The greater part of the remainder of the estate consists of real estate, and includes the old Armour homestead at 2115 Prairie avenue, in the heart of the once fashionable old South Side residential district.

Other smaller items listed in the inventory were $24,171 in personal property, $31,928 in other Armour & Co. credits, and about $11,000 in Liberty and Liberty bonds.

The financial affairs of Mr. Armour, who was considered one of the wealthiest men in the world 10 years ago when his holdings were worth nearly $150,000,000, became tangled up in the post-war depression, and at the time of his death found his estate reduced to a shadow of its former greatness.

TWO TELL STORY OF THE MURDER OF 'PIGGY' WELLER

the contents of the cash register. They left a dime in a box near the piano marked "tips," but perhaps that was an oversight. They then took "Piggy's" pistol.

Physical details of the murder were told perhaps all that will be learned of "Piggy's" sudden end. Villa Iris is built in the form of an L, formed by the old and the new (or unpadlocked) dance halls. A porch runs along the inside of the L attached to a wall of the new dance hall. One end joins the old dance hall and at this end are wide French doors. The angle of the bullet holes on the door about the body indicates that most of the shots were fired by persons standing in the old dance hall who shot through the French doors at "Piggy" as he stood on the porch in front of an adjacent door leading into the new dance hall.

There was one bullet hole in the French doors pointing inward, showing that "Piggy" must have fired one shot at his enemies as he fell.

Stories of Killing Vary.

Police and reporters who tried to solve the mystery gathered surprising stories of how "Piggy" Weller got bumped off. George Gerstnecker Jr., one of the members of the orchestra, told a reporter that a tough "mob" of more than a dozen men took possession of the roadhouse. He said they forced Tony Stocker, the doorman, to lure Weller by a telephone call to the roadhouse, then, according to Gerstnecker, they ambushed "Piggy" from the old dance hall, the porch and the yard with machine guns, automatics, revolvers, sawed-off shotguns and miscellaneous weapons. When asked by a Post-Dispatch reporter why he had waited until afternoon to tell his story, Gerstnecker blandly remarked that he hadn't stopped running until then. He was still somewhat excited and under pressure the number of men he estimated were engaged in disposing of "Piggy" dropped from more than a dozen to about half a dozen.

Another informant who did not, for obvious reasons wish his name to be used, described the last minutes of "Piggy" as follows:

"The orchestra was playing 'Blame It on the Waltz' and 'St. Louis Blues' and a darned touching piece by Irving Berlin—I forget the name of it— and about eight couples were dancing or sitting around drinking. There were several men at the bar. They were drinking. Piggy was with them. He was there all the time.

"A customer asked for a drink of water. There isn't any water in Villa Iris. We didn't have any call for it. But Piggy wanted to satisfy the customer, so he told Tony Stocker, the doorman, to take a pitcher and go to a well in the yard. Tony took the pitcher and went out.

"While he was gone there came a knock at the door. Piggy unlocked the door and stepped out on the porch. Then the shooting started. I didn't stick around any longer."

Partners Quarreled.

East St. Louis police vouch for the theory that "Piggy's" demise was the outcome of his quarrel with another Cuckoo gangster over the management of the roadhouse. Villa Iris was first operated by George Halstead, but he was sent to jail for selling booze. He turned the place over to Weller and Louis Mandel, detectives say. It is their theory that Mandel and Weller fell out over the division of the profits. "Piggy" is said to have openly accused Mandel of trying to "freeze" him out and go in partnership with Halstead.

Another reported cause of the quarrel put forth by "Piggy's" friends to do him credit in his untimely end was that "Piggy" wanted to buy from one bootlegger and Mandel wanted to buy from a different bootlegger. "Piggy's" friends say he swore by the bootlegger of his choice as a seller of good hooch and would not permit the high standards maintained at Villa Iris to be sullied with inferior liquors.

But no matter what combination of events removed "Piggy" from the scene the Cuckoo "mob" is agreed on one point. Villa Iris was some swell dump, all right, all right.

Quarry Pit Claims Seized Liquor

DRY AGENTS DESTROY LIQUOR WORTH $8000

Canadian Beer and Whisky Sent From Detroit Seized When No One Claims It.

A large consignment of liquor, trailed here from Detroit several days ago, was seized by Federal prohibition agents on a platform of the Universal Car Loading & Distributing Co., Collins and Biddle street, at noon yesterday. The seizure was made under a search warrant when, after several days of waiting, claimants failed to appear.

The liquor, packed in 28 large shipping cases, comprised 5760 pints of Canadian beer and 636 pints of Mountain Ledge Canadian whisky. It was shipped by the Federal Truck Co. of Detroit to three St. Louis consignees, whose names were fictitious. They were the Johnson Printing Co., 1601 St. Louis avenue; the Atlas Sales & Service Co., 2759 South Jefferson avenue, and the St. Louis Motor Sales Co., 1801 Pine street.

With a court order to destroy the liquor, the agents hauled it in a large truck to an old quarry at St. Louis avenue and Union boulevard. The quarry is 275 feet deep and contains about 150 feet of water. To make sure of destruction, the agents smashed all the bottles before throwing them in. The bootleg value of the liquor was about $8600.

More Than 100 Mummies Found in Cave in Mexico

Apparently Had Been Bound and Shut in Living Tomb Perhaps as Long Ago as Spanish Conquest.

By the Associated Press.

CHIHUAHUA, April 28.—The mummified bodies of more than 100 men, women and children were discovered in a mountain cave near San Juan Nepomuceno where they had been imprisoned while alive.

Explorers who braved the foul air of the cavern declared that even the bodies of the women and children showed that their hands had been bound together with strings about their thumbs. The sharp contraction of the muscles of the face of one body which was removed to this city seemed to show that death had come only after intense suffering.

The searchers said they had glimpsed a second cave leading out of the first in which they thought there might be more bodies but which they were unable to explore because of the lack of oxygen.

Speculation has arisen as to who in the troubled history of Mexico had inflicted this barbarous death on so many. It thought that the victims may have been placed in their living tomb as long ago as the Spanish conquest, (1520).

Two young goatherds who were hunting for wild honey stumbled on the mummies. Some were ranged along the walls, the majority were squatting on the floor, while others were in distorted postures. The youths, frightened, fled from the cavern and carried the news to the nearest town, San Juan Nepomuceno.

The mayor organized an exploring party which found beside the bodies objects resembling knives and tomahawks as well as large bundles which may have contained clothing.

One body, perfectly preserved, was removed to the village and turned over to Deputy Juan Chavez. Later it was brought here and is on exhibition in a store window. National officials have ordered it sent to Mexico City for study in in an effort to learn if possible the time in which these people lived and the manner of their death.

Field to Baldonnel Field, Ireland, from where they hopped off, is contemplated by the three men, Capt. Koehl said.

They hope to return to Greenly Island, where they left the Bremen, and fly it to New York in two weeks, he said. After the ship has been brought to Mitchel Field and additional instruments, including a sextant, have been installed, the return flight is a possibility, Koehl said.

"Flying over the ocean is not finished," Koehl told newspaper men. "It is possible that we may fly back but many things have to be settled first. We realize that we will need more instruments to fly back and land at Baldonnel Field.

"The motor is in perfect condition but needs tuning up."

A return trip from Greenly Island, Maj. Fitzmaurice explained, was not considered because of the surrounding wilderness.

"If we started to fly back from the island and got forced down we might be a long time getting out because of desolate nature of the country up there," he said.

"We never doubted that we would land safely," Fitzmaurice told Mayor Walker. "If we had we wouldn't have started."

Program for the Bremen Flyers in Washington Wednesday.

By the Associated Press.

The program follows:

10 a. m.—Arrival by airplane and reception at Bolling Field in charge of the War Department.

11:20 a. m.—Reception to the press at Mayflower Hotel.

12, noon—Reception at the executive offices by President Coolidge.

1 p. m.—Luncheon at the White House.

10 p. m.—Reception by invitation at the Mayflower by the Assistant Secretaries for Aviation of the Departments of War, Navy and Commerce.

The flyers will start back to New York at 9 a. m., Thursday, by plane.

Grave Draped With Flags.

Baron von Huenefeld, Capt. Koehl and Maj. Fitzmaurice, visiting the grave of Floyd Bennett in Arlington National Cemetery today, left the emblems of their countries and that of the United States, all of which had been brought across the Atlantic to these shores in the Bremen.

The flag of Germany was draped across the flower banked mound by Baron von Huenefeld; the green, white and orange of the Irish Free State was placed by Maj. Fitzmaurice, and the Stars and Stripes by Maj. Howard C. Davidson, Commandant at Bolling Field, host to the flyers on their first night in this country.

Decide to Return by Train.

The pilgrimage was the sole activity of the Atlantic conquerors during their short stay in the capital. At once their spoken thoughts were of returning to New York, and the advisability of flying in the unfavorable weather was discussed by them for three hours. It was then decided to make the New York trip by train, and they left shortly after 1 o'clock.

The flyers' departure was without knowledge that both the Senate and House shortly before had passed separate bills to authorize decoration of the three flyers with the Distinguished Flying Cross by President Coolidge.

It was considered likely that the awards will have been authorized by the time the flyers return to Washington and would be conferred by the President at that time.

Floyd Bennett's Mother Ill On Train.

By the Associated Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 28.—Mrs. Henrietta Bennett, mother of Floyd Bennett, who gave his life in attempting to fly to the assistance of the crew of the Bremen, trans-Atlantic plane, at Greenly Island, was removed from a New York Central train here today because of illness and taken to her home at Lake George by motor car. The aviator's aged mother was described as prostrated by worry over the death of her son, who was buried in Arlington National Cemetery yesterday. The party was returning from the funeral when Mrs. Bennett was taken ill.

U. S. MOVIE MEN QUIT BUSINESS IN FRANCE

Action to Be Taken Tomorrow in Protest Against Import Restrictions.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 28.—American motion picture producers will stop showing their pictures for sale in France on Monday. This is regarded generally as ending for a time being the American movie business in this country unless the Government modifies its decree restricting importations.

The first consequences of the announcement is serious agitation among 8000 French employes of American motion picture companies who fear that they will be out of work soon.

The three principal motion picture theaters in Paris, which n American films almost exclusively, are expected to close as soon as they finish showing pictures already bought.

Employes of the French cinema industry are aroused fearing that many French houses being unable to show American films will also close eventually.

Will H. Hays, representing the American producers, will interview Minister of Public Instruction Herriot Monday or Tuesday. Meantime, French employes are bringing pressure for the revision or cancellation of the decree restricting foreign films.

Hays is the guest today and tomorrow of Gen. Pershing on a visit to battlefields where United States troops were engaged.

PARIS SUMMER SKIRT DESIGNS SHOW KNEE CAPS

Modistes Quit Trying to Make Dresses Longer and Give Public What it Wants.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 28.—Paris dressmakers have at last thrown up their hands and decided to give women what they want. Silhouettes for midsummer are noticeably straighter and skirts a little shorter in collections shown thus far. On the other hand, the spring shows a few months ago stressed higher waistlines and flares and longer skirts.

One big designer has definitely backed down on high waistlines because he found women were not asking for them. He carefully avoids definite waists for summer, although he accentuated them in the spring designs. Flares are changed for fullness centered in front of otherwise straight skirts.

Another designer shows skirts that are a little shorter than short skirts ever have been. Some of the models are lifted well above the kneecaps in front and come only an inch or so below the knee curve in the back.

The advance autumn models included in the midsummer shows indicate black as a favorite. Much black and white is shown in all the colections, nearly every house combining white ermine with black cloth.

MORE SNAKES FOR THE ZOO

R. Merlin Perkins and Moody Lenz, herpetologists of the Zoo, have returned from a week's collecting in the hills and rice fields of Arkansas.

Their catch, which will go to fill out the already large collection in the Reptile House and also to exchange with collectors elsewhere in return for snakes rare in this section, included 122 snakes, 52 lizards, 12 turtles and 25 salamanders.

George Steffan, 75 years old, reported to police that yesterday afternoon, when he entered his rooms on the third floor of 1209 O'Fallon street, a man confronted him, struck him with a club and robbed him of $25.

Steffan was taken to City Hospital, suffering from scalp injuries and a possible skull fracture.

STUDENT LOSES LIFE WHEN BOAT CAPSIZES

Joseph Steinlage Guest in Craft Overturned in Wash of Steamboat on Mississippi.

Joseph Steinlage, 23 years old, 2550 North Grand boulevard, a student in St. Louis University Medical School, was drowned yesterday when a motorboat in which he had asked for a ride capsized in the wash of a Mississippi steamboat.

His cousin, A. F. Steinlage, of 4620 West Florissant avenue, appeared at Police Headquarters last night and posted a reward for recovery of the body. He said that Joseph Steinlage was a speedboat enthusiast, and that he had found the student's coupe parked on East Grand avenue, near the scene of the drowning.

Edward Bleil, 16, of 4405 West Pine boulevard, was idling against the Mississippi current off East Grand avenue in a two-cylinder motorboat, which he was trying out for the Olive Cycle & Motor Co., 1045 North Grand boulevard, yesterday noon, when a young man, believed to be the medical student, waved from the bank.

"I'm interested in speedboats," he said, as Bleil eased in to the shore. "Would you mind taking me for a ride?"

He got in and Bleil made for midstream. He was heading upstream again in midchannel when a steamer passed within a few yards. His light craft was caught in the swell and overturned.

Coming to the surface, Bleil took hold of the capsized motorboat and looked around for his passenger, but saw him nowhere. After a few minutes' search, he began swimming laboriously ashore, drifting considerably and pushing the overturned boat in front of him.

ART MUSEUM ACQUIRES TWO RARE PORTRAITS

One by Andrea Solario, Milanese Painter, Other a Joost van Cleef.

Acquisition of two early sixteenth century portraits of the French Kings, Louis XII (1462-1515) and Francis I (1494-1547), has been announced by the City Art Museum directors. The first is by Andrea Solario, a Milanese painter, and the other is attributed to Joost Van Cleef of Antwerp. The portrait of Louis XII, in style, represents the dignity and refinement of the Italian renaissance, while that of Francis I is distinguished by the delicate finish and animation of Flemish painting.

The painting of Louis XII shows him at about the age of 45. He has gray-blue eyes and the flesh tones are warm and full colored. The modeling of the head is firm and plastic, after the manner of the school of Leonard da Vinci, to which Solario belonged. He is clad in hat and coat of somber hue against the luminous background of sky and landscape.

Solario a Follower of Leonardo.

Solario was born about 1460, probably at Milan, and lived until some time after the year 1514. He was one of the most celebrated followers of Leonardo, and in the delicacy of the lights and shadows with which he invested his portraits is said to approach more nearly the standards of his master than any other pupil. Solario decorated the chapel of the chateau of Gaillon in 1507-09 for the Cardinal d'Amboise, Minister of Louis XII, and it was probably about this time that the museum's portrait of the King was painted. It was formerly in the famous collection of Baron M. Lazzaroni of Paris and Rome.

The newly acquired portrait of Francis I presents the striking contrast that existed between this gallant personality and that of his predecessor, Louis XII. Smiling affably, he is every inch the knightly courtier, suave and handsome despite his over-large nose, which the artist has delineated with true Flemish veracity. His wine-colored waist is modishly slashed to allow its satin lining to show, and its sleeves are thickly studded with pearls. His bejeweled hat, set at a rakish angle, is topped by a gracefully drooping plume. He gesticulates animatedly with the right hand. All this is in full accord with the character of the man who found his chief preoccupations in hunting, tennis, jewelry and amorous intrigues.

A distinguished patron of art and letters, Francis I has been called pre-eminently the King of the Renaissance. He founded the College of France, and sent to Italy for such distinguished artists as Benvenuto Cellini and Francesco Primaticcio to enrich his palaces at Fontainebleau and elsewhere.

The painting comes from the Lancaster collection at Lisbon, where it was formerly in the possession of the Portuguese royal family. It was probably sent by Francis to Portugal upon the occasion of his marriage in 1530 to Eleanor of Austria, sister of Charles V and widow of the King of Portugal.

Few reliable details have survived of the life of the painter, Joost van Cleef, known as "Sotte Cleef" because of the insanity which overtook him before his death. He was born about 1520 at Antwerp and died about 1556. Best known for his portraits, among which is a distinguished self portrait in Windsor Castle, he was considerd the best colorist of his time. Jealousy of the rising popularity of Holbein has been assigned as the cause of his ultimate insanity.

FERGUSON TESTIFIES IN HIS OWN BEHALF

He and Baggott Will Maintain They Were Under Carleton's Domination.

The trial of Forrest Ferguson, president of the defunct Ferguson-McKinney Manufacturing Co. and Alfred Baggott, treasurer, on charges of using the mails to defraud in connection with the $3,000,000 crash of their company and affiliated concerns, will be resumed tomorrow before United States District Judge Davis.

A recess was declared yesterday after Ferguson had testified in his own defense and had offered eight character witnesses who declared that the character of both defendants is "good." Specifically, they are charged with sending out false statements of financial condition to Eastern banks to negotiate loans.

The defense of Ferguson and Baggott is to be the same as that offered at the first trial, in which the jury disagreed, namely, that they were under the domination of Murray Carleton, who died shortly after the crash of the Ferguson-McKinney, Carleton Dry Goods Co. and the other concerns under his domination.

Yesterday Ferguson told of his life as Tennessee farmer boy, and his rise through the home town general store to a clerkship in St. Louis and finally to the presidency of a large wholesale dry goods concern. Throughout his career, he testified, Carleton was his adviser.

Tomato-Potato Graft Works at Both Ends

Tomato shoots grafted on potato roots at Shaw's Garden, producing both tomatoes and potatoes. The head of the gardening school, who made the graft, is of Scotch descent.

Fruit Above Ground and Tubers Below Produced by Plant on Display at Shaw's Garden.

The thriftiest graft in history—a plant with tomatoes for fruit and potatoes for roots—has been made at Shaw's Garden and will go on exhibition today in the Floral Display House.

This unusual graft of the upper part of a tomato vine on the lower part of a potato plant was first successfully accomplished by a French gardener in 1813, and has been done several times since then. Although one would expect the potato to drain all the sustenance from the tomato, or the other way around, both tomatoes and potatoes on the plants at the garden seem to thrive, some of them being more than two inches in diameter.

It is of use only as a novelty, the garden bulletin explains. The potatoes and tomatoes so produced are healthy enough to make the plant profitable for practical gardening, were it not that the curious mixture cannot be reproduced and the graft has to be repeated for each plant.

Potato tops can be grafted on tomato roots, garden experts say. Then the potato tops go on making the food which ordinarily goes into the tubers, but since the tomato roots refuse to form them—it's against a tomato family tradition—they form above ground, in the crotches of the plant.

G. O. P. MUST MEET CORRUPTION ISSUE, BORAH DECLARES

this day which now confront the party are no less vital, no less commanding, than the questions and problems of former days. The voters, the rank and file of the party, are no less intelligent, no less devoted to wise measures and good Government. The issues are before us, the people await their presentation. The time and the occasion persist for great causes. And it is my judgment that the future of the Republican party is merely a test of leadership. The perils of political parties ordinarily lie not among the voters and the people, but are found in the organizations and among the leaders.

Parties Have Perished.

"The Federalist Party, with its galaxy of brilliant leaders, lost touch with the people, disregarded their individual rights and liberties, and it perished. The Democratic Party, with Jefferson as its leader, took its place in the administration of Government. The Whig Party was wrecked and disappeared utterly, in consequence of a contempt for the inflexible integrity of the moral code upon the part of those who in a critical hour dominated its councils. The Republican Party, with Abraham Lincoln as its leader, took it place.

"Opinions alter, times change, material issues come and go, but the moral law and the great fundamental principles of right and decency do not change—they still have their place in the purposes and plans and hearts and minds of the American people.

"I would not overlook the great questions which make for our material welfare, our tax laws, our revenue laws, economy in government. The rehabilitation of the farm, the control of our rivers, the staying of the growth of bureaucracy, arbitrary as Fascism, demoralizing as Communism, the conservation of the nation's natural wealth, coal, oil, power, all these are of great moment and of great interest to the American people.

"But I would place above them all in the platform and in the program and in the purposes of the party, as first in imminence and first in importance, a pure ballot, a clean government and the integrity of the Constitution under which we live."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., April 28.—The Ford Motor Co. and the Guardian banking interests of Detroit have formed a concern to handle the financing of Ford cars sold on the partial payment plan, it was learned today. It will be called the Universal Credit Co. It is expecter that its business will run into several hundred millions.

The organization of the Universal Credit Co. has been in charge of Ernest Kanzler, who has worked in conjunction with Henry and Edsel Ford. Kanzler will be president. He is executive vice-president of the Guardian Detroit Bank. George H. Zimmerman, formerly vice-president of the Commercial Credit Co. of Baltimore, will be vice-president actively in charge.

The credit company recently was incorporated in Delaware with a nominal capitalization. It has had offices in Detroit for several months.

ESTATE OF W. H. PRIESMEYER

William H. Priesmeyer, 75 years old, former salt merchant, who died last September, left an estate valued at $125,963, as shown by an inventory filed yesterday by George W. Lubke, attorney for the estate.

Realty was appraised at $124,000. Among other items listed are notes, accounts, bonds and chattels. In his will Priesmeyer bequeathed one-half of his estate to his widow, Mrs. Marguerite D. Priesmeyer, 2005 South Grand boulevard, and the other half to relatives.

Maybe you don't realize it, but this is a pretty big tailor-shop. If we do not make 10,000 suits in 1928 we shall be not only disappointed, but surprised.

It is volume of business that let's us price our clothes so moderately. It enables us to employ the highest skill in designing and cutting and also gives us the economy of organized factory production. There is no mystery about it. There are plain solid reasons why there is unusual quality—style — workmanship—fit and wear in Losse Suits at $50 to $70.

You can't get really good clothes for less—you can't get better clothes unless you pay 50% to 100% more money.

Who Is Joe Glick?

Did You Get a "Lucky Dime?"

Howdy, Folks, I guess you have been wondering why I have given away Thirty-Seven Thousand Dimes, and the reason I called them "Lucky Dimes."

Well, to begin with, my name Glick means "Luck"; so these dimes coming from me makes them Joe Glick "Lucky Dimes!" The reason I gave them to you was I wanted you to know me and I wanted you to have something "Lucky," for you St. Louisans have certainly been "Lucky" for me in my short residence here. I hope to have the pleasure real soon of meeting each and every one of you personally.

Now to Tell You Who I Am and What I Am Doing—

Since April 30th, 1912, I have spent all my time and attention helping folks keep Mind, Soul and Body Clean, for "Cleanliness Is Next to Godliness." In October, 1927, GLICK'S LAUNDRY, of which firm I am President, located at 5190-5192 Delmar Bl., was opened. Glick's Laundry is not an ordinary Laundry, as we cater to only those who require the FINEST of LAUNDRY WORK and who are particular as to the conditions under which their garments are handled.

For those of you who demand this Service it is available by calling

AGREEMENT NEAR ON FLOOD BILL IN HOUSE AND SENATE

Substantial Progress Reported by Conference Meeting to Discuss Coolidge's Objections.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—A start was made by House and Senate conference committees today in smoothing over differences that have arisen between the two bodies on the Mississippi River flood control bill and also to revise the legislation in an effort to meet objections raised by President Coolidge.

The House, as soon as it met today, appointed a conference committee to confer with the Senate conference group which was selected yesterday. The two committees met late in the afternoon and, after sitting for some time, adjourned with the announcement that substantial progress had been made.

Senator Jones (Rep.), Washington, author of the $325,000,000 flood measure, was chosen to head the conference group. He said an agreement had been reached that no information concerning the meetings would be given out until the conferees had completed their work. In view of that, Jones said, he could not expand his announcement that progress had been made.

The conference committee adjourned until Wednesday so Representative Reid (Rep.), Illinois, ranking member of the House group, might attend the funeral in Illinois of Martin B. Madden, who died suddenly yesterday.

The bill was taken up by the conferees for consideration of the House amendments in their order, and so much progress was made that the managers were of the opinion that only a comparatively brief time would be required Wednesday to reach a full agreement.

The memorandum prepared by the army engineers and transmitted by President Coolidge to Senator Jones was considered fully at the outset. It contained 11 specific objections of the administration to features in the measure, but five of them related to provisions which are not in conference between the two houses and consequently were disregarded.

For Hearings on Spillways.

Resolutions introduced today by Senator Frazier (Rep.), North Dakota, would authorize the Senate Commerce Committee and the House Flood Control Committee to conduct joint hearings upon the merits of the Riker Mississippi River spillway plan for control of floods in the Mississippi Valley south of Cairo, Ill.

Carroll Riker, a retired engineer, has constructed a model of his plan of flood control in the basement of the Senate office building. The project would call for construction of a spillway from Cairo to the Gulf of Mexico, 535 miles long, to be used only when the Mississippi River reached a flood stage of 20 feet at the Illinois city.

The resolutions would provide that at least three disinterested civilian engineers, selected by the American Society of Civil Engineers, be called before the committees, in addition to Major-General Jadwin, chief of army engineers, and Gen. Bixby, retired chief of army engineers, as experts upon various factors involved in the Riker plan.

Potomac River Rises Eight Feet, Floods Threatened.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, April 28.—Flood conditions threatened sections of Western Maryland along the upper Potomac River tonight as melting snow and rain completed the second day's isolation for several centers. The Potomac had risen eight feet in as many hours, reports from Hagerstown showed, with indications that it would reach a 12-fot stage before morning.

Cumberland, where 5-foot snow drifts were reported by motorists who finally broke their way through, has been cut off since early Friday night.

CHICAGO NEGRO IN FIELD FOR MADDEN'S SEAT IN CONGRESS

CHICAGO, April 28.—That a Negro may replace the late Martin Madden, as Representative for the First Congressional District of Illinois, seemed increasingly probable tonight.

The choice of a candidate whose name would replace that of Madden on the November ballot is in the hands of the Republican District Committee, the attorney for the election commissioners, held today. The district committee is composed of the ward committeemen for the five South Side wards in the first district, almost solidly populated by Negroes.

Two of the committeemen are Negroes. A third is John (Dingbat) Oberta, reputed gangster.

Madden, in a predominantly Negro district, won his twelfth renomination only after Mayor William Hale Thompson and other white leaders had waged a strenuous contest in his behalf. Now, however, Madden's defeated Negro opponent, W. L. Dawson, who was backed by Senator Deneen, has laid claim to the nomination, since the certificate of nomination had not been issued to Madden before he died.

Odd Fellows Parade in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, April 28.—Seven thousand members of the American Odd Fellowship paraded here today in celebration of the 109th anniversary of their order. Most of the lodges represented were from Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia and Kentucky. Chief among the distinguished members present were Leon S. Merrill of Orono, Me., sovereign grand sire of the international organization.

Kanazreff, former Bulgarian Consul here, and an instructor at McKinley Intermediate School. The committee started the fund with individual donations totaling $350. All money will be sent to Bulgaria through the Red Cross. Headquarters for the drive have been established at 4517 Parkview place. The telephone number is DElmar 6021.

WOMEN VOTERS CALL FOR DRY ENFORCEMENT

Mrs. Roscoe Anderson, St. Louis, Leads Fight for Demand on Parties.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 28.—The National League of Women Voters determined at the final session of its convention today to place the issues it stands for before the Democratic and Republican conventions for inclusion in their platforms.

Among these are "enforcement of prohibition," and the "lame duck" amendment of the Constitution.

Fighting every inch of the way, Mrs. Roscoe Anderson of St. Louis, chairman of the Prohibition Committee, forced through a resolution calling on the President, Secretary of the Treasury and all State and local officers to use all resources at their command in enforcing the prohibition laws.

Miss Belle Sherwin, Cleveland, was re-elected president for the third term. She was unopposed.

The delegates approved the league's active support of the Kellogg multilateral treaty to outlaw war as a national policy. In company with eight other organizations the league will seek to arouse support for the plan sponsored by the Secretary of State.

Mrs. John H. Lewis, Lynchburg, Va., an aunt of Lady Astor, the member of the British Parliament, proposed that the league's platform be placed before the two major parties. In commenting upon her motion Mrs. Lewis said: "There is one man seeking the presidency whose platform contains a wet plank. We cannot support him."

There was some opposition to a part of the resolution which read "there has been no adequate enforcement of the eighteenth amendment." A few members regarded it as a slap at the Coolidge administration and the Republican party, but it was passed decisively.

Mrs. Florence Bennett Peterson, Winnetka, Ill., discussing primaries and conventions, asserted all aspirants that have any real chance for nomination should have easy access to the ballot. "Others should be excluded, especially 'favorite sons.'".

She criticized the way convention delegations are filled, declaring most of the delegates are leading party officials and officeholders.

Officers elected today included Miss Katherine Ludington, Old Lyme, Conn.; Mrs. Roscoe Anderson, St. Louis; Miss Ruth Morgan, New York; Miss Elizabeth J. Hauser, Girard, O., and Mrs. W. W. Ramsey, Chicago, vice presidents; Mrs. Henry Steffens, Detroit, secretary, and Mrs. Frank P. Hixon, Lake Forest, Ill., treasurer.

Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Steffens were the only ones who did not serve during the past biennial.

Regional directors selected were Mrs. Herbert Knox Smith, Farmington, Conn.; Mrs. Harry Whitney, Kennett Square, Pa.; Mrs. May O. Cooper, Durham, N. C.; Mrs. Charles M. Curtis, Chicago; Miss Marguerite Wells, Minneapolis; Mrs. George Hoxie, Kansas City, and Mrs. Ernest J. Mott, San Francisco.

CASH AND CUPS OFFERED AS PRIZES FOR GARDENERS

Ninth Annual Amateur Flower Show May 19 and 20 Solicits Exhibits by the Public.

The Garden Club of St. Louis will go back to its former plan of offering cash prizes as well as other prizes for entries at the ninth annual amateur flower show, to be given at the Missouri Botanical Gardens on May 19 and 20, instead of ribbon awards alone, as it did last year. Members of the Garden Club will not compete with the public in many of the classes, and entries of familiar garden plants, annual and perennial, is urged. Premium books may be obtained at the Missouri Botanical Gardens.

A bronze medal will be awarded the exhibitor, not a member of the club, who scores the highest numbers of points in a variety of exhibits. There are special prizes, including a pewter vase and cash awards, for miniature gardens for both adults and children. Information as to making these gardens of artificial materials may be obtained from Mrs. E. J. Walsh, 4349 Westminster place.

Silver plates, vases and bowls are offered several special classes, including artistic arrangements of cut flowers, flowering shrubs, arrangements for tables and rooms, window boxes and shadow boxes. The silver prizes must be won three years in succession by the same exhibitor to become his permanent property. The winners this year will retain possession until next year's show. Prizes are offered for exhibits from children's vegetable gardens.

CIRCUIT JUDGE MILLER URGED TO RUN FOR SIDENER'S OFFICE

A movement leading to a request of former Circuit Judge Franklin Miller that he file as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Circuit Attorney, was launched informally at a meeting of lawyers in a downtown law office Friday.

The circulation of a petition among members of the bar was discussed as one means of persuading Miller to run. It was the opinion of some who attended the meeting that a strong candidate of Miller's caliber might defeat Howard Sidener, incumbent, or any other candidate who might be nominated in the Republican primary.

LEAGUE FOR HARD OF HEARING TO CONDUCT WEEK'S PROGRAM

The St. Louis League for the Hard of Hearing will conduct a program this week at its headquarters, 3817 Olive street, in observance of National Hearing Week. Hearing tests will be given at all social service centers for children of pre-school age and devices to aid the hard of hearing will be exhibited at the League's headquarters starting Tuesday.

Talks will be given each evening at 8 o'clock, the first speakers being Health Commissioner Starkloff and the Rev. Alphonse Schwitalla, S. J., of St. Louis University.

The closing program Saturday will include a lip-reading demonstration and presentation of a one-act play.

OHIO WELCOMES REED BUT WILL VOTE FOR SMITH

Cleveland and Mansfield Give Him Large Audiences but Only 1000 Attend Meeting at Akron.

By CURTIS A BETTS
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

AKRON, O., April 28.—Though Senator James A. Reed had really remarkable audiences in two of his three Ohio meetings yesterday and today, it is unlikely that he changed a fairly well-set Smith program in the State. Yet he probably increased his own chances of being the State's choice should Smith fail to win the presidential nomination in Houston. Reed's speeches drew good audiences at Mansfield and Cleveland but at Akron tonight only about 1000 persons turned out and the hall was only about one-fourth filled.

Insofar as can be ascertained in talks with Democratic politicians a large majority of the Ohio delegation of 48—probably as many as 40—will go to Smith whenever he sends the call in the convention for them. Should Smith fail to get the two-thirds vote of the convention within 10 ballots or so, and there is a drive to build up Reed's strength, the bulk of the Ohio delegates probably will go to him as readily as they went to Smith.

However, there seems to be little doubt that this is a Smith State in the matter of the delegates to the national convention. On the first ballot, and possibly up to the time that the effort is made to muster the full Smith strength in the convention, the delegation will vote for former Senator Pomerene.

When it leaves Pomerene, it will divide. Some Ohio Democrats express the opinion that the division will be much closer than 40 to 8, but the opinion of those who seem to be best informed is that the Smith strength will approach 40. The others may go to any candidate, the likelihood being that they will be used where they can do Smith most harm.

Pomerene's Hold Is Slack.

Pomerene, notwithstanding that he will have the delegation on the start, appears to have very little control over it, and even if he should have, there is no certainty to what end he would use his influence. The Reed forces are counting on the friendship of Pomerene, but the Smith forces have been flooding the State with pamphlet copies of an article highly laudatory of Smith, written by Pomerene and published in the North American Review several months ago. The pamphlet bears the title—given it by the Smith organization, not by Pomerene—"Why Democrats Favor Smith." It contains two articles, one by Pomerene and one by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. The title of the Pomerene article is "On Record and Principle," and that of Mrs. Roosevelt, "As a Practical Idealist." In Cleveland they are being circulated by Joseph C. Breitenstein, former United States District Attorney, who, however, was quite active in entertaining Reed.

Pomerene in his article did not definitely commit himself to Smith but gave a long argument why Democrats should not oppose him.

It is not unlikely that Pomerene actually favors Reed's nomination, and that his Smith article was a little practical politics—a bid for personal support from the Smith following in Ohio.

When Reed entered the State there was little if any organized or even unorganized support for him. There was Smith and anti-Smith sentiment. Reed's speeches seem to have developed a real sentiment for him, that is after the delegates are through voting for Smith. And that is about all he can expect.

Two Good Crowds in Three.

He spoke last night to a big audience in Mansfield, as many as could get into the hall. At noon today he addressed the City Club in Cleveland. Every bit of space in the ballroom of the Hollenden Hotel was occupied, the balconies were crowded and the doorways packed. It was said to have been the largest City Club meeting for several years. Nearly 1500 persons heard his speech. But tonight's meeting at Akron was a disappointment.

The Senator will join Mrs. Reed in Columbus, O., today, drive with her to Washington, and expects to be in his seat in the Senate until the adjournment of Congress. He expressed himself as entirely satisfied with the political situation as touching his candidacy. He said that official matters required his attention in Washington and that he doubted that he would be able to make any more political speeches until adjournment.

Reed Revisits Birthplace After 64 Years' Absence.

MANSFIELD, O., April 28.—For the first time since 1864, when his father and mother moved from their Ohio farm in Iowa, Senator James A. Reed of Missouri yesterday visited his birthplace three miles from Mansfield, and saw the early farm home of his parents, of which he had but a shadowy memory.

The Senator looked in vain for the heavy woods which he said he remembered at the edge of the farm. The house was there, added to somewhat, and the barn was there, with its huge oak beams 56 feet long, but that, also, had been added to. The old home proved to be a rather substantial white frame house, situated on a hill a good distance back from the highway. The road known a half century ago as the West Market road had in recent years become the Harding highway, and the railroad station a quarter of a mile from the house is named Harding.

SENATE EXPECTED TO DECIDE QUICKLY ON TAX REDUCTION

Surrender of Coolidge Group to Demands for Repeal of Auto Levy Removes Main Difference

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—With the issue over tax reduction well drawn between Republicans and Democrats, a quick decision is expected in the Senate next week when the $203,000,000 measure is brought up for consideration.

Surrender of the administration group to demands for repeal of the 3 per cent automobile tax, which both President Coolidge and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon had urged strongly should be retained, has wiped out one of the main fights in prospect on the bill.

Decision of Senate Republicans on the Finance Committee to repeal the automobile tax, as also was voted by the House, is regretted by President Coolidge. He feels that the 3 per cent levy offered a means for the automobile industry and users to meet in part the large appropriations for highway construction and improvements.

However, Mr. Coolidge is disposed to favor the bill, inasmuch as it comes within range of the $200,000,000 limitation set by the Treasury. The House voted a $290,000,000 cut. The President realizes it is the province of Congress to determine how revenues should be raised and lowered, and his chief concern was that the budget should balance.

With Democrats united for repeal of the automobile tax and many of their own party in favor of it, Republican leaders in the Senate decided to yield to the inevitable and grant that reduction in the first instance, in order to make up additional revenue from other sources.

The corporation tax was made the vehicle for raising the $66,000,000 involved in the automobile repeal. As a result, Senate Republicans voted to slash the corporation levy from 13½ per cent to only 12½ per cent. The House voted a reduction to 11¼ per cent, and Senate Democrats asked for a 11 per cent rate.

The fight on the Senate floor will of victory on that issue also. revolve about this tax, therefore, with the minority members, under Senator Simmons of North Carolina, fighting for an 11 per cent rate.

Chairman Smoot of the Finance Committee, who drafted the Republican program, however, is confident the bill in its present shape will win united support of his party, which is necessary to defeat the Democrats, who have almost equal strength.

A non-partisan vow is in prospect on repeal of the inheritance tax, but those opposing that plank of Mellon's tax plan are confident

POLICE ASKED TO CONTRIBUTE TO PENSION BILL CAMPAIGN

Officers Urged to Give 5 Per Cent of Month's Salary in Support of Proposal.

Contributions amounting to 5 per cent of a month's salary have been requested of the 1600 policemen on the St. Louis force for the $60,000 fund to be raised by the department and citizens in support of a police pension bill, to be presented through initiative at the November election.

The request was made by Chief of Police Gerk yesterday, who suggested that members of the department pay half their contribution next Tuesday and the rest on June 1. Patrolmen are paid $180 a month.

Initiative petitions, which must be completed by July, will be circulated by a Citizens' Police Pension Committee, members of which will also aid in the campaign for the fund. The proposed pension bill is the same which failed to pass the last Legislature. St. Louis policemen have a pension system operated by voluntary assessment now.

The ship in which they traveled is the first of the Curtiss-Robertson planes manufactured in St. Louis. On the flight Lindbergh was escorted by William B. Robertson, of St. Louis, who flew the trans-Atlantic flyer's Ryan monoplane. Robertson will be a passenger in the Robin tomorrow and the Ryan will be left in Washington.

CITY TO CLOSE OLD ALAMAC FOR NON-PAYMENT OF RENT

St. Louis Hotel (Its Present Name) Is on Part of Site Condemned for Plaza.

The St. Louis Hotel, formerly the Alamac, Fourteenth and Chestnut streets, is to be closed by police tomorrow for non-payment of rent and failure of the management to obtain a license.

The property, part of the Memorial Plaza site, was obtained by the city by condemnation proceedings, it being agreed that the St. Louis Hotel & Investment Co., the operating company, should pay rent to the city until the building should be torn down. The decision to close the hotel was made yesterday after the Comptroller's office and License Collector Chapman had reported their inability to collect either rent or license fee.

The Building Commissioner's office also has a complaint against the hotel, inspectors reporting that fire exits are locked and fire extinguishers are not refilled.

Corns Now Needless

Prove It Overnight!

Why keep "treating" corns, when the first drop of Freezone stops all sensation of pain, and a few drops soon end the corn?

The most painful corn, even one sensitive to touch of stocking, can't throb ten seconds after Freezone comes in contact. All that's left to do, is lift the corn right off and it's gone. Isn't that better than surgery?

Feet that are "sights" from corns can grow back to normal, unblemished condition through the use of Freezone. Meantime, no pain—none at all—and no awkward pads or plasters to cause shoes to pinch and cultivate corns in other places.

The Freezone process is scientific and certain. The hardest corn that ever formed can't resist it—nor the soft corns between the toes where nothing has ever helped. A tiny bottle of Freezone copes with the worst condition of corns. Freezone has made it folly to have any corns at all, for any length of time.

For your own comfort, investigate Freezone. Every druggist has it, and the cost is a few cents!

Married Woman Eats Only Baby Food

"For 3 years I ate only baby food, everything else caused stomach gas. Now, thanks to Adlerika, I eat everything and enjoy life."—Mrs. M. Gunn.

The simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, saline, etc., (known as Adlerika), has a most surprising DOUBLE action. First, it acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel (most medicines act on lower bowel only) and removes foul matter that often poisoned the system for months. Second, Adlerika clears all GAS and sourness from stomach and bowels, bringing INSTANT relief from stomach trouble. And in addition, Adlerika removes metabolic poisons which cause neuritis, rheumatism, etc.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, writes: "Adlerika, in addition to its intestinal cleansing, checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and bacilli."

Dr. J. Weaver: "In my 50 years' practice, I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."

J. E. Puckett: "After using Adlerika, I feel better than for 20 years. Awful impurities were eliminated."

It will astonish you the great amounts of poisonous matter Adlerika brings out—matter you would never believe was in your system. In chronic constipation, gas bloating, sour stomach and sick headache, just ONE spoonful Adlerika brings wonderful relief. At leading druggists. Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and other druggists.

Bremen Flyers Pay Tribute To Floyd Bennett and Other Heroes of Aviation History

Baron von Huenefeld Describes Visit to Arlington Cemetery, After Tumultuous Welcome in New York.

By BARON VON HUENEFELD, Commander of the German Junkers Airplane, Brement, on Her Trans-Atlantic Flight.

(Copyright, 1928.)

ELEVENTH INSTALLMENT.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—I hardly know what to write today. So much has taken place. My thoughts are—what do you say in English—, a, jumbled.

Uppermost in mind, as I look back over the last 48 hours, is our visit to the beautiful Arlington Cemetery—Koehl, Fitzmaurice and myself—to the graves of Floyd Bennett, Lieut. Staunton H. Wooster and Commander Noel Davis. We sprinkled flowers over where they lay, and said a little prayer for them. It was the most we could do, and it was the least.

Aviation owes a debt to Wooster and Davis that flowers and prayers, alone, cannot pay. They were pioneers in experimentation in trans-Atlantic flights, even though they died before they could attempt their goal, in the plane named after your great American Legion.

Two Flyers Set Example.

They had a psychological effect upon other flyers. There is in the human mind a stubbornness which even death cannot conquer. Though some may die in an attempt, there always are others who will spring up to try again. And eventually one will succeed and others will do likewise.

And that is the debt humanity owes to Wooster and Davis. They were pioneers who failed. But the thought they left behind them was picked up by others, who succeeded. As I say, a prayer and a few flowers was little enough to honor them with. But it was all we had.

Bennett's grave lay nearby, and we went there next. More flowers and another little prayer. He gave his life in an effort to rescue us, and God knows we owed him more than we gave him. But we had no more that we could pay, except what we carried away from Arlington in our minds. And that was a thought which I will keep to myself. It is too sacred to put in words.

Impressed by Capitol.

The next thought most outstanding in my mind is the Capitol building here in Washington. To me it represents, in its vastness and graceful lines, the United States. Its vastness means the greatness of this Nation—the power and the might of you. And its gracefulness means its hospitality, the like of which I never knew except, of course, in the Fatherland.

This is my second visit to this country. I was here two years ago, but then I came unheralded and left that way. I am still somewhat puzled over the ovations which are being showered upon us now. Ours was more a lucky stroke, I feel, than anything else. Others might have done the same—Nungesser and Coli, for example—had they had the same luck. And others will do the same later. So why should we receive such honors? It is as I said about the Capitol building—your hospitality.

Back to Civilization.

Our stay in New York City was brief, but it was crowded. Alighting at Curtiss field, we were surrounded by a throng which all but rushed us off our feet. And similar throngs followed us from the field to the station. I'll never forget the shouting and the booming of the photographers' flashlights. Of course we were half dead from lack of sleep and rest. But that awoke us. We realized that we were back in real civilization and safe. The joy of it was more than words can tell.

But we were thinking of poor Bennett and of our haste to get to Washington and pay him our last respects. And so we were glad when we finally reached our train and rolled away from the bedlam and the shouts and the boom-booming of the cameras.

On the train to Washington, we agreed that we would preserve a silence. It was fitting that we do so, in view of our mission. People stormed our car at every stop, shouting, singing and rapping on our windows. It is difficult to understand such enthusiasm as the American people have. I hope they will understand why we could not answer them. I hope they will forgive our drawn shades, closed doors and our silence. Our trip was unofficial and on a mission of mourning.

Hopes to See Country.

I don't know what we will do from now on. Our plans are in the hands of the Reception Committee in New York. But whatever that committee plans for us, I know that it will be a delight to us. And, after New York, I hope to see something else of this great country.

Perhaps, when thaws begin in the Northland, we will go back and get the Bremen. I won't say that we will fly her back to the Fatherland. That good ship is probably doomed to rust and decay, where she landed. But I would like her as a trophy. I would like to see her safely landed in some German museum. And if I am as lucky with that aim as I was in getting across the Atlantic by air, then perhaps she will be there some day.

To Be Continued.

WHY BUILD RAILROADS, STEAMSHIPS, BRIDGES, TUNNELS, AIRLINES BETWEEN NATIONS TO CHEAPEN COMMUNICATION AND THEN PUT ON A TARIFF TO MAKE IT DEARER AGAIN?

Abolish steam, break railroads, spread mud over the newly built turnpikes and roads and hinder trade in a thousand ways. All would have the same result as "protection"; all would be the same in principle. If universally employed it would block human progress. REOPENS ISSUE OF U. S. ADHESION TO WORLD COURT

John Bassett Moore, by Resignation, Again Focuses Attention on Conditions Laid Down.

By Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1928, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (The New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

GENEVA, April 28.—The resignation of John Bassett Moore, Judge of the Permanent Court of International Justice, was received by Secretary-General Sir Eric Drummond of the League of Nations today.

Moore resigned, it was announced, to devote himself to the 75-volume work on codification of international law on which he has been working 42 years.

His resignation is not surprise to League circles because of the antagonism which have developed among some Judges of the Court. Moore is generally credited with having written the Senate reservations regarding the United States application for membership, which were rejected by League members. It has been said that he intentionally framed the reservations in the knowledge that they would not be acceptable.

Elected to the Court by the League in 1921 for a nine-year term, Moore's place will be filled only until Dec. 31, 1930, when the entire membership of the Court will be selected again by the League. The League probably will choose an American to fill the unexpired term and the men most prominently mentioned are Charles Evans Hughes, former Attorney-General Wickersham, Chief Justice Taft and former Justice Clarke, who retired from the Supreme Court to devote his life to the cause of peace.

League Circles Consider U. S. Position Is Still Under Negotiation.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Switzerland, April 28.—John Bassett Moore's resignation has focused attention on the initiative recently launched by Senator Frederick H. Gillette of Massachusetts to reopen the question of American adherence, which was dropped after the World Court members failed to accept the conditions which the United States Senate attached to American membership.

In League circles the view expressed tonight was that the question of American adherence is still in the stage of negotiation, but that the next move must come from the United States.

The selection of a successor will be made by the next Council of the League of Nations and the Assembly, both voting separately. Under the constitution of the Court, American nominations must be made by the American group of the old Hague Court of Arbitration, which includes Moore, Root, Judge Gray and Oscar Straus.

Moore has been a member of the Hague Court of Arbitration since 1913. He has written extensively on the question of international law and on American political history.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY WANTS SUSTAINING MEMBERS

Opens Campaign for Supporters at $25 a Year; Offers $1000 Garden Prize.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society has opened a campaign for sustaining members at $25 a year to raise funds to enlarge the work of the society which was recently organized, and has already obtained more than 500 annual members at $2 a year. Office of the society is 821 Central National Bank Building. Eugene H. Angert is president.

The society is offering $1000 in prizes in a best garden contest this summer. For each district prize in over 20 districts $25 will be given, and there will be two city prizes of $50 and $100 for the outstanding gardens of all districts. Anyone with an amateur garden on the average city lot is eligible for the prizes, and application should be made for entry blanks at the society's offices. Gardens will be visited three times during the summer by judges, and the awards made in the early fall.

Chairmen of various districts have been appointed, who will confer with amateur gardeners who wish to enter the contest. They are: District 1, Fred J. Effers, 1118 Dover place; District 3, Miss Florence Moller, 6148 Simpson avenue; 4, J. P. O'Gorman, 6452 Nashville avenue; 5, Miss Louise Winston, 5539 Pershing avenue; 6, A. B. Bluhm, 4968 Spalding avenue; 9, Thomas Longman, 5467 Maple avenue; 10, W. F. Weber, 4119 Lexington avenue; 14, C. L. Casserly, 4745 Lewis place; 12, Fred Mueller, Washington University; 14, Mrs. Frank Braun, 4972 Tholozan avenue; 16, L. Baumann, 4247 Magnolia avenue; 17, C. W. Allen, 2606 South Grand boulevard; 23, H. G. Berning, 2722 La Salle street.

A public meeting of the society will be held next Friday evening at the Washington University Medical School, 602 South Euclid avenue, when there will be a round table discussion of amateur garden problems.

Beginning the 2d Week of Smith's PRICE-SMASHING 40th Anniversary Sale

In Appreciation

I desire personally to voice my appreciation to the many friends of the SMITH FURNITURE STORES for the way in which they responded to our Fortieth Anniversary Sale. It proves beyond a doubt that our methods of doing business thruout the years have been correct and appreciated by those who realize fully what Business Integrity means. So successful was our first week that we were completely sold out of many items long before the week was over; therefore we are carrying our sale into another week with stocks replenished. We have done this to show our appreciation and because we want all to benefit in our great celebration.

Aaron Smith

Our stocks have been replenished and we have added even more breath-taking bargains to our displays. Last week we were forced to turn folks away because the values were so exceptional that they were sold early in the week. This week we have taken every item in the house, slashed its price to cost or less than cost and are hoping that with the new merchandise that has arrived in record time in response to our S. O. S. we will have enough to go 'round. Don't miss your chance to benefit by this record-breaking sale.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MADDEN TODAY

Services to Be in House Chamber—Interment at Hinsdale, Ill., Tomorrow

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Funeral services for Congressman Martin B. Madden of Illinois, who died yesterday, will be held tomorrow at noon in the House chamber.

President Coolidge, Vice President Dawes, Justices of the Supreme Court, the foreign diplomats in the capital, and Mr. Madden's colleagues will be among those who will be present. The services will be conducted by the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, the chaplain. Two addresses will be delivered, one by Vice President Dawes and the other by Representative Joseph W. Byrnes of Tennessee, the ranking Democrat on the Appropriations Committee, both personal friends of Mr. Madden. The male quartette of the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church of Washington will sing two hymns.

While the services are being conducted the body will lie in state immediately in front of the Speaker's rostrum. After the services it will be placed on a train at 2 p. m. for Hinsdale, Ill., Mr. Madden's home on the outskirts of Chicago.

The services there will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial will be in the Cass Cemetery, nearby.

Besides the family the funeral party will include the 26 members of the Illinois Congressional delegation and the 24 members of the House Appropriations Committee. Two other members, Walter H. Newton of Minnesota and W. W. Griest of Pennsylvania, will be there, the latter two at the request of Mr. Madden's widow.

The House, today, after a 30-minute session to transact urgent business only, adjourned as a mark of respect to Mr. Madden.

EUGENE H. ANGERT SUES OIL BURNER CONCERN FOR $6153

Attorney Alleges Soot and Fumes Filled House, Necessitating Opening of Windows.

Eugene H. Angert, attorney, sued Merrell & Co., 4424 Olive street, for $6153.02 yesterday, in connection with the installation of oil burners in his residence at Clayton and Kent roads, St. Louis County, last November.

The oil burners and tank cost $1101.50 and was guaranteed to heat the house satisfactorily, but proved unfit, inadequate and inefficient, Angert alleges. He says smoke, soot and oil fumes permeated the residence, stifling the occupants and making it necessary to open doors and windows regardless of the cold. Walls, curtains, tapestries, furnishings and decorations were damaged, he claims. The amount sued for includes $5000 damages, the cost of the installation, and other expenses.

The Merrell Company stated that the soot and smoke was not due to the operation of their burners but to the obsolete hot air furnaces in which the burners were installed.

$149 STOLEN FROM SENIOR CLASS AT CLEVELAND HIGH

Vault Broken Open; Burglar Thought to Have Entered During Entertainment.

The senior class at Cleveland High School held an entertainment in the school building, 4253 Virginia avenue, Friday night, the party breaking up about 11 o'clock. When the janitor opened the building at 7 a. m. yesterday he found a door leading from the office to a vault had been removed from its hinges and the vault door broken open by burglars who had escaped with $149, the property of the senior class. Of the amount, $34 represented a fund for senior rings and the balance collections for various other funds.

The damage done the vault amounted to $120, but no damage to outside doors or windows was found. This led police to believe the burglar entered during the entertainment and hid in the office until the building had been closed.

BOY SERIOUSLY HURT TRYING TO HOP MOVING MOTOR TRUCK

John, 10-year-old son of William Murphy, 1527 North Leffingwell avenue, attempted to jump aboard a moving motor truck in front of 2716 Howard street yesterday afternoon, fell and was seriously injured. A rear wheel passed over him. He was taken to city hospital, suffering from a possible fracture of the spine and possible rib fractures.

The truck was driven by Frederick Wehking, 6450 Myrtle avenue, St. Louis County.

BUS COMPANY GETS PERMIT

JEFFERSON CITY, April 28.—A certificate of convenience and public necessity was granted to the Egyptian Transportation Co., a motor bus company, with headquarters at Marion, Ill., today, by the Missouri Public Service Commission, for operation of its busses between the bus terminal in St. Louis and the Missouri-Illinois boundary line on the Free Bridge. The permit applies to interstate business and does not authorize handling local traffic in St. Louis.

The Commission stated in the order that it was not to be construed as depriving the city of the right to control use of its streets or to regulate operation of busses within the city limits.

TO LAY CAR TRACKS ON FRANKLIN AVENUE

Public Service Company Agrees to Route Eastbound Wellston Cars Over That Line.

Use of Franklin avenue for eastbound Wellston cars and Morgan street westbound, with provision for double tracks on Franklin avenue if traffic ultimately demands that street cars be kept off Morgan street, was agreed upon by the Public Service Co. and City Plan officials in a conference called yesterday by President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service.

The conference was held in the expectation that the city would call for bids June 5 on $150,000 repaving of Franklin avenue between Third and High streets. Pavement is to be granite blocks. The street has been widened from 45 to 51 feet between Ninth and High streets and from 30 to 56 feet east of High street.

Harlan Bartholomew, engineer of the City Plan Commission, explained to the officials that the Commission had marked out Morgan street for widening as an automobile traffic artery, and preferred that Wellston cars be routed both east and west on Franklin avenue. They now use Franklin avenue west and Morgan street east.

Public Service Company engineers replied that their object was to tap the business district as conveniently as possible. They said the company was considering routing Page cars east over the Hodiamont line, to avoid congestion on Grand boulevard and Washington avenue, and west on Morgan street. Bartholomew suggested Lucas avenue for westbound tracks, but it was objected that Lucas has only a 36-foot roadway and is choked by the trucks of large wholesale houses.

The outcome, since the Morgan street improvement will not be begun for two years, was that the Public Service Co. is to lay eastbound tracks on Franklin while paving is in progress, leave the street in condition for westbound tracks, and continue to use Morgan street until the widening project there is begun.

Notice that snow lies longer on Carey Cork-Insulated Shingles. That's because practically no heat comes through the roof to melt it.

Cork up your roof!
—and save that 60% heat leakage

YOUR house leaks heat—every house does! Through window frames, up chimneys, around doors. But authorities all agree that 60 per cent of this heat leakage goes straight up through the roof. Obviously, the thing to do is to lessen the leakage.

That's just what the new Carey Cork-Insulated Shingle will do. It's a heat-insulator and roof covering in one—it will keep your house warmer in winter as well as cooler in summer. Besides, this remarkable shingle is fire-retardant, water-repelling and extremely durable—proof against all weather. And being 50 per cent thicker than ordinary shingles, it provides a deep, striking shadow-line that's a joy to the eye.

Your architect knows and approves the new Carey Cork-Insulated Shingle; every good builder and contractor will recommend them with enthusiasm. We have them—in handsome shades of Red, Blue-Black, Silver-Green and the colorful Autumn Blend. Stop in and let us show you samples.

UNION CHIEFS BACK LOCAL STREET CAR MEN

International Officers Say Wage Demand Is Justified; Workers Will Not Recede.

High officers of the street car men's international union, headed by President W. D. Mahon, conferred yesterday in St. Louis with officers of the local union concerning their wage controversy with the Public Service Company and approved the steps thus far taken by the union.

As has been told, the local union demanded an increase of 5 cents an hour in wages and the company countered with a suggestion of a decrease of about 9 per cent, which the union employes in a mass meeting rejected. Further meetings to thresh out the matter will be held. The company is threatening to terminate the union contract and put the reduced wage in effect, and the union has given notice it will oppose this action.

The officers who are here to advise the local car men, and who will leave for Chicago tonight, are President Mahon, Vice President W. B. Fitzgerald, both of Detroit, headquarters of the car men's international union; L. D. Bland, international treasurer and editor of the Union Leader of Chicago; William Quinlan, president of Chicago Local Union No. 241, and William Taver, secretary of that local.

The local union has been advised in its conferences with the company by Edward J. McMorrow of the international's staff, who will remain in St. Louis until the wage question is settled. Neither he nor the international officers would discuss steps to be taken by the local union, except to remark that the men's demand for an increase from 67 to 72 cents an hour as a maximum wage was justified and that they would not recede from the position they had taken.

SMITH, REED AND WALSH FACE TEST IN CALIFORNIA

WASHINGTON, April 28. — The California primaries next Tuesday will bring into competition at the polls three of the Democratic presidential candidates—Smith of New York, Reed of Missouri and Walsh of Montana.

All three have delegate slates. Reed is the only one of the three who went into the State to campaign. The McAdoo forces have rallied to Walsh's aid. Heading the Smith delegate list is former Senator Phelan, who in 1924 nominated McAdoo at the New York convention. California is Hoover's home State. He has no opposition and will walk off with 29 delegates.

COTTON PRICES $20 A BALE OVER LOW OF WINTER

Unfavorable Weather for New Crop Starts May Contracts Up to 21.45c on New York Market.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 28.—A continuance of unfavorable weather conditions for the new crop start, was reflected by incleasing activity and further advances in the cotton market here during the past week. Prices for all months made new high ground for the present movement, with May contracts selling up to 21.45c during Friday's trading, while October advanced to 21.09c, or more than 4 cents a pound above the low levels touched on the declines of last winter. That would be $20 a bale.

Attention has been monopolized by the new crop outlook, and there has been little or no discussion of matters pertaining to distribution. It would seem, consequently, that the trade has been interpreting the daily weather and crop news from the standpoint that the world will probably need an American crop of 15½ million bales for next year, and that unless there is a greater increase in acreage than generally anticipated, a good yield per acre will be necessary.

There would still seem to be plenty of time to plant or replant were necessary if weather conditions are favorable during May, but judging from much of this week's comment, hope of an early start for the crop has been practically eliminated by the weather conditions of this month in some Southern parts of the belt, at least, while there is considerable uncertainty as to the reactions of the bad weather on the acreage.

PRICE CHANGES SMALL IN WEEK-END COTTON TRADE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 28.—A somewhat reactionary tendency was apparent in the cotton market today, coupled with continued nervousness over weather and crop conditions, and early declines were followed by rallies. Realizing continued, however, and after selling up from 20.96c to 21.12c for July, prices eased off again, that delivery closing at 20.99c. The general market closed steady at net declines of 1 to 7 points or 20 to 29 points below the high prices touched on the advance Friday.

The market opened easy at a decline of 4 to 11 points on prospects of better weather over the week-end, and relatively easy Liverpool cables. May sold off quickly to 21.12c and October to 20.79c, net declines of 10 to 15 points, under week-end profit taking, while there may have been a little selling on a theory that the advances of the past several days carried the market to extremes. Weather east for light to heavy frost in parts of the eastern and central belts tonight brought in a little buying, and demand became more active on publication of the official weather details showing considerable rain in some of the eastern belt districts. Prices rallied rather sharply, May selling up to 21.34c and October to 21c, or about 4 to 10 points above yesterday's closing quotations. This bulge met more resisting and prices eased again, the close showing reactions of 3 to 14 points from the best. The weekly weather forecast for mostly fair weather, except for a period of showers during the middle of the week, and again toward the end of the period, with higher temperatures, may have promoted some of the profit taking in late trading.

Unfavorable reports concerning the necessity of replanting as a result of the recent unfavorable weather conditions and complaining of wet soil in South continued to reach the trade and were no doubt reflected by buying on the declines.

Private cable said a fair amount of trade calling and some buying by American interests had absorbed more or less general liquidation at the decline in Liverpool, but that business in cotton cloths and yarns was slow in developing.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was 89,894 bales, against 138,730 last year.

ASH WHEAT PRICE P 37C IN MONTH; O. 2 RED, $2.15

tures 25 Cents Higher—Cash Wheat 82c Above Year Ago—Unfavorable Weather for Crop During Winter in Parts of Country.

Wheat prices, both spot and for future delivery recorded further sharp advances on the St. Louis Merchants' Exchange the past week, largely under the influence of bullish comment on unfavorable weather conditions in the Southwest and spring wheat belt.

Futures rose 10 to 11 cents a bushel and spot wheat 7c. The latter carried futures to 24 to 25 cents above prices prevailing March 30, or to $1.67 for May and $1.44½ for July wheat. No. 2 red wheat at $2.15 a bushel was 37 cents a bushel over level prevailing March 30.

Spot or cash wheat selling at $2.15 is 82 cents a bushel higher than the prevailing price at this time a year ago. May and July wheat are 31 to 34c above 1927 level.

The rise started with the low April condition estimates on winter wheat due to poor development west of Mississippi River during winter on account of unfavorable weather.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE.
April 28.—Wheat had a further sharp advance on the local market today. Corn also gained.

Final prices were about 3c net higher. Oats again was largely a weather market.

In the local cash grain market Saturday, No. 2 red wheat was 1c to 2c higher. There was some shipping demand, but there was nothing better than No. 3 grade that could be shipped out. Hard wheat was up 2@3c. Light-colored low-protein types were in demand. As much as 9½c above the Chicago May price was paid for cars suitable for blending. Average run Nebraska No. 1 hard sold late at $1.72 and Iowa No. 2 at $1.71. Corn was steady to 1c lower. Receipts were freer. Supplies were pretty well cleaned up. Some, however, did not reach tables. Mills, elevators and industries were good buyers. Oats were slower. Demand was only fair and part offerings were carried over. Shippers took most of part that sold.

Early wheat opened fractionally higher and had 2c range in the early period. September ranged up more than a cent. Later wheat closed ¾@1 higher on May and ½@¾ up on October. Winnipeg early was 1@¼ lower on May and ¾@1 on July. Kansas was fractionally higher early.

There was report of dusty storms in parts of Nebraska. July wheat was 1@1½c over 2c higher early.

Second May wheat opened at $1.65, July at $1.51½ and September wheat at $1.45.

Local wheat receipts, which were 91,000 bushels, compared with 100,800 a week ago and 20,400 a year ago, included 42 cars local and 23 through. Receipts, which were 203,000 bushels, compared with 77,000 a week ago and 200 a year ago, included 132 cars and 18 through. Oats receipts were 64,000 bushels, compared with 200 a week ago, and 84,000 a year ago, included 21 cars local and 11 through. Barley receipts were 20 cars local and 4 through.

RAILS, THEN OILS LEAD STOCK LIST

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Speculative interest in this week's markets was divided between the resumption of the upward movement in stock prices and the sharp gains in wheat and cotton futures. Money rates showed a firmer tendency as a result of the recent increase from 4 to 4½ per cent in the rediscount rates of five Federal Reserve banks.

Revival of activity and strength in the oil shares, which have taken little part in the "bull" movement of prices during the last four years, overshadowed all other developments in the stock market. Most of the oils touched new high levels for the year or longer.

Heavy profit taking cheked a spirited advance in the railroad shares which had followed reports of an agreement on Eastern trunk line consolidation plans. The average of 20 leading railroad shares, compiled by the Associated Press, established a record high for all time.

Wheat and cotton advanced to new high levels for the season on buying influenced by unfavorable weather reports.

4-Million Share Days Return.

Trading picked up on the rallies with 4,000,000 share sessions and long ticker delay again making their appearance.

The sale of the Delaware & Hudson's holdings of Lehigh Valley and Wabash stocks to the Pennsylvania for approximately $63,000,000, representing, according to private estimate, a profit of about $20,000,000 to the Delaware & Hudson within a year, was announced.

Eastern rails started the advance but speculative interest later shifted to the western carrier, special strength of the northwestern issues being influenced by the publication of unusually favorable first quarter reports. Practically all active rails reached new high levels for the year or longer. New York Central touched the best price in its history at 189 and Union Pacific crossed 200 for the first time since 1910.

Speculation in Industrials.

New York & Harlem, changing hands in small lots, soared more than 300 points to a new record high at 505 on buying influenced by reports that minority stockholders had organized in an effort to share in the road's enormously valuable real estate investments but it fell back to 360 later in the week.

Revival of speculation for the advance in the industrial list was influenced by the retention of the 4 per cent. Rediscount rate by the New York Federal Reserve Bank, the relatively small increase of $15,385,000 in brokers' loans and the publication of excellent quarterly reports by the United States Steel and General Motors Corporation, namely Du Pont de Nemours, Savage Arms, Richfield Oil of California and other companies.

New peak prices for 1928, or longer, were registered by Atlantic Refining, Standard Oil of New York, Sinclair, the Pan American issues, Mexican Seaboard, Richfield, Texas & Pacific Land Trust and several others.

New York Public Utility Stocks were heavily bought.

Some Motors Strong.

Motors developed several points of strength but did not get through their previous high levels. Chemical, Farm Implement, Fertilizer, chain store, food and electric shares also recorded sharp gains.

Reduction in the price of cigarette by four of the largest manufacturers was followed by heavy selling of the tobacco stocks.

New York Coffee.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Coffee futures advanced today on covering and a little trade or commission house buying, which seemed to find very few contracts for sale. Rio contracts opened 2 points lower to 2 points higher and closed at a net advance of 8 to 13 points. Santos contracts opened 4 to 6 points higher and closed at net advances of 8 to 14 points. Estimated sales, Rio 12,000; Santos 22,000.

Closing quotations: Rio—May 14.40c; July 14.44c; September 14.29c; December 14.06c. January 13.95c, March 13.82c. Santos—May 21.94c, July 21.67c, September 21.30c, December 20.65c, March 20.39c.

Rio exchange on London and dollar buying rate unchanged. Rio market 25 reis lower to 50 reis higher; Santos unchanged to 25 reis lower. Brazilian port receipts 50,000; Jundiahy receipts 20,000.

WHEAT CLOSES 3 TO NEARLY 4C HIGHER AT CHICAGO

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 28.—Immense buying of future deliveries of wheat overwhelmed the influence of big profit-taking sales today, and the market outdid itself smashing high-price records. Unfavorable crop reports from Europe added to the effect of domestic crop troubles, which included dust storms over sections both of Nebraska and of Kansas as well.

Closing quotations on wheat were buoyant, 3c to 3¾c net higher at the day's top level, with corn unchanged to ¼c down, oats varying from ⅛c decline to an equal advance, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 10c.

Although fluctuating rapidly at times, the wheat market here showed a general upward trend right from the start, regardless of the fact that Liverpool prices were lagrard. It promptly developed that Chicago houses with European connections were among the most active buyers, and this was apparently explained later when crop damage reports came from Austria, Hungary and Czecho-Slovakia. Meanwhile, in addition to news of Nebraska and Kansas dust storms, a persistent absence of rain continued to be reported from parts of domestic winter wheat territory, and the weekly weather forecast not only gave scant hope of any appreciable moisture soon where needed, but suggested likelihood of abnormal high temperatures instead.

Impetus for the upward swing of the wheat market today was also furnished by reports early in the day that European crops had probably suffered injury from severe cold weather, accompanied by frosts, snow and heavy rains. In particular, it was stated that concern was felt for Polish and French crops which had already suffered from too much moisture. The reports said likewise that late spring in Russia had been unfavorable, and that in the steppes region there had been considerable winter killing, necessitating immediate aid for reseeding.

Action most of the time was the reverse of that in wheat. Warmer weather forecast for next week was expected to promote corn planting.

Oats derived relative strength from frost reports, unfavorable for the new oats crop.

INDUSTRIAL GROUP LEADER ON CURB

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Week-end profit-taking served to check the upward trend of prices on the Curb Market today and while scores of issues reached new high ground, net gains were rather limited. The industrial group attracted most of the buying, which was in large volume, and the ticket closed more than a half-hour late.

Bancitaly was the feature of the list, advancing about 8 points to a new peak at 215¾. It seemed to check the upward trend, but bounced back to close at 215. Kemsley Millbourn advanced about 2 points to a new top at 19¼ on heavy buying.

New Jersey Zinc made the greatest net gain of the day, closing at 249, up 15 points net, after it had touched a new peak at 251. New Mont Mines reached its previous high, but closed lower under profit-taking. Some of the motor and accessory shares were strong. Auburn Auto gaining 8 points, Brockway reaching a new top at 55¼ and Ford of Canada extending its gain 2 points.

General Bronze, Gamewell, Bastian Blessing, Consolidated Coal, Stewart Warner, Rubertoid and Safe-T-Stat reached new highs, the latter showing a gain of 7 points before profit-taking cut its net advance 2 points. Kayser, in initial trading, made a fractional gain.

The American Superpower issues led some of the utilities to new high ground, but most gains in this group were small.

The oils again were strong. Darby Petroleum, Gulf, Humble and Reiter Foster reaching new highs.

New York Sugar.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Raw sugar prices were unchanged today, but the undertone was a little steadier, and offerings were not aggressive. The only sale reported was 5740 bags of Philippines, in port, at 4.28c.

While not active, raw sugar futures had a firmer tone, reflecting the more optimistic feeling in the spot market. The market opened 1 point lower to 1 point higher but rallied later on covering and some trade buying with offerings light. The close was 1 to 2 points net higher on active positions. Approximate sales, 450 tons. May closed at 2.61c; July, 2.73c; Sept., 2.85c; Dec., 2.91c; Jan., 2.83c; March, 2.76c.

The refined sugar market was quiet and unchanged at 5.95c to 6c for fine granulated.

BOND OFFERINGS OF WEEK $158,000,000

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Bond prices followed a rather irregular trend today, with week-end profit-taking less extensive than usual. The week's new offerings, approximating $158,000,000, were well absorbed by dealers, and apparently had little effect on the market for listed bonds. Last week's new issues totaled about $105,000,000 and the corresponding week of last year recorded $175,000,000 of new financing.

Further heavy buying of Hudson Coal 5s, which moved up 2½ points to their previous year's high, was the outstanding development of the day. Rumors persist that this issue may be called as a result of the large cash reserve held by the Delaware & Hudson, the parent corporation, following the sale of $63,000,000 of its Wabash and Lehigh Valley stocks. No confirmation has been given to these reports.

Denver & Rio Grande Western 5s took another spurt upward, rising more than a point within striking distance of their peak price. International Railway of Central America 6½s sold at their best price of the year. Rail bonds as a whole, however, were quiet and fractionally mixed.

New York traction liens again advanced in the early trading, but subsequently sustained losses on profit-taking. Pacific Telephone 5s were firm on moderately large purchases. Oil securities apparently were little effected by the strength of petroleum stocks. A further drop of 2 points in International Radiator 6½s again lowered their minimum price for the year.

Only nominal trading took place in the Foreign group, in which there was some profit-taking in issues that moved upward during the week.

United States Government securities were firm, but not very active.

REDISCOUNT RATE RAISES EFFECTIVE

Brokers' Loans by New York Members for Account of Out-of-Town Banks Fell $89,000,000 in Week—Reserve Banks Still Have $300,000,000 in U. S. Issues.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 29.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly review, says:

"In the face of redoubled efforts by the Reserve system to check credit expansion the stock market this week maintained its strong forward movement. Undaunted by all adverse news, it responds readily to favorable developments. Just when it seemed the move to higher rediscount mate by five interior banks had quieted down speculation the market's fire was fanned anew by reports of progress in the Eastern railroad merger tangle. And then instead of a bear influence on the market, deferment of action by the Reserve Bank at New York proved a boon. Wall street had said the bull side would prefer to get the New York increase out of the way, but when the directors adjourned without action it did not lose faith. Instead it began to speculate upon the possibility that the rate here might not safer all be disturbed. The country is so heavily in stocks on the constructive side it refuses to believe anything can turn severely the fortunes of the market.

Reserve Mechanism Effective.

"What the ultimate effect on the market will be nobody can tell but the plain inference from its various moves is that the reserve system is determined to stem the tide of unprecedented expansion in bank credits by one means or another. So far the market has withstood various steps to tighten money since early in the year, but no conclusion could be further from the truth than the one frequently heard nowadays that the reserve system is powerless to administer doses potent enough to take effect. As a matter of fact last week's increase in various rediscount rates immediately checked the flow of funds from the interior to New York. Brokers' loans made by New York members for the account of out-of-town banks fell $89,000,000 this week—and the general growth in loans had largely represented increases in this item. It shows that the reserve mechanism is performing effectively.

Still Hold $300,000,000 U. S. Issues.

"The sale of another $35,900,000 in Government securities is unmistakable evidence that the reserve authorities mean not only to allow gold exports to exercise their restricting influence, but that they intend to hasten the process. Since the beginning of 1928 more than $200,000,000 in Government securities have been unloaded upon the market, thus establishing a definitely higher money level than a year ago, but—and here comes a point not generally appreciated—the reserve banks still have $300,000,000 in Government securities that they can sell in an effort to keep funds firm. With gold flowing out and borrowings by the member banks mounting rapidly possession of this large volume of governments leaves a control over money in the hands of the reserve banks that if exercised to the full limit could indeed achieve results. To what extent the reserve authorities will feel obliged to act is difficult to say for the system still finds itself in somewhat of a dilemma so far as money matters go. Tight money as well as ease presents its problems to those who seek world currency stabilization.

Advances in Farm Products.

"So long as stocks continue to climb 5 per cent, or even dearer, money will not discourage speculation, but the fact remains that each fresh advance in the rate for funds widens the gap between what it costs to carry stocks and what they yield. In discussing the market's future, the question arises how long investors will cling to issues that return them little or nothing when they see their carrying charges increasing. It is true that the period of seasonal ease in money lies immediately ahead and last week's initial sharp drop in commercial loans suggests that perhaps the 1928 peak has been reached. Reports to date indicate that comparisons with 1927 in industry will be more favorable during the current quarter than they were in the first quarter. In a sense, the unfavorable weather conditions have restricted the prospect for bumper crops, but offsetting that the farmer lately has witnessed marked advances in wheat, cotton, corn and rye prices. If the pace of business improvement continues slow the trend, nevertheless, is in the right direction.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Heavy week-end profit taking turned the course of prices irregular after a strong opening in today's brief session of the market. Enormous accumulation of the oil shares under the leadership of Standard Oil of New York which advanced 4½ points to a new high record at 39½ on a total turnover of more than 200,000 shares was the outstanding feature. Early gains of 1 to 10 points were materially reduced or wiped out in the late wave of realizing but final quotations disclosed a preponderance of net gains.

Trading was conducted at a terrific pace with the ticker again falling hopelessly behind the market. Total sales fell just short of 2,400,000 shares with the final quotation printed on the ticker 53 minutes after the market closed.

New peak prices for the year were no longer were recorded by Standard Oil of New Jersey, Panhandle, Louisiana Oil, Mexican Seaboard, Standard Oil of California, Mid-continent Petroleum and several others.

Boston & Maine, Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, Wabash, "Nickel Plate," and several others sold off 1 to 3 points. Jersey Central climbed 5 points to a new high at 355, closing a point below that level. Mining shares turned upward. An optimistic statement on trade conditions by President Kelley of the Anaconda Copper Mining Co., on the eve of his departure for Europe was reported. Latino was the individual feature, climbing 3½ points to a new high at 41 as against a low of 23⅞ earlier in the year.

Tobacco shares, which were heavy earlier in the week following the announcement of cigaret price cuts, showed strength.

Westinghouse Manufacturing ran up nearly 4 points to 106⅞. Sharp gains also were recorded Air Reduction, American Radiator, American Railway Express, Case Threshing, Electric Auto Lite, Otis Elevator, Rossia Insurance and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe.

Some Selling Pressure.

Selling pressure was quite effective against such issues as Best & Company, Bush Terminal, General Railway Signal, International Shoe, National Tea, F. G. Shattuck and Wright Aeronautical, all off 3 to 7 points.

Foreign exchanges were slightly easier, Sterling cables ruling a shade lower around $4.88 1-16 and French francs unchanged just below 3.93½ cents.

WEEK'S METAL MARKET REVIEW

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Good export demand and moderate buying for home consumption absorbed a large part of the copper available for nearby shipment and served to establish the domestic price at 14¼c for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut Valley. Most of the recent buying, especially for foreign account, has been for May delivery. Home consumers are now thought to have filled their May requirements and are showing little disposition to place June orders.

Tin was slightly easier in a dull market. London and Singapore were unsettled.

Lead was steady, despite the decline at London. Demand was moderate and largely for prompt and May shipment.

Zinc ruled firm, with reports of a better consuming demand. Ore prices were unchanged.

Antimony was steady, but the trade was reported as dull. An advance in Chinese exchange has added to the import cost.

LEAD, ZINC AND COPPER

Lead was quiet at 6c per 100 lbs. in St. Louis today. Slab zinc was quiet at $5.80 per 100 lbs.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Exports of refined copper in March moved up to 41,538 tons from 36,531 in February, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reports. Exports of zinc were 2558 tons against 2125 in February and exports of lead 9639 tons, against 8026.

Foreign Exchange

NEW YORK, April 29.—The Evening Post in copyrighted weekly foreign exchange market review, says:

Trade demand for European exchange during the week. Yesterday many of the closing documents were in good demand and had substantial advances from the previous low level.

Speculative movements were of a minor character, including a decline in sterling exchange from 4.93.33 about a week ago to 4.92.66 with a quick rally to above 4.93 for cables.

Finally, after the gold shipment announced last week showed a decreasing tendency, cables dropping from $4.88⅝ to $4.88⅛ did not fully much above that figure. It might be assumed that yesterday's weakness was due to the retention of the bank rate at 4 per cent, despite the expected advance to 4½ per cent at least another week, but conditions are apparently not entering into the situation. Little attention was paid to the fact that call money in London according to cable advices is in supply at 3¼ per cent, while time cash or call money can be obtained in the market below 3 per cent. The open market discount rate in London was at 3⅛ per cent yesterday or 1/16 per cent below our time money rate.

The French exchange in which the dealings are on a large scale each day, had a wide variation in its position, yielding ½ point to 3.93½, but moved back from yesterday's Italian, which has been in good supply for some time, made a new record since the stabilization of the lira, yielding 5.26⅝ for cables. Belgian rallied after an early decline and moved in the same way.

Scandinavians moved in a quiet manner, a feature being the wiping out of the spread between rates on Sweden and Norway.

Greece was extremely weak under selling which both China and Japan, yen ranging from 47.03 to 47.21. Other changes maintained a strong tone with Canada on the advance of nearly ½ point to above 64 cents.

There was in special demand in the Argentine the week, advancing from 40.00 and finishing unsettled.

Brazil had its usual wide fluctuations and was in continued supply near the close of the week, after a sharp decline in the first few days.

By the Associated Press.

JAMAICA, N. Y., April 28.—Distra silks, making his first appearance of th winning the Wood Memorial handicap, a today. The colt carried 120 pounds and

The race was marred by Harry Payne Whitney's Victorian running out at three-furlong pole and carrying Nassak with him. Both boys pulled up their mounts. Workman, who rode Victorian, and L. Fator, who had the leg up on Nassak, were both called into the stewards' stands and asked to explain.

The start was good and Victorian was rushed to the front, followed by Nassak and Distraction. Victorian drew away from Nassak in the run down the back stretch, but around the turn Fator sent Nassak up to the leader. They were both going easy when suddenly Victorian ran out. Fator made an effort to ease Nassak back, but he was not able to get away from Victorian. Their winning chances were ruined right there.

Distraction then rushed into a long lead and won by 10 lengths. Genie took the place by 10 lengths, while Dr. Wilson landed third money by a length and a half from Leonard B.

Odds-On Favorite Beaten.

The form players got away to a bad start in the opening event when Negotiator with L. Fator up, and quoted odds-on finished last in a field of three. The winner turned up in Bright Steel, with Resourceful second. Negotiator broke slow and was out from the first stride and kept dropping back at every stride. Bright Steel made the pace and won by two lengths, while Resourceful took the place by eight lengths from Negotiator.

G. A. Cochran's Nusakan attoned for his recent defeat when he galloped home in the second event, running the six furlongs in 1:13 4-5. He was quoted at 9 to 20. Reputation was second and The Tartar third and last.

Garner Wins on 10 to 1 Shot.

The Colorado stakes, a five furlongs sprint for 2-year-olds, resulted in an upset for the talent, when William Ziegler's Cyrano with Mack Garner up, and quoted at 10 to 1 in the betting won the third by a neck, after a long hard stretch drive, with the favorite, Simba, int he Rancocas Stable's silks second, and Tibet third.

Cyrano broke running and was well in his stride but before the field had gone a furlong Simba was right after him and took the lead at the three-furlong pole. Simba appeared to be going very easy and Fator, who had the mount, brought him out to the good going in the stretch. However, in the last sixteenth, he began to tire and Garner riding a powerful finish on Cyrano managed to get the colt to the front and win by a neck. The race was worth $7900 and the five furlongs were run in the fast time of 1:00 4-5, considering the track was muddy.

G. A. Cochran's Genie was second and Dr. Wilson third. The race was worth $1,100 and the time 1:46.

JAMAICA, N. Y., April 28.—Distraction, in the Wheatley Stable silks, making his first appearance of the year, scored in a romp in winning the Wood Memorial handicap, a mile and 70 yards gallop here today. The colt carried 120 pounds and showed an excellent effort.

The race was marred by Harry Payne Whitney's Victorian running out at three-furlong pole and carrying Nassak with him. Both boys pulled up their mounts. Workman, who rode Victorian, and L. Fator, who had the leg up on Nassak, were both called into the stewards' stands and asked to explain.

The start was good and Victorian was rushed to the front, followed by Nassak and Distraction. Victorian drew away from Nassak in the run down the back stretch, but around the turn Fator sent Nassak up to the leader. They were both going easy when suddenly Victorian ran out. Fator made an effort to ease Nassak back, but he was not able to get away from Victorian. Their winning chances were ruined right there.

Distraction then rushed into a long lead and won by 10 lengths. Genie took the place by 10 lengths, while Dr. Wilson landed third money by a length and a half from Leonard B.

GAVUZZI FIRST TO STAUNTON IN PYLE MARATHON

By the Associated Press.

STAUNTON, Ill., April 28.—Peter Gavuzzi, bearded Englishman, retained his leadership in C. C. Pyle's trans-continental foot race by finishing first today. He traversed the 42.5 miles from East St. Louis in 5:27:36, giving him elapsed time of 353:28:05 for the 2128.7 miles from Los Angeles.

Lucian Frost, Hollywood's bearded entry, was ousted from the race tonight when patrol officials caught him riding toward the control with a passing motorist.

"I just couldn't stand the gaff," the bewhiskered runner said.

John Salo of Passaic, N. J., third in elapsed time, was second today in 5:39:50. Phillip Granville, Hamilton, Ont., was third in 5:40:45, thus retaining fourth place in elapsed time.

Giusto Umek, Trieste, Italy, finished fourth in 6:19:37. Ed Gardner of Seattle, Mike Joyce of Cleveland and Olli Wanttinen of New York tied for fifth in 6:43:24.

Tentative plans after leaving Springfield Tuesday will bring the runners to Lincoln that night, Bloomington Wednesday, Dwight Thursday, Joliet Friday and Chicago Saturday.

BANISHED PLAYERS GO TO BOX IN GRANDSTAND; UMPIRE FORFEITS GAME

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 28. Wilbur Hubbell and Charley Hall of the Millers, protested the decisions of Umpire Jack Powell in today's American Association game with Indianapolis.

They were in the dugout when the umpire decided he had heard enough conversation about his decisions on balls and strikes and sent them to the showers.

The pair, dressed in their street clothes, found a box in right field, from which they started watching the remainder of the game. With Minneapolis leading 13 to 2 in the third inning, Umpire Powell located them, and demanded that Mike Kelley, manager of the Minneapolis team, have them leave the park.

With his watch in his hand Powell timed their preparations to leave the park, which were too slow, and he forfeited the game to Indianapolis, 9 to 0.

The umpire vanished into the dressing room, after police delayed a rush from the bleachers.

PRINCETON CREWS SWEEP REGATTA

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 28.—Princeton made a clean sweep of a regatta with Massachusetts Institute of Technology on Lake Carnegie today, scoring a surprising half length victory in the varsity event after the Tiger freshman and 150-pound crews had defeated their M. I. T. rivals in the earlier races.

Princeton's time for the mile and three-quarters was 10 minutes 43 3-10 seconds. Tech negotiated the distance in 10:45 1-10.

TONY PLANSKY DECATHLON WINNER FOR THIRD TIME

By the Associated Press.

FRANKLIN FIELD, PHILADELPHIA, April 28.—Tony Plansky, burly former Georgetown football star, captured the Penn Relay Carnival Decathlon championship today for the third time in four years, establishing himself as an outstanding Olympic candidate by overcoming a record breaking field of rivals.

This decathlon was an official Olympic test, the finish of which was a sensational duel between Plansky and Kenneth Doherty of Detroit City College.

The former Georegtown star, now representing the St. Alphonsus A. A. of Boston, won three of the 10 events, while Doherty captured only one. Plansky compiled a total of 7142.273 points and Doherty amassed 7041.338.

Tom Churchill, the young University of Oklahoma star, staged a great finish in winning the 1500-meter run by a big margin, but was in third place, well back of Doherty in the final standing, with 6585.519 points. Vernon Kennedy of Missouri, last year's winner of the event, came back strong today to place fourth with 6408.114 points.

Of the original field of 18 decathlon starters, only nine survived the grueling battle to the end. Whitey Lloyd, the speedy midshipman from Annapolis, won three first places, breaking two records and equaling another, but performed poorly in the field events and withdrew after starting the 1500-meter race. Lloyd finished eighth.

SHAW FAILS TO BREAK BURMAN'S SPEED MARK

By the Associated Press.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., April 28.—Wilbur Shaw, young Indianapolis automobile race driver, today failed to break the world's straightaway speed record for four-cylinder cars when his Whippet Special developed motor trouble after seven unsuccessful trials.

He expects to try again tomorrow to break the present record of 141.7 miles an hour established here in 1912 by Bob Burman in a German built Blitzen-Benz.

During his trials today the fastest of which was 138 miles an hour, Shaw encountered strong side winds. The beach was in good condition.

Lee Barnes of Southern California Goes Over Bar at 14 Feet, 1 3-4 Inches—Borah Timed at 9 3-5 Seconds in 100-Yard Dash.

By the Associated Press.

FRESNO, Calif., April 28.—World's records in the 16-pound shot put and pole vault were broken and a third recognized record in the 100-yard dash was equaled by California athletes in the West Coast relays here today.

Clearing the bar at 14 feet 1½ inches, Lee Barnes of University of Southern California established a new world's record, breaking the recognized mark of 14 feet 1 inch set earlier in the year by Sabin Carr of Yale. Barnes cleared the bar on his third and last attempt.

The second world's record was set in the shotput by John Kuck, former Emporia (Kan.) State Teachers' College athlete, wearing the emblem of the Los Angeles Athletic Club. He tossed the iron ball 51 feet ½ inch to break the record of 51 feet that had stood since 1909. This record was established in that year by Ralph Rose of the Olympic Club of San Francisco. Kuck, who also holds the intercollegiate record in the javelin, won the shotput event last year in the A. A. U. meet in Lincoln, Neb.

The performances today of Barnes and Kuck have to be ruled on by officials of the A. A. U.

Charles Borah, University of Southern California flash, equaled the recognized world's record of 9 and 2-5 seconds in the 100-yard dash.

The record was made by Charles Paddock in 1921.

Paddock hung up a record of 9 5-10 in the century a year ago, which has not yet been recognized.

JAPANESE TAKE TWO DAVIS CUP SINGLES MATCHES FROM CUBANS

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, April 28.—Japan had little difficulty winning the first two singles matches from Cuba today in the opening of the Davis Cup elimination tennis play.

Teizo Toba, captain of the Japanese squad, trimmed Dr. Vicente Banet, Cuban singles champion, in straight sets, 6—1, 6—2, 6—2, and Yoshiro Ohta disposed of Rogelio Paris, 6—1, 6—1, 6—3.

A doubles match is scheduled tomorrow, with two singles encounters on Monday, if necessary to decide the victor.

RIGHTHANDER FANS 7 BATTERS; DOUTHIT HITS FOUR TIMES IN ROW

By W. J. McGoogan
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

CHICAGO, April 28.—Flint Rhem, big Cardinal right-hander, made a most impressive debut on the mound this afternoon, holding the Cubs to six hits and defeating them, 5 to 1, in the second game of the series.

Rhem had the stuff today which enabled him to win 20 games in 1926. He was firing the ball overhand with plenty of speed and beautiful curves. He had the Cub batters backing away from the plate and swinging wildly trying to connect with his baffling shoots. So effective was Flint that he fanned seven of his opponents—his strike-outs coming one to the inning in every frame except the fifth and the ninth.

The Cardinal outfielders had only six putouts, the rest of the Cubs, or those who didn't strike out, sending easy rollers to the infield.

In only one inning was Rhem a bit unsteady, and in that a fine play by Taylor Douthit pulled him out of a ticklish situation. The occasion was the fifth, which the Cubs started on the short end of a 4-to-0 score.

Gonzales, first up for Chicago in that round, rolled to Thevenow. Then Butler got the first hit off Rhem, a single to center, and Pinch-hitter Kelly, swinging for Jones, singled to center and Butler reached third. But Kelly reckoned not with the power in Douthit's good right arm, and tried to reach second. He was an easy out, Douthit to Frisch. English then beat out a hit to Thevenow and Butler scored with the Cubs' first, last and only run.

Rhem Strong at Finish.

After that Rhem was strong. He stopped Chicago in order in the sixth. In the seventh Grimm led off with a double, but Hartnett lined to Roettger, Butler tapped to Rhem and Malone fanned.

In the eighth Maguire got a two-base hit to right field after one was out. Even at that Maguire appeared to be out at second on Hafey's fine throw to Frisch, but Umpire Wilson ruled him safe. Rhem then fanned Cuyler for the second time and Wilson filed to Roettger.

Grimm walked with one out in the ninth. Hartnett filed to Douthit and Butler smashed a hit off High's shins. Webb batted for Malone and filed to Douthit for the final out.

Rhem had good control throughout the game. He walked only three batters and at that he was getting none the best of its from Umpire Reardon behind the plate, who seemed to have nearly as much trouble following the big fellow's curve ball as did the Cub batters.

Percy Jones Batted Out.

All the Cardinal players were eager to see Rhem get the victory and they supported him well in the field. Not an error was charged to the team and in addition, Frisch and O'Farrell were always on hand with the verbal encouragement for Rhem whenever a situation was threatening.

Bob frequently walked to the mound to smooth down Rhem when the pitcher became peeved at an umpire's decision or a rub of the game.

And to show that they wanted Rhem to win, they blasted Percy

CROWDER BLOWS UP AND BIG LEAD IS WIPED OUT IN EIGHTH INNING

By J. Roy Stockton.

Dan Howley's hard-hitting Brownies bombarded the great Alphonse Thomas for 11 hits and six runs in seven innings yesterday afternoon, but a break in the form of an umpire's decision against the St. Louis team started the White Sox on a five-run rally in the eighth inning and the visitors held the advantage gained in that attack and won the third game of the series, 9 to 6.

An umpire's decision can go only one way and it is not good sportsmanship to squawk about a ruling of an official, but it is true that the decision by Umpire Guthrie in the eighth inning was the turning point in a ball game that it appeared the Brownies were going to capture, despite the fact that the pitching of Alvin Crowder was not any too good.

Howley's men were on the long end of a 6-to-3 score when the White Sox went to bat in the eighth. They held the lead up to that point by grace of a fence-busting attack against Thomas and a brilliant defense that turned potential base hits of the enemy into putouts.

Lost by a Swish.

The very play that was involved in the big break of the game was a bit of daring fielding. Bill Cissell, the young shortstop of the visitors, opened the unfortunate inning with a low, fading liner to right. McNeely was off at the crack of the bat and it appeared to the fans in the stands, bleachers and pavilion and on housetops on the east side of Grand boulevard, that McNeely, diving desperately for the ball, got his glove under it and held it without it touching the ground. He skidded along on his ear for a few yards and then gained his feet with the ball tightly clutched in the glove hand.

Stands, bleachers and pavilion applauded the brilliant effort, but Umpire Guthrie stood like a statue. That was the tip-off. Umpires swish their arms through the fatal arc, when they call a man out. But Guthrie didn't swish a bit. The Browns thought perhaps he was just out of swishes and it was some time before they realized that Guthrie did not choose to swish.

Of course, there was a long and vigorous protest and Manager Howley appealed to the other umpires. But it was not a question of protesting. It was a question of swishing and in those terms, the Browns lost the game by a swish.

Then the Rally Began.

The next batter hit a hot grounder which Brannon fumbled and Barnabe batted for Thomas and singled to center, scoring Cissell. Clancy bunted and Umpire Hildebrand helped to atone for Guthrie's decision by swishing to the effect that McCurdy was out at third. But it was no use. The important swish had gone against the Browns and Hildebrand's was just a gesture.

Moore singled to center, scoring Barnabe and knocking Crowder out of the picture and with Ernie Nevers on the hill in the rescue role, Metzler singled to center, scoring Clancy. Barrett grounded to Kress and Moore was out at the plate, but Falk broke the tie with a double to left center, scoring Metzler and Barrett.

Coffman replaced Nevers and retired Kamm to end the inning, but the game was gone, as Ted Lyons went to the hill for the Sox and baffled the Browns in the eighth and ninth, a single by Schulte being the extent of the St. Louis attack in those innings.

Browns Show Real Punch.

It was a great attack that the Browns showed in the early part of the contest. After the Sox had scored a run in the first on Moore's double and Barrett's single, McNeely opened the St. Louis half with a triple to right center and scored on O'Rourke's single to left. Manush singled to right, sending O'Rourke to third and after O'Rourke was nailed at the plate on Schulte's grounder to Clancy, Kress tripled to left center scoring Manush and Schulte. Blue then banged a double to right, scoring Kress with the fourth run of the inning.

Schulte's muff of Metzler's liner and Falk's single gave the Sox their second run in the third inning, but the Browns came back with one in their half when Kress hit to right center for his second triple and scored on Blue's long sacrifice fly to Moore.

Kress Hits Again.

A pass to McCurdy and singles by Clancy and Moore gave the Sox a third run in the fourth and the Browns brought the score to 6 to 3 in the seventh on Manush's single, Schulte's sacrifice, McCurdy's poor throw to second and Kress' third hit a single to left.

That was the way the scoreboard told the story when the White Sox went to bat in that terrible eighth inning. To make the score the final 9 to 6 the Sox added their final runin the ninth, with Walter Beck pitching. Cissell singled off Beck's glove to open the frame and scored on McCurdy's long double to right center.

But the real story of the game is the story of how Umpire Guthrie stood like a statue and held that right hand in his trousers pocket. If only he had loosened up and swished a bit. Just one swish and the story would have ended so much more pleasantly.

Olympic Jumping Candidates of the Headlight Athletic Club

RUFUS HAGGARD.

Rufus Haggard (right,) who has jumped 6 feet 7 inches, is shown doing the "Osborn roll" over the head of Catherine Maguire, who is America's outdoor high jump champion. The local club hopes both will win a place on the Olympic team in the tryouts. Haggard is teaching Miss Maguire the "Osborn roll," and expects to add four or five inches to her present record of 5 feet 5½ inch.

Haggard, Holder of Collegiate High Jump Record, Becomes Member of Headlight Club

By Gerald Holland.

Rufus Haggard, intercollegiate high jump record holder, and until recently a member of the University of Texas track squad, is the latest addition to Harry Riddick's Headlight Athletic Club, under whose colors he will try for a place on the Olympic team.

Haggard won his title in 1926 at the National A. A. U. meet in Chicago where he broke the record of 6 feet, 6⅛ inches with a jump of 6 feet, 7¼ inches. In fine form at the regular workouts of the Headlight athletes he appears to be almost certain of winning the trip to Amsterdam.

By the time the Olympic track trials are held, Haggard will have discharged the eligibility obligations regarding the period of residence required by the Amateur Athletic Union and will be able to enter from the Western District. He is employed by the firm here that backs the Headlight Club.

Catherine Maguire, another member of the Headlight Club, holds the national women's outdoor high jump record of 5 feet, ½ inch so that the team will be particularly strong in that department. Miss Maguire is likely to receive harder competition in the Olympic trials than Haggard since several Eastern girl athletes have been coming dangerously close to equaling her record.

Miss Maguire uses the "scissors" jump while Haggard employes the Osborne "roll." The "scissors" is not productive of very great height unless an athlete has an exceptional natural spring. With that style, Miss Maguire has reached approximately her maximum height, but she has been taking instruction from Haggard with a view to changing her style. Although the change to the Osborne "roll" is difficult to master, Haggard believes that Miss Maguire will be able to add several inches to her record if she uses that method in the Olympic trials.

With the addition of Haggard, the Headlight Club has an imposing list of titleholders. Miss Maguire, holds the district high jump, shotput, and broad jump records. Dee Boeckmann's claim for a new American record in the 50-yard dash is now pending. Miss Boeckman holds the district discus throw championship and 100-yard dash record. Violet Brauning is the women's district 220-yard dash champion.

Dee Boeckmann has been devoting most of her attention in practice to the discus throw and has bettered her record of 80 feet, 10 inches by 18 feet. She has played third on two occasions in national discus competition and hopes to make the Olympic team in that event.

OGDEN AND ADKINS TO HURL IN FINAL

Johnnie Ogden has recovered from his cold sufficiently to return to duty and will pitch against the White Sox this afternoon in the final game of the series. Grady Adkins, a young righthander from Shreveport, will do the hurling for the visitors.

Earl McNeely's improved hitting of late is not just an accident. At the suggestion of Bill Killefer, the great coach, Earl tried "choking" his bat—that is, holding it farther from the handle—and he has developed into an extra-base hitter. Killefer is a valuable man around a ball club, as Rogers Hornsby and his pennant winners of 1926 will testify.

The sun gave the Sox a run in the third inning. Schulte lost Metzler's line drive in the sun and dropped the ball, though it hit in his glove. Metzler reached second on the error, went to third on an infield out and scored an unearned tally on Falk's single to center.

Two Triples for Kress.

Kress' two triples were line drives, one to left center and one to right center. In the fifth inning he failed to get his bat out of the way as he tried to pull back and sent an easy roller to Barrett.

The argument goes on and on as to whether it is good baseball to sacrifice when you have a lead or when you are more than a run behind. The discussion started again in the press box in the seventh inning when Schulte led off with a single. Howley called for a sacrifice and Schulte advanced Manush to second. A wild throw by McCurdy, trying to pick Heinie off second, moved him to third and Kress lined to left, scoring Manush. Howley won his argument. You can't win an argument against a run scored.

The best weather of the spring prevailed and the bleachers were well filled except for the section in center, which was roped off.

The paid attendance was approximately $000.

A Costly Bad Break.

McNeely made what appeared to be a clean diving catch of Cissell's low liner to start the eighth inning, but the three umpires stood like statues and it was learned eventually that Guthrie did not consider it a fair catch and Cissell had to be credited with a single.

It was a costly break against the Browns. Before Crowder, Nevers and Coffman could stop the Sox they drove five runs over the plate and took the lead. Thereafter Umpire Guthrie was served with large portions of razzberries.

The question arose after the game as to whether Crowder or Nevers should be charged with the defeat. Two of the men Nevers pitched to reached base and scored the runs that put the Sox ahead. One of the two reached first by forcing a runner at third, so the run scored by this base runner might be charged to Crowder. The official scorer decided to charge Nevers with the defeat, putting final decision up to the league president.

OSNER TO BOX ON CARD WITH LOUGHRAN IN FLORIDA THURSDAY

Frankie Osner of Alton will fight next Thursday night at Miami, Fla., on the same card with Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion. Osner, who fought a draw with Charley Glaser of Chicago at the Coliseum last Thursday, will go to Miami to meet Cliff Wellons, southern junior lightweight titleholder.

Bob Riley, manager of Osner, has added to his stable Dick Bowden of Tampa, who stopped Patsy Flanagan of St. Louis in Mobile last November. Bowden fights at 118 pounds and Riley hopes to show him soon in local ring.

FLINT RHEM PITCHES IN FORM AND WINS HIS FIRST GAME

Jones from the hill, the same half-million dollar southpaw who stopped them in St. Louis with five hits. They drove Jones to cover in five innings, getting to him for six safeties and four runs in that time.

All told the Cardinals collected 10 hits, two of them being triples. Taylor Douthit was the leading slugger with four singles in five tries, while Frisch had a single and a triple, Bottomley, Hafey and Roettger a single each and Thevenow a three-bagger.

Three singles in succession by Frisch, Bottomley and Hafey gave the Cardinals a run in the first inning after two were out.

Thevenow started the second with a triple and scored on Douthit's single after Rhem had fanned. The Cardinal attack was quiet in the third and fourth but in the fifth Douthit led off with a single and scored on Frisch's triple to right center, after High, trying to sacrifice, had popped to Butler. Frisch rode home on Bottomley's sacrifice fly to Wilson.

That was all the scoring by McKechnie's men until the ninth, when the Cubs presented them with a run. Douthit, leading off in the final frame, got his fourth safety and went to second on High's sacrifice. Frisch rolled to English and Douthit moved to third. Bottomley sent an easy roller to Maguire but the Cub second-baseman, usually so sure on ground balls, let it go through him and Douthit cantered home.

BILL SHERDEL, little left-hander who lost a tough game at Cincinnati his last out, probably will hurl for the Cardinals in the final game against the Cubs tomorrow. It had been expected that Alexander would work, but McKechnie evidently prefers to save him for the opening game at home against Cincinnati Monday. Sherliff Blake is due for Chicago.

Bob O'Farrell was presented with a large floral horseshoe before today's game, the gift of Chicago friends. The design was done in pink and white roses with the name "Bob" at the top in pink on a field of white. The horseshoe evidently helped O'Farrell, for he walked on his first two trips to the plate.

Jim Bottomley, confined to his bed with a cold the day before, popped up this morning when told that Jones was to pitch for Chicago, forgot he was ill and announced his readiness to play. He was sent back to first base and in the opening inning showed he was all right by hitting a single to right which sent Frisch to third.

Rhem started the game in great shape, fanning English. He then walked Maguire. Cuyler grounded to Thevenow and the steady Tommy, with an easy double play in front of him, fumbled the ball. He recovered in time to step on second ahead of Maguire, but missed the double play which would have ended the inning. Cuyler stole second, Thevenow dropping a good throw from O'Farrell. As it happened, theseh reaks did no damage, for Wilson filed to Roettger for the final out.

Three Assists for Rhem.

Rhem made a nice stop of Stephenson's smash in the second and threw him out. It was the first of three assists which Rhem had during the game. In the second frame also, Frisch helped by going far into right field for a nice catch of Grimm's fly.

In the Cubs' fourth, with two out and Stephenson on first, Grimm shot a hot liner to center field, but Douthit raced in for a great shoestring catch. He fell and turned a somersault after making the play, but clung to the ball. He was given a generous ovation by the Chicago fans.

Charley Grimm, the Cub captain, made a nice catch of a fly from Thevenow's bat in the sixth, getting the ball against the grandstand.

When Cuyler fanned for the second time in the eighth inning he was roundly booed by the fans. Kiki is having a tough time and has made but one hit in 22 times at bat.

The weather was many degrees warmer today and a crowd of 18,000 attended.

The victory gives the Cardinals a record of five triumphs against two defeats since leaving St. Louis on the present road campaign. And the defeat was the third in a row for the Cubs.

ILLINOIS WINS THREE RELAYS AT DRAKE GAMES

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY, Associated Press Sports Writer.

DES MOINES, Ia., April 28.—In an afternoon of stirring performances but lacking in the usual wholesale record breaking, Illinois, champions of the Western Conference, emerged with a lion's share of honors in the closing events of the Drake Relay carnival. A crowd of 14,000 watched the sport.

The fleet Illini runners, competing in the six university relays, won three and finished second to two others. After winning the distance medley yesterday, the sturdy Illinois quartets came back today to win the two mile and the four mile events. To top off their performance they trailed Northwestern to victory in the 880-yard event and looked at the back of the Iowa runners in the 440-yard relay.

The Illinois four-mile quartet, McElwee, Novak, Stine and Abbott, raced to a brilliant victory in the punishing four-mile event after carrying on almost shoulder to shoulder with Indiana. The Hoosier quartet led for the first two miles but Stine pounded into the lead in the third and gave a slight edge to Abbott, the Illinois anchor man, when he sprinted off on the final relay.

Wins by Four Yards.

With Fields, the Indian anchor man, dogging his footsteps, Abbott set off on a bristling pace, but Fields sprinted ahead of him before the half mile was finished. Abbott, however, came from behind, cutting loose with a thrilling burst of speed in the back stretch and finished with a lead of four yards in the time of 18:30.

Iowa was second to Illinois in the honor columns of winning relays. The Hawkeyes won the 440-yard event and the mile relay, both times with the same team, composed of Stevenson, Stamats, Baird and Cuhel.

...ILLINOIS WINS THREE RELAYS AT DRAKE GAMES

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

DES MOINES, Ia., April 28.—In an afternoon of stirring performances but lacking in the usual wholesale record breaking, Illinois, champions of the Western Conference, emerged with a lion's share of honors in the closing events of the Drake Relay carnival. A crowd of 14,000 watched the sport.

The fleet Illini runners, competing in the six university relays, won three and finished second in two others. After winning the distance medley yesterday, the sturdy Illinois quartets came back today to win the two mile and the four mile events. To top off their performance they trailed Northwestern to victory in the 880-yard event and looked at the back of the Iowa runners in the 440-yard relay.

The Illinois four-mile quartet, McElwee, Novak, Stine and Abbott, raced to a brilliant victory in the punishing four-mile event after carrying on almost shoulder to shoulder with Indiana. The Hoosier quartet led for the first two miles, but Stine pounded into the lead in the third and gave a slight edge to Abbott, the Illinois anchor man, when he sprinted off on the final relay.

Wins by Four Yards.

With Fields, the Indian anchor man, dogging his footsteps, Abbott set off on a bristling pace, but Fields sprinted ahead of him before the half mile was finished. Abbott, however, came from behind, cutting loose with a thrilling burst of speed in the back stretch and finished with a lead of four yards, in the time of 18:30.

Iowa was second to Illinois in the honor columns of winning relays. The Hawkeyes won the 440-yard event and the mile relay, both times with the same team, composed of Stevenson, Stamats, Baird and Cuhel.

Grimm shot a hot liner to center field, but Douthit raced in for a great shoestring catch. He fell and turned a somersault after making the play, but clung to the ball. He was given a generous ovation by the Chicago fans.

Charley Grimm, the Cub captain, made a nice catch of a foul from Thevenow's bat in the sixth, getting the ball against the grandstand.

When Cuyler fanned for the second time in the eighth inning he was roundly booed by the fans. Kiki is having a tough time and has made but one hit in 22 times at bat.

The weather was many degrees warmer today and a crowd of 18,000 attended.

The victory gives the Cardinals a record of five triumphs against two defeats since leaving St. Louis on the present road campaign. And the defeat was the third in a row for the Cubs.

PADDOCK SETS WORLD RECORD FOR 175 YARDS AT PENN RELAY MEET

...OLLAPSING ...RICK STAND ...AILS TO STOP ...ASTEST HUMAN

By Alan J. Gould.
...ociated Press Sports Editor.

...ILADELPHIA, April 28. — ...combination of a semi-freezing rain, mud inches deep and the collapse of a section of the Frankford Field Stadium's brick wall that killed two score or more spectators on the track failed today to stop Charley Paddock from smashing the world's record for 175 yards in the Pennsylvania Relay Carnival.

...t as the bark of the gun sent the pack and three rivals flying through the mud and rain a 30-foot section of the retaining wall on the edge of the track yielded to the force of the crowd's push and fell a ton of bricks and a wild mass of spectators, including scores of girls, out on the cinder path.

Paddock Swerves by Brick.

The flashing, baby-blue-clad figure of Paddock, out in front, swept into view at the height of the confusion. Enough of the track was left clear of the jumble for the fleet California flyer to swerve and dash by. On sped Paddock, arms pumping high and arms reaching, to break the tape six yards in front of Folwell Scull, Penn track captain, and shatter his own and the world's record.

Paddock's time, after an official delay, was fixed at 17 2-5 seconds, two-fifths of a second faster than the 175-yard mark he set at Los Angeles City last year.

...o one was hurt, beyond a few bruises and scratches, in the fall of some seven feet to the track as the wall gave way. The fallen accident diverted the attention of most of the soaked and cheering crowd of 15,000 from the finish of Paddock's race.

Accident Mars Meet.

The unexpected and double-barreled sensation eclipsed the rest of today's program of events, fought under as bad weather and race conditions as any track meet ever known. Paddock's record performance was all the more remarkable under the circumstances as this was the only event of the day to see a new mark established.

Other Events.

...ROAD JUMP—Won by Hamm, Georgetown, 23 feet 8 inches; second, Stuart, Penn, 23 feet 4¾ inches; third, Bates, Penn State, 23 feet 3¾ inch; fourth, Emery, Kansas, 22 feet 10⅞ inches.

Nine cups, in addition to the three-time trophies, have been offered to date by local enthusiasts for the Mississippi Valley Motorboat regatta here next July, officials of the St. Louis Yacht Club have announced.

The prize list at present includes the Statler, Missouri, Coronado, Melbourne, Chase, American, Mayfair, Cadillac and Oliver Cycle cups. The $5000 Elgin trophy will again be in competition in the 151 class and the Webb trophy of equal value will be offered in the free-for-all division.

MUNY MEDALS AND TROPHIES AWARDED

Individual medals and team trophies were presented to the winners of the Municipal Athletic Association's basketball and soccer leagues at the Marquette Hotel last night.

Team trophies were awarded to group winners and championship teams in both sports. The Angelicas won the soccer championship and the St. Louis U. Blues, Billiken freshman team, won the basketball title.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Nothing New.

FAIRMOUNT is trying out a new starting gate, this week. Two types of this sort were tested during the winter—one at New Orleans and one at Tijuana.

Both were what is known as the "stall" type of gate, in which each horse occupies an enclosure all to himself while lined up with his rivals. The barrier in front of each stall is dropped simultaneously and the rest is then up to horse and jockey.

This plan has one great fault in that the stalls cannot be removed from the track fast enough after the start. It required, by test, 47 seconds to clear the track after the Bradley type of gate was used. That would barely have been time enough to clear the way for the finish of a half-mile race.

While the inventors of these gates are claiming originality for them, the "stall" idea is so far from being new that it was employed at the old Olympic Hippodrome nearly 2500 years ago, as a method of handling chariot races. What is more, the ancients solved the problem of avoiding interference at the finish by placing the gate in a chute. Pindar wrote of 40 chariots in one race being so handled.

The "stall" form of starting gate, however, seems to have died out because it must have proved a failure even 2500 years ago. It will not succeed today because it is fundamentally wrong. A couple of bull whips and the elastic barrier are still the best means of getting excitable thoroughbreds away on approximately equal terms.

It's All in Cycles.

NOW and then amazed discussions arise over the athletic extravaganza which the world is putting on. Apparently the universe or the inhabited part of it has gone dippy over competitive sports and physical development. With the ninth Olympic games revival due in a few months the situation will be even more accentuated.

Old Average Citizen shakes his head ominously, as he dwells on the splendid stadia, costing millions of dollars, going up all over the country; on the schools and colleges, whose students devote as much time and enthusiasm to physical competitions as to mental development; and on the seemingly mad expenditure of millions of dollars by the nonathletic, merely to watch boxing, wrestling, baseball and other sporting contests.

Old Average Man views it as a frenzy the like of which the world never knew.

An Ancient Madness.

HISTORIANS agree that five centuries before Christ the Greek athletic orgy outclassed in all phases the present day sport madness. Then, as now, hippodromes and stadia dotted the entire country. Almost every community had its town race course, athletic field and gymnasium. Private individuals occasionally put on a track meet, offering valuable prizes to the winners, as a sort of after-dinner entertainment in which the guests were the participants. International games were frequent, and an Athenian athletic schedule during the height of the season would have made our Missouri sport schedule look like a kindergarten affair.

The same sports that flourished now, flourished then. Wrestling, boxing, running, leaping, javelin throwing, the pentathlon—all were on the program. Girls as well as boys and men, in many cases, were admitted to certain events.

Were Experts at Training.

PROBABLY everything we know about training and physical culture and much of the technique of both boxing and wrestling were known to the ancients. The wrestlers knew the flying mare, "ground" and "standing" wrestling, the wrist-lock and even the hammerlock, as shown by reliefs on vases and in sculpture. The boxers knew the straight left and the knockout punch and, in contrast to moderns, esteemed it no disgrace to "retire" after a good beating, instead of persisting until flattened beyond recognition.

The struggles, however, were more serious in consequences and, in most cases, the athletes of old, especially the professionals, were far better trained than our own.

That the amateurs were not always rewarded with olive and bay leaves we gather from a list of awards made at one set of Panathenaic games, in which the prizes awarded for the first two positions consisted of a definite number of amphorae, or vases, filled with oil—which had a distinct commercial value.

Winners of the stadion (or sprint race) received 50 vases of oil and the place man only 10. The pentathlon winner received only 30 vases of oil, although he worked five times as hard as the sprint race winner and one of the events in which he competed was this selfsame "stade" race. Wrestling and boxing victories gained 30 amphorae and the Pankration, a combination of wrestling and boxing, gained the victor 40 vases of oil.

In many other instances the amateurs very frankly were given gold and silver drachmae as their rewards of merit.

"All Year" Amateurs.

THIS practice of offering gifts of value for athletic excellence made it possible for the poor athletes of the day to stay in competition. Then, as now, high specialization in the athletic world demanded that athletes do little else except practice and train.

One wonders, then, as men wonder today, how the AMATEUR could afford to put in all his time in practice or competition. The answer to both is the same —then as now they accepted valuable awards which enabled them to live while attaining excellence.

In the ancient days it was done openly and the amateurs could accept "valuable" prizes. Today it is against the amateur rule to accept pay for performances.

But it is being done, just the same. And who will deny that a $10 a day expense allowance, which is within the law today, or the commission on a heavy sale of bonds in return for a golf exhibition is PAY?

Read the Answer.

TODAY those who look on in amazement at the athletic furor wonder how it will end. And, for the answer, they will likewise have to go back to ancient Greece.

It will end in an excess of professionalism and a gradual dying out of athletic ideals—as happened long ago.

But we should worry. It was nearly 1100 years before professionalism and Emperor Theodosius put a stop to the old Olympic games. Sports in this country are still in the first half century of their awakening. If history repeats, we still have more than 1000 years of sports activity in front of us.

A lot of records can be broken in the next 1000 years.

Washington U. Beats Concordia

Washington University defeated Concordia Seminary in a baseball game on Liggett Field yesterday, 9 to 7.

Smith, starting pitcher for the Bears, did the best mound work of the contest, yielding only one run in six innings, while the Bears piled up a good lead.

Heist and Eichler, who followed Smith on the mound, were not so effective and Concordia, staging rallies in the final innings, almost batted out a victory. The teams are scheduled to play again Wednesday.

ST. CHARLES TEAM WINS IN COUNTY TRACK TOURNEY

By DAVISON OBEAR.

Athletes from the St. Charles and Clayton high schools took first honors in the tenth annual St. Louis County High track and field meet at Taylor Field, the new Principia grounds in St. Louis County, yesterday afternoon. St. Charles captured the senior division, while Clayton won in the junior class.

Winners and second-place finishers qualified for the State finals at Columbia next Saturday. St. Charles qualified 12 and Maplewood seven athletes.

The summary of points scored in the senior division is as follows: St. Charles 53; Maplewood 40; Clayton 29; University City, 14; Kirkwood 3; Ritenour 3; Jennings 1. Normandy was the only school failing to score in this division.

Two New Marks.

Clayton won the junior division with a total of 53½ points. The remaining teams finished in the following order: St. Charles 25; Kirkwood 22, Normandy 10½; University City 10½; Maplewood 7½; Jennings 3. Clayton won seven firsts out of a total of 12 events.

Two new league records were established in the senior events yesterday. Bruno of Maplewood bettered the discus record with a throw of 168 feet 4 inches. The former mark of 149 feet 9 inches was held by Jablonsky of Clayton High. Wilke of St. Charles made a new mark in the running high jump, clearing the bar at 6ft¾ inches. The old record of 66 inches was held jointly by Cantwell of Webster and Roemer of University City.

Blanchard Is Senior Star.

Max Blanchard of Maplewood was the individual star in the senior events yesterday. He won the 220-yard dash and tied the county record of 23.1s held by Laughlin of University City. Blanchard also captured first place in the 440-yard dash and helped Maplewood win the 880-yard relay race. In all three events he defeated Meyer of St. Charles who was close behind.

In the junior division Flavin of Clayton captured the individual honors. He scored 13 points, winning the 100 and 220 yards dash events and placing second in the broad jump. Kern, another Clayton junior, won the shot put and javeline throw to count 10 points for the winners.

CHARLES TO FACE STIFF TEST IN RENAULT BOUT

By Damon Kerby.

Two heavyweights who have proved popular attractions in previous appearances in St. Louis, Pierre Charles of Belgium and Jack Renault of Canada, will meet at the Coliseum Tuesday night in the feature 10-round bout of a boxing program sponsored by the Stockham Post of the American Legion.

RENAULT

Renault has fought three times in St. Louis, having met and defeated Romero Rojas of Chile, Jack Adams of St. Louis and Sully Montgomery of Alabama, two years ago, during the regime of Matchmaker Gene Straus. Renault's opponent here Tuesday night, Charles, was held to a draw by Chuck Wiggins in the Belgian's only appearance here, April 3.

Charles was tendered one of the greatest ovations ever given a boxer in a local ring at the conclusion of the bout with Wiggins. His clean work was emphasized by the questionable tactics used by Wiggins, and it was for this reason the fans responded so enthusiastically at the conclusion of the bout.

The Belgian limbered up at the National gymnasium yesterday afternoon following his arrival Friday from Newark, N. J., where Charles increased his knockout list last Tuesday to 34 at the expense of Frank Ferrata. He delivered the winning punch in the first round.

McAuliffe Also on Card.

Charles, with his 207 pounds, probably will have some weight advantage, but this will be evened by the longer experience of Renault, who has taken part in 35 fights during the past nine years. The Belgian is still a youngster with but 37 bouts behind him.

Jack McAuliffe of Detroit, who defeated Battling Levinsky here in the last Stockham Post fight card, will meet Sandy Moore of Chicago, and Jimmy Mahoney, also of Chicago, will go against Tom Pivac of St. Louis in 10-round bouts supporting the Charles-Renault fight. Ray Alfano and Walter "Red" Roland will meet in a six-round preliminary and a four-round opener will be held between Ted Roberts and Tommy Smith.

The boxing show will have the usual admission charge ranging from $4.40 down to $1.10.

CLICK CAPTURES THE $10,000 ABERDEEN STAKES IN MUD AT HAVR

WINNER BEATS FINE FIELD OF JUVENILES IN EASY FASHION

By the Associated Press.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 28.—The $10,000 added Aberdeen stakes for 2-year-olds at four and one-half furlongs was decided here today and the winner turned up in E. B. Byers' chestnut colt, Click, by High Time-Photo, trained by Max Hirsh.

A. P. Canale's High Score was second and Samuel Ross' Too High third.

A field of 12 paraded to the post despite the muddy condition of the track. Peter Snow, breaking from the inside, went to the front at the rise of the barrier but was quickly headed by Click. Chicleight was second and High Score third. At the stretch turn, Click was sent into a four-length lead with High Score second, a length ahead of Chicleight. Click began tiring in the stretch but hung on gamely to maintain his advantage. High Score finished well and stood off Too High's game bid. Chicleight tired and finished fourth, three lengths in advance of Rapid Transit.

Click was the favorite and paid $6.70 for $2 to win.

Flippant Takes Trial Handicap.

The Trial Handicap, secondary offering on the program, drew only four starters. Canter Display and Buddy Bauer being withdrawn. Flippant, racing in the Sage Stable's colors, won the event by two lengths from E. F. Seagram's Sir Harry. Sam Ross' Verdi was third, a neck behind Sir Harry. Nealon Kay was fourth and last, 15 lengths behind Verdi.

Flippant showed fine form in the mud, winning with ease from Sir Harry. Verdi broke first but Flippant collared him at the quarter and won all the way. Sir Harry broke slowly but raced well in the stretch to outgame Verdi for the place. The latter was outraced during the early part of the race but came again in the stretch and hung on gamely. Nealon Kay was always outrun.

Dignus Easily.

The Flash Handicap, second race, went to the good sprinter Dignus. Tuskegee was second and Dust Broom third. Dignus broke fast and won handily all the way. He was eight lengths in front of Tuskegee. The latter was two lengths better than Dust Broom. Reprove brought up the rear.

The feature on Monday's closing day program is the $10,000 added Chesapeake Stakes, for 3-year-olds at one mile and one-sixteenth.

Ping Bodie Released.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 28.—Ping Bodie, veteran of 22 years in baseball and one of the best known Pacific Coast League stars for two decades, was given his unconditional release today by Nick Williams, manager of the Seals.

Bodie will probably place in the Texas League, perhaps with Dallas, it is believed by his friends here.

Petee-Wrack, Non-Winner Last Year, One of Favorites for Kentucky Derby

Petee - Wrack.
NO. 21—DERBY CANDIDATES.

RECORD, BREEDING OF PETEE-WRACK

B. c., 3, by Wrack-Marguerite, by Celt. Owner, J. R. Macomber. Trainer, W. Booth.

Sts.	1st.	2d.	3d.	Won.

Stakes won—Second in Walden Handicap; Pimlico Futurity.

Winter book odds—Preakness, 4 to 1; Derby, 12 to 1.

Petee-Wrack, J. R. Macomber's only entrant in the Kentucky Derby, is rated as one of the best 3-year-olds in the country and a real contender for the 3-year-old crown. Among his achievement last season was a second in the Pimlico Futurity and a second in the Walden Handicap. He is one of the favorites for both the Preakness and Derby.

Petee-Wrack has an unusual record. In nine starts, the colt finished first once, second four times and out of the money on a like number of occasions. The lone victory came last week in his first start as a 3-year-old.

The colt is said to be an exact duplicate of his sire, Wrack. He is built along the same lines and has inherited his daddy's great mud running ability. He was asked to perform on only one muddy course last year but in that race he defeated 13 horses, losing by a head to Glade.

Cost Owner Only $3000.

Petee-Wrack is one of the low-priced horses in the large field of Kentucky Derby candidates. He was purchased by his owner at the Saratoga sales for $3000 and a number of trainers and owners believes the Wrack colt will win eight times that amount this season.

In his 2-year-old races, the colt tired slightly when going a mile but he wintered well and his trainer has been conditioning him over a long route. In two races last year he led up to the stretch, only to be defeated in the final strides.

Petee-Wrack's career started at Saratoga during the summer meeting. In his first effort he ran eighth, nine lengths behind Agitator. In another race at the Spa he was ninth to Dodgson. At the close of Saratoga he was shipped to Belmont Park. While at the Long Island track he showed some great performances against some of the best horses in the country.

In his first start at Belmont, Trainer Booth entered him in an eight-horse race over the five and one-half furlong Widener course. He ran second by a length to Agitator but beat Sublevado. The latter horse defeated Petee-Wrack in his next start, by two lengths.

Fourth in Belmont Futurity.

Petee-Wrack's next race was in the Belmont Futurity. He broke well and ran an even race to take fourth money in a field of 19. He was only beaten by half a length by Anita Peabody, Reigh Count and Victorian.

After the Futurity he was shipped to Pimlico to fill his engagement in the Pimlico Futurity. He was given a workout in a race at six furlongs over the Pimlico course and he ran fourth to Night Life and Polish.

On the day of the running of the Pimlico Futurity, it rained heavily and the track was deep in mud by the time of the calling of the race. Petee-Wrack went to the post a 20 to 1 shot. He picked up 119 pounds and was ridden by Johnny McCoy who had the mount on him in all his previous races, with the exception of his maiden start.

Tres After Fast Pace.

McCoy got him off fast and sent him to the front immediately. He set a fast pace and led until the stretch was reached where he succumbed to the great rush of the filly Glade. He set such a fast pace that he tired from his own efforts and was beaten a head. Petee-Wrack's fast pace caused the winner to run the mile over a muddy track in 1:41 4-5.

To show how fast the race was run Reigh Count defeated Petee-Wrack in his next start, running a mile over a lightning fast course in 1:41, only four-fifths of a second faster than the running of the Pimlico Futurity. Reigh Count beat Petee-Wrack by a head in a hard stretch drive. As in the previous race, Petee-Wrack set the pace but was outrun at the end.

Petee-Wrack will give a good account of himself in the Kentucky Derby if the track is the least bit muddy. His father, Wrack, was one of the greatest mud runners in the history of the turf. He was bred by the Belair Stud.

KNOST IS LIKELY TO APPEAR ON AMATEUR FIGHT CARD, MAY 9

The Motorbus A. C. will hold its last indoor amateur boxing program of the season on Wednesday, May 9, at the Armory, according to Matchmaker George Wilsman, who will endeavor to bring a prominent amateur heavyweight here to oppose Dave Knost in the feature bout.

Al Stillman, finalist at Boston, who probably will make the trip to Amsterdam in the coming Olympic contests, will probably be unable to compete in the coming tournament, due to a broken knuckle on his right hand.

Pro-Amateur Golf Play Tomorrow At Westwood Club

The first monthly pro-amateur golf tournament will be held tomorrow afternoon at the Westwood Country Club course under the auspices of the Missouri Professional Golfers Association. Play will start at 1:30 o'clock.

The pro-amateur tournaments are being revived this year after having been abandoned at the close of the 1926 season. As in previous years, the leading amateurs will be classed as professionals and the others will be allowed three-fourths of their club handicaps.

An entry fee of $5 will be charged to provide prizes. Amateurs will receive merchandise and professionals cash awards.

The weekly golf play of the Women's District Association will open next Friday at the Algonquin Country Club. The first and second flights will start at No. 1 tee and will compete for prizes offered for 18 hole low gross, low net and fewest putts. The third and fourth flights, starting at No. 1 tee, will play for nine hole low gross and 18 hole low net, and fewest putts in nine holes.

The Manion brothers, Jimmy, district amateur champion, and John, who holds the district open title, will participate in an athletic carnival at St. Mary's College in St. Mary's, Kansas, on May 18, 19 and 20. Fifty St. Louis alumni of St. Mary's will attend the meet.

The annual Southern Illinois amateur tournament will be played over the West Frankfort course June 5 to 9, Thomas Dunn, president of the club announced.

Bill Mertz, who has won the championship for the last six years, stated recently that he would not defend his title this year. According to A. C. Hall, president of the Southern Illinois Association, the entry of Harvey Mertz, brother of Bill who was runner up in last year's even has already been received.

Briton Who Beat Hagen 18 Up!

ARCHIE COMPSTON.

Hagen, Beaten by Compston, 18 Up And 17 to Play, Will Attempt to Regain Prestige in British Open

MOOR PARK, ENGLAND, April 28.—Archie Compston, crack British professional, today defeated Walter Hagen, the American star, 18 up and 17 to play in a 72-hole match for a purse of $3750.

Hagen was 14 down at the end of the 36 holes played yesterday, and at the end of the first 18 holes today, Compston had increased his lead to 18.

Although Compston put the finishing touch to Hagen's hope after lunch, the American star struggled to the very last. His 25-foot putt for a birdie 3 on the 55th hole banged against the back of the cup and then bounced out, stopping inches away. Compston's long putt was six inches short.

Hagen Keeps Trying.

"You'll have to sink it, Archie," said Hagen laughingly. Hagen then rolled his ball in and Compston followed, both men getting 4's.

The gallery gave Hagen a burst of applause for his dying effort with the putter, which had almost kept the match alive, although Compston's lead going into the last round was so huge that it was merely a matter of time before the match would end.

Hagen warmly congratulated the British player on the brilliant playing he had displayed, and the two men then continued playing all bye holes as an exhibition match.

Hagen's doom was sealed this morning when Compston picked up four more holes on him. Nevertheless he went to the practice green after lunch with a new putter and tried to run down long ones until called to the tee, where Compston awaited him. Then to show a flash of his fighting spirit, Hagen outdrove Compston on the last hole, one of the few times of the match.

Will Try Comeback.

"I seem to get all the breaks," said Compston. "It would have been a better match if closer."

"Archie, you played magnificently," said Hagen, gallant in defeat.

Compston announced that he was willing to play a return match with Hagen or to take on anybody for a similar distance, a challenge which probably will be accepted by Tommy Armour after the open at Sandwich.

"I'll try to retrieve my reputation at Sandwich," said Hagen later. "I am going there for a week's solid practice." Hagen only arrived in England Wednesday night and golfing followers feel that as soon as he becomes adjusted he will make a better showing.

BOBBY JONES SAYS—

Timing Very Important.

PROBABLY the most important quality of the golf stroke is timing, and certainly it is the hardest to fix and describe. But however difficult to impart the information may be, the player himself has no trouble knowing when his timing is off.

A few days ago, when I had been driving very well, I suddenly became aware that I was not exerting all the power of my stroke upon the ball. Rarely did I meet it at the center of my driver, and on those occasions when I did so meet it, I could put no punch into the shot.

As soon as possible after the discovery of the trouble, I repaired to the practice tee with a bag full of balls, my driver and a pair of willing hands. When I had finished, the balls were noticeably older, the driver was probably not as good as before, and the hands were almost ruined, but I had discovered one more silly way in which I could try to hit a golf ball.

New Faults Appear.

SOMETIMES I wonder if I shall ever progress to the point that I shall develop only familiar faults. If I should do that, I should be happy, for then I might have a cure for all of them. But this time I found that I was doing something I cannot recall having done before, namely, failing to remove my left shoulder from the position which it occupied at the top of the swing.

Of course, the obstruction thus offered by the left side prevented the freedom of movement and the speed of the clubhead, which means power. It also induced a lifting stroke which is the typical hooking swing.

As I discovered what I was doing, I thought about a man whose hooking propensities I had tried to overcome a few days previous. I suggested at the time everything I could think of, without apparently putting my finger on the trouble. I think now I have found the cure for him in my own experience.

THE solution is to turn the left shoulder quickly back from its position at the top of the swing. There must be no sway, but simly a quick turn, the left shoulder initiating the movement of the whole body. This may not be literally true, but it is a good point at which to start.

The hitting stroke, in order to have the flexible speed necessary to power and timing, must be a relaxed effort. There can be no ease of movement if the right side must first get the left out of the way. Let the left shoulder get itself out of the way so that the whole body may turn easily and effectively into the stroke.

GENE STRAUS IS BACK IN FIELD AS MATCHMAKER

A boxing program sponsored by an organization new to the fistic world but arranged by a promoter well known in St. Louis, will be presented here Tuesday night, May 15. On that date Edward E. Walker Post No. 231 of the American Legion will make its debut in mitt circles with a card assembled by Gene Straus, who two years ago was responsible for bringing in a number of the best-known boxers in the profession.

STRAUS

Stars' Park, at Compton and Market street, has been selected as the arena.

Straus revived the tottering fight game in St. Louis following a fiasco presented by an outside promoter. He presented shows which attracted gates grossing as high as $20,000, the average netting between $10,000 and $17,000.

Among the well-known performers whom Straus brought here were Charlie Phil Rosenberg, former bantamweight champion of the world; Lou Perfetti, Sully Montgomery, Romero Rojas—the latter suffering his first knockout in a St. Louis ring—Sid Terris, Basil Galliano, Italian Joe Gans, Babe McCorgary, Harry Feltz, Joey Rivers, Johnny Peewee Kaiser in his ring return, Danny Terris and Jack Renault, the French-Canadian being brought here at a time when Tex Rickard ranked him as third best heavyweight challenger in America, next only after Tunney and Wills.

EAST SIDE MUNY NINES TO OPEN SEASON TODAY

Opening games in the first half split season schedule of the East St. Louis Municipal League are scheduled for this afternoon at Jones Park across the river.

This schedule calls for the Slack Furnitures, defending champions, to meet the Polish National Alliance on Field No. 1, while the Weckermeyer Electrics play the Hinderbergers on Field No. 2. The games are to start at 3 o'clock.

These games start the nine-game first half schedule and the winner of this plays the victor in the second half in a post-season series for the championship.

-:- At Lambert Field -:-

AIR express service between St. Louis and cities on most of the contract mail routes will be inaugurated Tuesday under the provision of a contract between the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, operators of the mail line, and the American Railway Express Co.

For the occasion all of the mail pilots—"Bud" Gurney, Leslie Smith and Eyre H. Sloniger—will be at this end of the route, so that there will be ample facilities for the first shipment. A Whirlwind Travel-Air, a Ryan brougham, and a DH will be used for the northward trip. Express service from the Chicago end will be started on Wednesday.

The new service gives express patrons aerial connections with all the points on the transcontinental air route as well as with Dallas and the cities on the Boston-New York, Los Angeles-Salt Lake City, Cincinnati-Chicago, and Los Angeles-Portland routes. The service is being expanded to include cities on every air route in the country.

Special delivery will be given air express matter. The consignee will be called on the telephone as soon as his shipment has been unloaded and if he is ready for delivery the package will be sent to him by special messenger. The rates range upward from 25 cents the quarter pound, between St. Louis and Chicago, to 65 cents, from St. Louis to Los Angeles.

Anheuser-Busch Buys Plane.

Anheuser-Busch, Inc., has joined the ranks of the big business institutions that use the airplane. A Ryan brougham, purchased for $11,500 last week by Anheuser-Busch from the Von Hoffmann Aircraft Co., is now being painted at Lambert-St. Louis Field along special lines set out by the company—silver wings and red fuselage, with the house emblem on the side—and will be placed in service this week.

Joseph A. Hammer, who has been flying out of Lambert Field for several years, will pilot the ship. According to an official of Anheuser-Busch, it is the first of a fleet to be assembled by the organization for the transportation of its officials and sales representatives. One of the first trips of the new plane will be to Canada and an "NC" designation is to be obtained for the plane from the Department of Commerce.

Uses Travel-Air for Business.

Bill Chaudet, president of the General Brake Service Corporation, another business man who uses an airplane in his work, has his OX-5 Travel-Air all groomed for a trip tomorrow to Richmond, Ind., where he will confer with officials of the Richmond Air Brake Co. Fred Gannett, secretary and general manager, and Carl Van Atsdall, sales manager of the Richmond company, visited the field Thursday and inspected Chaudet's ship. Chaudet himself is a pilot and his wife is taking flying instruction.

E. St. Louis Field Shows Progress.

New buildings are springing up rapidly at Parks Airport, the new 100-acre flying field just south of East St. Louis. The restaurant is already completed and in operation and about 40 students are under instruction of Chief Pilot Clyde Brayton and his assistants.

One of the two 12-ship hangars to be built at the field is already almost complete and the first of four student barracks is under construction. The barracks have quarters for 50 men. A white rock circle, 50 feet in diameter, has been built on the field so that it can be picked up readily from the air, and there is a paved parking space for several hundred automobiles. During the past week an average of 40 visitors a day have been taken for airplane rides, according to an official of the Parks Airlines.

Goes to Wichita for Plane.

George Lea Lambert is at Wichita with Claude Sterling, a Parks Airline pilot, to call for a Siemens-Halske-motored Travel-Air biplane, recently purchased by Lambert. It will be based either at Lambert-St. Louis Field or at Parks Airport.

24 in Aviation Class.

The Von Hoffmann Aircraft Co. night class in aviation now has 24 members. It meets on Tuesday nights at the City Club and is under instruction of Merle Bouse, former civilian instructor at Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill.

One of the Von Hoffmann advanced students, G. C. Youngblove, made a cross country trip last week to his home in Kokomo, Ind. He was accompanied by his instructor, Elmer Lindenberg. Youngblove already has about 30 hours of flying. He is taking a 200-hour instruction course so that at its complet

KENTUCKY IS TO COMPLETE ROAD SYSTEM IN 1928

Gaps in Through Highways to Be Filled and Some Intrastate Routes to Be Finished.

By the Associated Press.

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 28.—Gaps in Kentucky's through highways are to be filled and a number of her intrastate highways will be completed during the 1928-30 biennial period, it was learned from highway department here today. Projects which will complete the Kentucky-Virginia highway from Lexington to the Virginia line through Hazard and to Dixie Highway from Cincinnati to Georgetown through Williamstown and Walton have already been announced, and the road officials are planning to let contracts during the coming two years which will complete the Mayo Trail, shorten the Dixie Highway, and will complete U. S. Highway 68 and 431 from Bardstown to Hopkinsville.

Other Projects.

Other projects that will be advertised will complete the road from Hopkinsville to Reelfoot Lake and will give Louisville to Paducah tourists another hard surfaced route via Bowling Green and Hopkinsville. Completion of a road from Grafsenburg to Lawrenceburg will shorten the distance for tourists traveling from Louisville to Danville, Harrodsburg, Standorf and Mount Vernon.

Completion of the gaps in the Dixie Highway and the Ky.-Va. Highway will give Kentucky a number of hard surfaced through highways, and the road department will center its attention upon the completion of the highways which will connect a number of county seats in the state. The highway department's primary system calls for an eventual connecting of every county seat in the state by hard surfaced roads.

During the past two-years period, the deparment let contracts aggregating $22,000,000 and the revenues are expected to be increased at least two million dollars during the coming period as the gasoline tax has been increasing at the rate of a million dollars a year for the past two years.

Highway officials estimate they will let contracts for eight or nine hundred miles of road during this period and that half of the work will be for hard surfaced roads.

Closing of the gaps of the Mayo Trail call for construction of 51 miles of roads. All of this work will be grade and drain and its completion will give Kentucky mountain residents a 240-mile road from Catlettsburg to Pineville. About 60 miles of the road is hard surfaced and the remainder will be let under contract for surfacing during the biennium.

Mayo Trail Gap.

The first gap in the Mayo Trail is found in Floyd County, a nine-mile stretch that will be let from construction. The second gap extends from the end of the Pike County construction to Jenkins in Letcher County. The third gap to be filled is from Poor Fork to Eolia in Letcher County, an 11-mile stretch. From Harlan to Dione, 17 miles, is the last stretch that will be completed to open the trail from Catlettsburg to Pineville.

At the April 27 letting, a contract will be awarded to complete the Ky.-Va. highway from Lexington through Hazard into Virginia. This gap is in Perry and Breathitt Counties.

Completion of this highway will also enable the Department to give two Kentucky towns their first outlets. A road will be built from Hyden, remote Leslie County town, unreached by rail or highway to the Ky.-Va. highway at a point near Hazard. A road from Dwarf to Hindman will give the latter town its first road connecting it with the outside world.

Another of the April lettings is the project from Mason to Sadieville in Grant and Scott Counties which will open the Dixie Highway from Cincinnati to Georgetown and will shorten the route from Louisville to Cincinnati by more than 20 miles.

Completion of parts of the U. S. Highway 68 in Warren and Logan Counties will give a hard surfaced road from Bardstown to Hopkinsville. This road passes the birthplace of two famous Kentuckians—Abraham Lincoln in LaRue County and Jefferson Davis in Todd County.

Surfacing of the U. S. Highway 31 between Glasgow and Scottsville will give tourists a shorter and better route from Louisville to Nashville by taking the eastern fork of the road at Horse Cave and going through Glasgow and Scottsville. This route will be recommended as the Tennessee road that connects with this road is in much better condition than the road connecting with the highway from Franklin.

STATE TO PAVE 21 MILES OF U. S. 61 SOUTH OF SIKESTON

HIGHWAY ATLASES, STATE HIGHWAY AND CITY MAPS READY AT POST-DISPATCH

ATLASES of the Eastern and Western sections of the United States, individual road maps of the states and a map of St. Louis and vicinity are available at the Post-Dispatch Resort and Travel Bureau, first floor, Post-Dispatch Building, Twelfth and Olive streets.

The atlases are 50 cents each, or 66 cents by first-class mail.

The Eastern states atlas includes the Eastern provinces of Canada, and Missouri. The Western atlas includes Illinois, Kentucky and Tennessee.

The State road maps are 10 cents each, or 12 cents by first-class mail.

The map of St. Louis includes street locations, street car and bus routes, hotels, parks, etc. St. Louis Guides are 25 cents each, or 30 cents by first-class mail.

Project to Cost Approximately $600,000 — U. S. 61 and State No. 32 to Be Connected by Concrete.

With fair weather prevailing in virtually every portion of Missouri the past week, earth roads again are in fair to good condition. Creeks, swollen by heavy rains last week-end, have subsided to their normal level. Gravel roads generally are in good condition.

The Missouri State Highway Commission the past week let the contract for the paving of 21 miles of highway on U. S. 61, south of Sikeston, to the A. A. Davis Co. of Kansas City. This is the major road-building project on the commission's program for this year.

The stretch, which includes a mile of gravel to connect with the town of New Madrid, will cost approximately $600,000, according to Charles D. Matthews, chairman of the Highway Commission. All but a fraction of a mile of the new highway will be in New Madrid County, the short section being in Sikeston, which is in the southern tip of Scott County.

The construction company already is placing equipment along the right-of-way of the road and will begin operations probably by May 1. Work is scheduled to begin at Sikeston and to be carried south from this point.

Clelland Promoted.

S. H. Clelland, for 14 months division engineer for the State Highway Department in the Sikeston office, will be promoted May 1 and will be succeeded by P. H. Daniels. Clelland will become assistant engineer of construction in the construction department at Jefferson City. He succeeded F. B. Newton here. Daniels for three years has been assistant engineer of maintenance in the maintenance department at Jefferson City, and before that was maintenance engineer in division 8 at Springfield.

The changes followed the resignation of L. J. Sverdrup, engineer of the bridge department, to whose position N. R. Sack was promoted.

To Pave Lead Belt Route.

The St. Francois County Court has purchased a right-of-way through the Highley and Waller farms, northwest of Desloge, for a concrete extension of the present Lead Belt Highway to connect with Highway 61, intersecting with the highway about one mile north of Cantwell, Mo. This will provide a concrete connection between 61 and 32 highways, which will be a boon to motorists from St. Louis going to and from the Arcadia Valley and other Ozark resorts.

The State Highway Department expects to let the contract for this construction, approximately one mile in length, in May. At the same time, contracts will be let for a concrete surface on No. 32 highway from the present terminus of the slab in Flat River to a connection with the Lead Belt Highway, and from the south end of the present Lead Belt Highway to a connection with No. 61 south of Flat River, including a concrete bridge over Flat River creek which will carry walks on both sides and be 40 feet in width.

EUROPE PLANNING TO HALT AUTO IMPORTS

British Are Only Lukewarm About Asking U. S. to Cut Foreign Sales.

The campaign started by Italian automobile interests to restrict the growth of imports of American vehicles into Europe is not regarded very seriously in well-informed quarters, a Paris dispatch says.

The proposal is that European manufacturers get together to persuade their American rivals to limit their business on this side of the Atlantic, so both parties may share in growth of sales according to a fixed ratio, or, failing persuasion, to induce their Governments to impose tariffs favorable to European cars and trucks at the expense of America.

This proposal was first made in November in London at the last meeting of the Permanent Bureau of International Constructors of Automobiles, in which builders are represented. It did not receive much support and has not made much headway since, though General Manager Nanni of the Isotta Fraschini Co., Italy's representative in the bureau, intends to raise the question again when the bureau meets in Paris in May.

The French may like the idea, but the British are reported as lukewarm, while in any case it is evident that even if approved by a majority of the bureau, the plan would be almost impossible to carry out.

NEW CAR IDEAS TO BE TESTED ON SPEEDWAY

What Future Will See in Auto Design, Present May Observe on Racers.

What the future will se in passenger car design, the present may observe in the special speed creations now being prepared for the sixteenth annual international 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on May 30.

It is on these models of tomorrow's stock cars that engineers are testing their advanced theories for the improvement of the automobile of today. To make this possible the racers have to be built with different parts and with more individual attention than those built for daily use.

There is a difference in the shape of valves, the shape of the intake and exhaust ports, the motor heads and the manifolds. The metals are of different cast and differently heat treated and there is an experimental air of uncertainty in the race car against the practiced efficiency of the stock car.

The stock car is a problem solved; the race car a problem of future transportation being solved.

"We don't want to learn anything about the car of today," says Earl Cooper, veteran builder for the Marmon specials in the coming race. "We know about it. It is the car of tomorrow in which we are interested.

"We have some engineering ideas we believe are sound. So we are incorporating them in race cars. If the cars go through the gruelling 500-mile contest, which is the equivalent to a year's ordinary driving, the ideas are all right. If they don't we will learn why."

There are no fans on racing cars. Fans are not necessary because the head-on wind encountered by a car traveling faster than 100 miles an hour is much greater than any fan could produce. But in low speeds, in traffic and with a motor idling, there is real necessity for a fan in a passenger car.

There is no muffler on a racing car. A muffler would create back pressure on the engine's working parts, at the excessive speeds traveled. The noise is no drawback on the race course. But a muffler on a passenger car naturally is a necessity.

There is no generator nor self-starter on a race car. One of the principal reasons is to keep down weight. Besides, self-starters are not necessary, since race cars are not frequently starting and stopping. And a generator is unnecessary because of the absence of the self-starter and the fact that electric lights are not used on race cars.

A SHORT AFTERNOON TOUR THROUGH COUNTY

Easy Trip of 46 Miles Is to Spanish Lake Via Riverview Drive.

Now that spring has come bringing with it the incurable motoring epidemic it is well to look over the family car and get it in shape for the usual week-end and Sunday afternoon tours, in which respect St. Louis and vicinity offer many attractive ones.

Perennial praise is sung of the beautiful mountains out west, of the beautiful Imperial Valley, the ever-known Yellowstone Park, the romantic Yosemite Valley and the beautiful mountains in the East. However these are out of reach of the ordinary car owner, but many, perhaps just as attractive tours, are possible in Missouri.

One does not have to drive hundreds of miles to enjoyed nature's unimitable handicraft in creation of scenic beauty. One can find this work in Missouri, in the foothills of the Ozarks, which extend one might say, right up to the outskirts of St. Louis.

There is the serpentine Meramec river valley, the stretch along the Big River, within a few hours travel of St. Louis. Further out one will find the Gasconade, of which fishermen are so enthusiastic. For the guidance on those who desire to spend the week-end or even only Sunday afternoon motoring, the Post-Dispatch will carry in every Sunday auto a guide for tours into Missouri and Illinois. Without any particular reason the trip to Spanish Lake, past the city water works, along the Mississippi through Florissant and return will be directed in this article.

On the assumption that the average driver is familiar with the city streets, the direction to the city limits will be omitted. Starting at the northern end, the Broadway car line, marking this place as zero in the mileage, the driver will take his way porth on the Bellefontaine road to Riverview drive and turn to his right to cross the Burlington tracks to the entrance to Chain of Rocks Park.

If time permits one may stop at the city waterworks and learn how the water is prepared for city use. Four and four-tenths miles from the starting point, one reaches the Riverview Club. Passing this pretty site one reaches at 6.3 miles the Larimore road. Turning to the left here one will pass the Larimore station, where the road turns to the right, running into the Bellefontaine road. Here the speedometer should show a distance of 9.1 miles from the start.

Two miles further on one will reach Spanish Lake and one mile

LOCKHART TRAGEDY CLOUDS U. S. AUTO SPEED VICTORY

Car in Which He "Cracked Up" Was Same That Somersaulted Him Into Sea Last February.

FRANK LOCKHART

Though America the past week emerged victorious from a second attempt to wrest the world's speed title from England, the glory of the feat was dimmed by the tragic death of Frank Lockhart, who on Wednesday lost his life when his Stutz Black Hawk Special "cracked up" on the sands of Daytona Beach. The car was the same one he drove in the International trials in February in which he was injured when the 16-cylinder black streak somersaulted into the ocean.

Lockhart's career as a racing driver was among the most meteoric of any pilot. Coming out of California after several years' training on dirt tracks, he won the 1926 Indianapolis speedway race, which was cut down to 400 miles that year instead of the customary 500 miles, due to rain. He was noted on the speedways for the terrific pace which he always set.

Lockhart was said to have held every American record from one to 100 miles on circular courses. He also held the world's straight-away record for 91½ cubic inch dis-

Elmer C. Henderson to Supervise Financial End — Many Signatures to Petitions.

Elmer C. Henderson, Fulton, Mo., banker, has been named chairman of the Finance Committee of the Citizens' Road Bond Committee of Missouri, Maj. Lloyd C. Stark, general chairman of the group sponsoring the proposed $75,000,000 road bond amendment, said yesterday.

Initiative petitions now are being circulated to place the road bond amendement on the ballot for the November election.

Each of the road divisions will be organized with committees comprised of country chairmen, who in turn are authorized to form county units.

In this manner the entire State will be canvassed for popular subscriptions for funds with which to

Velie "6" Sedan Performs Pleasingly on Test Trip

Good Roadability, Economical Gasoline Consumption, and Speed When Needed Are Characteristics.

BY THE AUTO EDITOR.

New Velie automobile models, displayed here by the Laclede Motor Car Co., the local distributer, carry as a radiator emblem a small nickeled-plated monoplane. Somehow, as one wisks along a country road in the front seat of the car and elaborates upon the airplane idea, there comes to those who some time or other have been "in the air" a feeling that a certain kinship exists between the car and an airplane.

To get this idea over: The engine which powers the Velie is very powerful, and has the low, dull hum of an airplane engine—as a matter of fact a variation of the engine is now being used to power airplanes being built by Velie Motors Corp. Again, the car speeds along virtually noiselessly and with scarcely any vibration at any speed. One skims along over the road with little effort on the part of the driver, for the steering is exceptionally easy to handle and roadability is pleasing.

These things the chronicler observed the past week in a test trip made in a Velie six-cylinder sedan. The car was piloted by O. C. Hazelrigg, president of the Laclede Motor Car Co., the writer acting only as observer during the entire trip.

The car used in the test run was powered by an engine which develops 70 horsepower, at 2500 revolutions per minute, the bore and stroke of it being 3 3-16x4½ inches, respectively. The entire of it, body and engine, was set upon a standard 120-inch wheelbase chassis.

Pleasing among the things the chronicler observed, was the ease with which the car accelerates. Its getaway in first is exceptionally speedy, but its acceleration in the high gear and at high speeds can be characterized as being "instantaneous." Seated next to the driver, one feels that there is always a surplus of speed and power to be utilized at command. The car is easily capable of 65 miles per hour.

Roadability, too, is as near perfect as can be. The body rides on an unusually large spring surface, and rough roads are no barrier to fast driving. An additional aid to easy riding is the form fitting type of seat employed.

In the matter of gasoline consumption, the chronicler found the car exceptionally economical. Between 16 and 17 miles per gallon were averaged on the run which was over a 200-mile route. Ordinary low-test gas, by the way, was used as fuel.

The car used in the test is priced at $1385, delivered in St. Louis. It is only one of several models and types built by Velie. For those who demand a larger, more powerful car, the plant also produced an eight-cylinder car which has had a very favorable reception here.

AUTOS POINTING WAY TO PROSPERITY, SAYS JORDAN

The steel business and the automobile industry are leading the up curve toward another cycle of prosperity in this country, according to Edward S. Jordan, who sums up the automobile situation in three pointed paragraphs.

First. Automobile production in February, exclusive of Ford, was greater than for the same month last year with Ford included.

Second. The industry, exclusive of Ford, produced 325,775 cars and trucks last month, against 221,000 in January and 251,-16 in February last year.

Third. Exports show a marked increase, with January this year nearly 7 per cent ahead of January last year, and more than 50 per cent ahead of January, 1926.

"What is taking place in the industry at large is naturally reflected in the production figures of he individual manufacturers," says Jordan.

NEW GOODRICH PLANT TO BE OPENED MAY 2

Los Angeles Factory Recently Completed at Cost of $3,500,000.

Another great milestone of Western industrial development will have been reached next Wednesday, May 2 when the Pacific Goodrich Rubber Co's. new factory at Los Angeles is officially opened. The great manufacturing plant will employ thousands of persons and add materially to the wealth of the already prosperous hinterland of Los Angeles.

The new factory is built on the Spanish Mission type of architecture, and is in keeping with the other buildings in Los Angeles and vicinity. Ground was broken for the foundation of $1,500,000 structure on Aug. 16, 1927. And seven months from that date on March 16, 1928, the first Goodrich Silvertown cord tire to be made on the Pacific Coast was turned out.

The factory is over a quarter of a mile in length, and is 400 feet wide. It is laid out in the form of a right angle with a Normandy Tower at the vertex, and spreads over six acres of the 46-acre factory site. The most modern machinery is installed in the plant, and the most up-to-date methods of construction are to be employed.

FOREIGN CARS TOO COSTLY

While gasoline is the cheapest major commodity in the United States today, with the single exception of automobiles, the costs per gallon in the following foreign cities are: London, 26 cents; Berlin, 28 cents; Vienna, 29 cents; Brussels, 32 cents; Paris, 32 cents; Mexico City, 38 cents; Zurich, 39 cents; Sidney, 43 cents; Shanghai, 43 cents; Buenos Aires, 44 cents, Madrid, 47 cents; Rio de Janeiro, 50 cents; Rome, 52 cents, and Cape Town, 54 cents.

beyond that the New Jamestown road. Turning to the left here the driver will encounter a steep grade. After reaching the top of the hill the road takes a turn to the right and crosses the railroad bridge. After traveling 1.3 miles from this bridge, one reaches Fort Bellefontaine, the city's institution for boys.

By retracing the route one will reach the Robbins Mill road and turn to his right. Here the speedometer should show 15.2 miles from the starting point. After a few blocks' drive on the Robbins Mill road turn to your left, passing a typical rural schoolhouse to Four Corners, 18 miles from the start. Here one turns to his left onto Hall's Ferry road, reaching Black Jack 1.7 miles from Four Corners, and the Parker road after traveling 1.2 miles from Black Jack.

The Parker road leads into Florissant, where one turns into the Broad road, turning to the left and onto the Natural Bridge road, a distance of 32.2 miles from the Broadway line terminus, the starting point of this tour. The Natural Bridge road leads directly into the city. If one prefers, one may extend the tour by turning down the Bridgeton Station road, but this tour will be described in a later article.

WISCONSIN LAWS PROVIDE FOR NO AUTO SPEED LIMIT

MR. MOTORIST who guides his automobile over the highways of Wisconsin this summer can go just as fast as he wishes.

This is the edict handed down here by the Attorney-General in an opinion asked by a county District Attorney.

The interpretation of the new law was heard with surprise by members of the Legislature, who believe it was understood a maximum speed of 40 miles per hour was meant by the new law.

According to opinion, the law does what many had urged—remove all speed limits and leave the question entirely one of reckless driving.

placement motors, which was set at the Dry Lake (Cal.) course in 1927 when he made 164 miles per hour.

Like several other stars of the Indianapolis classic, Lockhart met his death in later speed attempts. Dario Resta was killed at the Brooklands Speedway, England, in an effort to set a new mark on the course; Jimmy Murphy went to his death at Syracuse, N. Y., on the mile dirt track; while Gaston Chevrolet, a previous winner at Indianapolis, met his death in a speedway race.

At the time of the fatal mishap Wednesday, Lockhart was making an attempt to better the new international speed record set by another American, Ray Keech, who piloted White's 36-cylinder Triplex on Monday of the past week at a faster clip than the Englishman, Malcolm Campbell, drove his Napier-engined Bluebird during the International trials last Feb. 22.

Lockhart was approaching the grandstand at more than 200 miles per hour when his machine appeared to hit a soft spot in the sand. It turned endwise several times, leaped high into the air and made several barrel rolls before landing. Lockhart was thrown out face downward on the sand. He was bleeding heavily from the mouth and about the head when spectators got to him. Physicians said he probably had died a few minutes after being thrown from the car.

The fatal run was the fourth of the day for Lockhart. On his first run he had been clocked at 147 m. p. h. The return trip was made at 193 m. p. h. Starting south on the beach again his little racing machine was timed at 203.45 miles. On the final trip it was apparent he was making more than 200 m. p. h. when the machine went out of control about 500 yards south of the beginning of the mile stretch and directly in front of the grandstands.

Ray Keech, on Monday, drove his giant Tripiex for an average speed of 207.5526 m. p. h., bettering by less than a mile Malcolm Campbell's speed of 206.95 m. p. h., made in his Napier-engined Bluebird.

Evidence that Great Britain will not allow the new American record to rest for another year was given shortly after Keech made his run in a cablegram from Campbell who announced that shortly he will make another official run either at Daytona Beach or at some other fast track.

Keech's car was the same one he drove in the February international trials and which was disqualified at that time because of lack of reverse gear, which later was installed.

MANY PLANTS UNABLE TO MEET CAR DEMAND

Production Continues at High Levels of Past Three Weeks.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, April, 28.— Passenger car production continues at the same high levels of the past two or three weeks with the margin of fluctuation very small. The trend continues slightly upward. The sales situation is generally favorable, with less spottiness evident this week than last. Many producers report enough unfilled orders to assure capacity operations for the next thirty days. The outlook for this branch of the industry continues favorable.

A slight improvement is noted in the truck situation. The light delivery business remain comparatively good, while a better demand for the heavier models has recently made itself evident. As a result output is at a slightly higher level and the feeling through-out this branch of the industry is more optimistic.

Retail tire sales are moving in greater volume. Dealers' stocks have been considerably reduced, and heavy dealer ordering will develop within the next two weeks. Manufacturers are producing actively to meet this situation. No price action is ancipated until after May 15th and very possibly not until later. Original equipment business continues to be heavy.

Peerless Co. Chief Began Career as Stenographer

LEON R. GERMAN

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Peerless Motor Car Co., Leon R. German was elected president of the company. German has been vice president for two years, and since last January has also been general manager.

R. M. Calfee was elected chairman of the board, and three prominent department heads were made vice presidents.

Charles A. Tucker was elected vice president in charge of sales, Albert F. Misch vice president in charge of manufacturing and Fred W. Slack vice president in charge of engineering. Fred A. Trester was elected secretary and treasurer.

The election of German as president of the company adds another name to the list of men who have started at the bottom and carved out important places for themselves in the automotive industry. German went to Detroit to get a who knew where he wanted to go and was not afraid to work hard to get there.

After he finished his studies in the Pontiac, Mich., high school, German wentt o Detroit to get a job. Through efforts he secured a place with an electrical supply house and started with high hopes for a business career. When he had worked a week or more, however, he discovered that the rate of pay was only $3.50 per week and that men who had been with the company for some years were not getting enough to live on.

He promptly quit the job and went back to Pontiac. There he got a place as night clerk in a hotel and utilized his spare hours in the day time in reading law and studying stenography as an aid to his law studies. After some few years during which he acquired not only considerable knowledge of the basic law which he has frequently found of great importance in business, but of human nature as well, in following court proceedings as a stenographer, he was offered and accepted a job in the law library in the Capitol of the State of Michigan in Lansing.

During the time he was in the law library, German not only perfected his knowledge of stenography but had the privilege of attending the hearing of cases in the Supreme Court and forming a considerable acquaintance with prominent attorneys and business men of the State. When a session of the legislature opened a temporary position as a stenographer in the Governor's office German's proficiency as a stenographer and his aquaintance with influential men secured the place for him.

At the conclusion of this temporary opening he had the choice of going back to his regular job or looking for something else, and he chose the alternative of hustling for a new connection which had more opportunity then any political appointment. This connection proved to be an opening as stenographer in the office of the Olds Motor Works and German became identified then with automobile business in 1311.

The start may have been humble, but the opportunity was there for a man who was looking for it and the advancement was fairly rapid. Commencing his automobile experience as stenographer to the comptroller of the company, German became stenographer to the president, then took charge of the Service Department and served in the Credit and Sales Department and as comptroller, returning to the executive office where he became assistant to the president and finally vice president of this General Motors unit.

When control of General Motors Corporation passed from W. C. Durant, Durant organized Durant Motors and German resigned from the Olds to become sales manager for Durant. After putting in a couple of years building the initial sales organization he severed his connection with the company and moved to California; intending to remain there indefinitely.

Urgent call from the Duplex Truck Co. in Lansing, however, brought him back to Michigan and he undertook the sales management of that concern.

In February, 1925, when the management of Peerless was reorganized, German became vice president of the company and in January of the present year was made general manager in addition to being vice president. He adds to executive ability and knowledge of the financial affairs of the company an intimate acquaintance with every department of the business, including sales, service, accounting and manufacturing.

WILLYS-OVERLAND TO OPEN WESTERN PLANT

Los Angeles Assembly to Build Cars for Territory West of Rockies.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, O., April 28.—An assembly plant to take care of Whippet and Willys-Knight cars on the Pacific Coast and in the intermountain territory west of the Rockies will be opened in Los Angeles, Cal., early this summer, according to a statement given out here today by John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland, Inc.

The opening of this new assembly plant has been made necessary by the growth in sales of Whippet and Willys-Knight models in the territory which will be served by this new plant.

This is the first plant, devoted to the assembly of motor cars, to be opened by Willys-Overland, whose sales this year have exceeded those of last year for the same period by 41 per cent.

Distribution of Whippet and Willys-Knight cars on the Pacific Coast is in the hands of the J. C. Leavlee Co., and the present method of handling retail and wholesale distribution of the cars will not be affected by the new assembly plant except as it will facilitate delivery of models in the far western territories.

It was stated by Willys that the production capacity of the new assembly plant will be in the vicinity of 50,000 cars a year and that the operation of the plant will enable the plants at Toledo, Elmira, N. Y., and Pontiac, Mich., to turn out an increasingly large number of cars for shipment to territories east of the Rocky Mountain districts.

CHAMPION PLUGS AID FLYER IN SETTING NEW RECORDS

Maj. Mario de Bernardi, famous Italian flyer, using a standard set of the new Champion aviation spark plugs, recently raised the world speed record for airplanes to 318.63 miles an hour over the Lido air race course, near Venice, Italy. This exceeds, by 20 miles an hour, his own former world record of 298.7 miles an hour, made over the same course last October, with an experimental set of similar spark plugs.

Maj. de Bernardi used the Macchi-Fiat plane which he piloted to his October flight.

FULTON BANKER MAKE ROAD BOND COMMITTEE HEAD

finance the campaign to be made for the road bond issue.

Henderson, as chairman of the finance organization, is acquainted throughout Missouri through his former office as governor for the district of Missouri for Rotary International. He is a director of the Callaway Bank of Fulton, a member of the board of trustees and treasurer of Westminster College and treasurer of the Synod of Missouri of the Presbyterian Church, U. S.

Voluntary circulators who have been obtaining signatures to the road bond petitions report virtually no opposition to their work in all parts of the State. Last week was designated "Road Petition Week," to stimulate the work of getting signers. The results obtained will be available from all congressional districts about the middle of this week. All petitions are being checked at the committee's headquarters at 1405 Federal Commerce Trust Building, St. Louis.

Congressional districts in the lead at the last tabulated report, the fiddle of the past week are as follows: Eighth, 2218; First, 2951; Fifteenth, 2597; Tenth, 2733; Ninth, 2723; Seventh, 1903; Thirteenth, 1800, and Second, 1012.

mobile race cars because it holds its body in the film of oil on the cylinder walls while the motor is racing at 7000 revolutions a minute. The gasoline in the combustion chamber would cut other oils, but the other oils are much better for passenger car use, where working parts are not moving so rapidly.

Ordinary gasoline is the fuel for race cars. It is "hopped up" with "dope," such as may be obtained at any filling station, permitting the use of high compression.

Springs on a race car are not as flexible as on a passenger car. If they were, a driver could not control his car at high speeds. There would be too much action.

Superchargers are used on racing cars today and there is little doubt but that they will be used on passenger cars soon. A supercharger is a fan-like arrangement which builds up pressure to force fuel into the gasoline chamber of a motor. Instead of the motor sucking the gas into the intake ports, it is forced in at a pressure of 25 to 30 pounds.

ROAD BUILDING BEING BOOMED THROUGHOUT U. S.

Construction Program of Various States for 1928 May Exceed Highest Mark on Record.

Road construction in 1928 will at least equal and probably slightly exceed the highest mark recorded in any preceding year, according to reports received by the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture and made public by the bureau.

Improvement of the state and Federal-aid highway systems under the supervision of the highway departments of the several states will go forward during the season now opening with a construction of more than 20,000 miles of surfaced roads and about 8000 miles graded and drained.

The state reports also indicate that at least 240,000 miles of the total of 288,000 in the state highway systems will be maintained this year under the supervision of the state highway departments, a fact which should insure the traveling public a high degree of road service.

Funds estimated as available for expenditure during the year by the state highway departments are about 25 per cent greater in total amount than similar estimates indicated at the beginning of last season. Although it is not possible, so early in the season, to anticipate closely the yield of gasoline and motor vehicle taxes and other sources of revenue, it is pratically certain that the funds available to all state highway departments for construction and maintenance of roads and bridges will exceed $750,000, and local revenues, expendable by county and local authorities, will swell the highway total to upwards of $1,300,000,000.

Details are not available concerning the work done by county and local authorities. It is anticipated that the year's work under state supervision will result in the construction of nearly 9000 miles of hard-surfaced pavements, upwards of 12,000 miles of less expensive surfaced roads, and 8000 miles of road adequately graded and drained.

GAS BEING GOTTEN FROM COAL

A gasoline substitute extracted from coal will be available to motorists within the next few years, according to members of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. This form of power-producing fuel should cost the motorcar owner much less than he is paying now for gasoline, and the same if not better results will be obtained, engineering authorities believe.

OPERATING SPEED OF TRUCKS SHOULD BE RAISED, SAYS BLEIL

Average operating speed is gradually being raised for all types of vehicles throughout the country. Trucks must be made so that they can keep up with the procession of other vehicles, in the opinion of G. Edward Bleil, branch manager here for the Federal Motor Truck Co., who this week announced that his firm has developed the new Model A6 Federal truck to meet this condition.

"The many refinements of the new A6 make it particularly adaptable to what may be called 'light-heavy' delivery," according to Bleil.

"Lending itself to attractive bodies that speak favorably for owners, it still has the size, capacity, power and speed required for the haulage of a great quantity of merchandise.

"The new truck is a 1½-ton capacity, having four-wheel brakes, four-speed transmission and is powered with a six-cylinder engine having a rating of 27.34 horsepower.

"This new truck carries a bevel rear axle. The chassis is available in several sizes, the standard being 151-inch wheel base and the special having 163-inch wheel base," Bleil says.

AUTOBERTH INVENTED FOR USE IN OLDSMOBILE CARS

Full length berths for automobile tourists which take virtually no space to carry and afford perfect sleeping arrangement, is the latest invention to increase the comfort and enjoyment of the millions of automobile tourists this year. The berths are carried inside of the automobile without encroaching on the seat compartment room, can be made up without getting out of the car and are equipped with curtains, thus giving complete privacy.

This new automobile berth has been devised particularly for the Oldsmobile two-door sedan, although it can be adapted to other make cars of the same model. The equipment consists of two single beds, springs, mattresses, ceiling upholstery which forms side curtains for the windows at night, front curtain and dome light.

The complete outfit is carried inside the car securely fastened to the roof. It weighs only 14 pounds and occupies only 1½ inches of headroom. When made up it is self-supporting, therefore not injurious to set cushions or upholstery, and is approximately the size of a full length double bed.

CARS, SHUNTED OVERBOARD, FLOAT ON LAKE MICHIGAN

Boat Captain Tells of Experience With Shipment of Essex Automobiles.

When the steamship Sultana pulled into Chicago recently after a severe storm on Lake Michigan, Capt. David Smith reported a remarkable happening with 42 Essex super-six sedans and coaches which were swept overboard.

Capt. Smith reported that instead of sinking, the cars floated readily amid the high-rolling waves and could be seen still afloat as the ship traveled out of sight. As they were closed cars, tightly constructed and with all doors and windows closed, his theory is that the air within the bodies was sufficient to float them until waves should break the window glass or capsize the whole automobile in the wave troughs.

The cars were on their way—the season's first water shipment—to the Hudson Motor Co. of Illinois. The cars were insured, and J. R. Histed, general manager and vice president of the concern, was scarcely down-hearted at all about the incident. Instead, he said:

"This is just a bit out of the usual as a demonstration, but there are certain distinctive things about those Essex cars which would simply make them float. The construction is so tight, the doors and windows are so snug, that the air supply would be retained for hours. Essex bodies are much similar to steel ships in their construction."

G. M. FIRST QUARTER EARNINGS

Commenting upon the corporation's earnings for the three months ended March 31, 1928, Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president of General Motors, the past week said:

"Net earnings of General Motors Corporation, including equities in the undivided profits of subsidiary operations not consolidated, for the first quarter ended March 31, 1928, were $69,468,576. This compares with $52,551,408 for the corresponding period a year ago—an increase of $16,917,168. After deducting dividends on preferred and debenture stock amounting to $2,350,919, there remains $67,117,657, being the amount earned on the common shares outstanding. This is equivalent to $3.86 per share on the common stock, as against $2.90 for the first quarter of 1927 calculated on a comparable basis.

Gardner Chiefs and New Memphis Distributer

GARDNER EXPANDS DEALER ORGANIZATION IN SOUTH

New Memphis Franchise Will Necessitate 5000 Yearly Increase in Output.

A revision and expansion of dealer distributing organization, involving a great portion of several states in Southern territory, was announced this week by Russell E. Gardner Jr., president of Gardner Motor Co. Inc.

The announcement was made following a conference between Gardner officials and Iver Schmidt, president of the Automobile Sales Co. of Memphis, Tenn., whose large dealer organization in Central Southern States forms the nucleus of the enlarged Gardner dealer organization in the South.

In this expanded territory are such dealer points as Little Rock, New Orleans, Marshall, Tex., Natchez, Nashville and Birmingham.

In the conference with Iver Schmidt, Memphis distributer, were President Gardner, F. H. Rengers, Gardner sales manager, and Arthur A. Blumeyer, St. Louis banker and fiscal adviser to the Automobile Sales Co. Following the conference, Gardner announced that factory production was being increased 5000 units yearly, to handle distribution through the Memphis agency.

"My dealer organization," Schmidt declared, "will form the nucleus of a giant retail system to distribute Gardner eights throughout the South. Formation of this network over the states will be started just as soon as necessary arrangements can be completed."

Schmidt immediately placed orders for 140 Gardner cars, comprising the various types of the three series of eights-in-line, manufactured by Gardner exclusively. Within the last three days, according to Gardner officials, the order was increased for 135 additional cars.

HARRY HARTZ MAY NOT BE ABLE TO ENTER SPEED RACE

HARRY HARTZ, speedway champion of 1926, may not be able to enter the International 500-mile race to be held here as usual on May 30, it became known today.

He is now recuperating in a Massachusetts hospital from injuries on the Rockingham board bowl last fall and it is doubtful whether he ever again will go to the starting line in a racing car.

It is the first accident in which Hartz, who began driving cyclecars in his short trouser days, ever was injured. Physicians say it will be necessary for Hartz to put himself to the test to see whether or not his first big mishap will prevent him from driving again. It will be many weeks before he can make his decision, but if he does return to the track it will not be before the 500-mile race in May.

TELLS HOW TO ELIMINATE CRANKSHAFT VIBRATIONS

Earl Smith Describes Six "Throws" in New Oldsmobile Crank Assembly.

Centuries ago it was discovered that pieces of metal had certain vibration points, that is they would vibrate in harmony with impulses having the same, or critical, period. When vibrated a sound was forthcoming. This discovery resulted in the invention of the turning fork, which was beneficial. In later days, however, these vibrations made themselves apparent in automobile engines, which was a nuisance.

The crankshaft is the core of an automobile engine. It receives each blow of the gasoline explosions and transforms it into an even flow of power which is transmitted to the propeller shaft and wheels.

Revolving at a high rate of speed, sometimes above 3000 revolutions per minute, and receiving in a six-cylinder engine three explosive power impulses per revolution, the crankshaft is subjected to various vibratory stresses. As engines have been improved counterweights and vibration dampeners have been added to crankshafts to eliminate this condition. Recently it has been found possible to obtain the desired results without the use of these weights and dampeners.

One of the automobiles that has obtained a smooth operating crankshaft by means of design rather than by adding accessories is the new Oldsmobile. How this has been accomplished is told by Earl H. Smith, Oldsmobile experimental engineer.

"By mathematical computations," said Smith, "we designed the six 'throws' of the crankshaft in curves, each with its center of gravity in the true center of the axis of the crankshaft. Our method of machining both main and connecting rod bearings held this center of gravity. By this method we obtain both static and dynamic balance without use of counterweights. Every Oldsmobile crankshaft is tested on a special machine which shows the slightest deviation from balance and any unbalance is corrected.

REO OUTPUT AND SALES HIGH

The Reo Motor Car Co. reports that both production and shipments are running at the highest rate in the company's history.

Production reached a new all-time peak on Monday of this week, when 285 Flying Clouds, Wolverines and Speed Wagons were built. It is anticipated that by the end of this week production and shipments will be running at a rate of 300 daily.

GOVERNMENT TESTS GIVE CHRYSLERS HIGH RATING

It has recently been learned from authoritative sources, according to L. M. Stewart, president of Midwest Motors, Inc., Chrysler distributor, that exhaustive tests just completed by the Motor Transport Division of the United States Army have resulted in an exceptionally high rating for Chrysler cars in performance, economy and durability.

"The tests have been under way for about 14 months. During this time two Chrysler touring cars of the "50" and "60" models have been driven day after day in all kinds of weather and over every kind of road by various drivers who were mostly private soldiers in the army, and none of whom had any especial familiarity with Chryslers. In the entire period of 14 months each car covered a total distance of 30,000 miles," Stewart says.

"Advices reaching the Chrysler Corp. state that itemized charges for all expenses during the 14 months test, including fuel, oil, labor, parts, tires and depreciation resulted in a total cost per car mile of less than three and a half cents for the model "50" and under three and nine-tenths cents for the model "60."

Army engineers at Camp Holabird, Md., kept a painstakingly close check of the performance of the two cars throughout the entire trial. Each car was charged with all operating expenses and depreciation according to fixed schedules laid down by the Government for application to all cars tested. At the end of 15,000 and 30,000 miles the cars were torn down and inspected and the cost of these two minute inspections of every part was included in operating expenses under the heading of labor.

CADILLAC DISTRIBUTERS USING NEW SERVICE PLAN

Automobile service clinics held in 29 key cities have been the basis for the introduction of a radically new and direct method now in use by the Cadillac-LaSalle distributers throughout the United States for deciding the service requirements of a car prior to its being sent to the shop.

The new system of diagnosis for service requirements has all the advantages of mathematical precision which already are in force in automobile engineering and manufacturing. It is more exact than the diagnosis of human ills because it deals with mechanical parts having known qualities and functions.

CAR MOTOR USED TO SCARE WILD BEASTS

General Motors African Expedition Hits Upon Curious Fact.

A curious fact coming to light with the start of a 10,000-mile motor trail-blazing trip through Africa is the discovery of a hitherto unknown device of protection and immunity from wild beasts.

The trip was begun from Cape Town. It is being sponsored by General Motors of South Africa, Ltd., and was planned for motor testing purposes. The expedition consists of four adventurers—a journalist, a motion picture photographer, an amateur radio operator and a non-professional driver—in two Chevrolet stock cars, a sedan and a truck. The latter is equipped with radio sending apparatus with the call letters A8M.

The route of the tour extends from the Southern-most tip of Africa to Cairo, thence through the Near East to Europe, terminating at Stockholm. There is a stretch of about 1000 miles of unmapped jungle country through which the motorists will endeavor to blaze a new motor trail.

They will pass through one section where they might be molested by lions and it is here they will use the newly discovered device to keep wild beasts away at night. This protective device is merely the starting of the automobile motor. Capt. C. V. H. Lacey, who is directing the expedition, on a recent motor trip in Africa, frightened away lions at night on five different occasions simply by starting up his motor.

Members of the expedition are keeping in touch with the world by radio. The messages are picked up at Fort Elizabeth, where the General Motors plant is located, and relayed by cable to the office of J. D. Mooney, president of the General Motors Export Co. in New York.

The last reports came from Tanganyika Territory in East Africa. Heavy rains were reported and the going was extremely bad, according to the messages. African rains are a great handicap to motorists as most of the streams are unbridged.

The crossing of streams is accomplished with the help of pontoons consisting of native canoes hollowed out of tree trunks. These canoes are used to support a platform built of native timber or bamboo, lashed together with "chingwe" or bark of trees. Over the smaller streams the party will be forced to build bridges of logs and brushwood. One of the difficulties they will contend with will be the famous African "pot-holes" which appear following heavy rains.

If the party is able to make its schedule, they will be in Cairo 40 days after the start of the run. They will proceed to Palestine, Syria, Turkey in Asia and then will cross the Bosporus to Constantinople. Later, Bucharest, Belgrade, Milan and Paris will be visited. The Calais-Dover route will be used in crossing the English Channel en route to London. From London the expedition will return to the Continent, going first to Antwerp, and then to Berlin and Copenhagen ending at Stockholm.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY SCOUTS

Training Camp for Scout Officers to Be Opened Friday for Three Days.

A week-end training camp for scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, and troop committeemen of the St. Louis City and County Boy Scout troops will be held next Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Irondale Reservation, the official camp of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council. The camp will be the second outing held by the local organization at Irondale this year. There are 175 junior assistants, senior patrol leaders, patrol leaders, assistant patrol leaders, scribes and other non-commissioned boy officers of the local troops in a similar camp this week-end.

These officers' camps, which have been held every spring for the last four years, combine recreation and education. All points in training to be emphasized are brought out in games and contests. The subjects taken up are nature study in all its branches, pioneering, camping, cooking, tracking and woodcraft.

The non-commissioned officers' camp this week-end is employing the same principle: showing the boy how the activities of his office may best be accomplished through the co-operation of the other scouts and giving him ideas that he may pass on to his comrades for the betterment of the whole troop.

The leaders will leave Union Station on a special Missouri Pacific train Friday evening at 5:30 o'clock, occupy the main cabin camp at Irondale and return Sunday evening. For those unable to take the special trains, arrangements have been made to have three Saturday trains, leaving St. Louis at 9:05 a. m., 2:10 p. m. and 5:15 p. m., make special stops at Irondale, to accommodate any scoutmaster who may wish to get off there. The cose of the three-day trip, including transportation, is $5.

It is expected nearly 200 will attend the camp. Further information concerning the trip may be obtained at local boy scout headquarters, 505 Chemical Building.

Troop Notes

North District.

A special meeting of all scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, and troop committeemen of the North District will be held at the Sherman Park Community Center, Easton avenue and Kingshighway, at 7:30 o'clock tomorrow evening. Headquarters has requested every North District troop to be represented by at least one man, as several important matters are to be discussed.

The Scouts of Troop 3, of the Grace Holy Cross Church, are spending their spare time working on camparall projects. Eighteen scouts and 10 visitors were at the last meeting of the troop. Former Assistant Scoutmaster Dave Kelly was at the meeting, and signed up as an associate scout. Preparations are being made for re-registration.

Scout George Stojan of Troop 42 was presented a Marine band harmonica last Thursday as first prize in a contest staged by that troop for selling the greatest number of circus tickets. Scout Stojan also won the contest last year, receiving a new scout handbook. Several games, including relay races, leap frog, antelope race, scout salute and others, were played by the troop at the meeting, under the direction of Assistant Scoutmaster Junghans and Scout William Miller. Plans are being made for a troop supper in the near future. Scout James Van Forsan has been appointed troop reporter.

A meeting of the officers of Troop 83, of the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, was held at the home of Scoutmaster Schroeder Wednesday evening. New plans for troop activities were laid, especially in regard to the coming camparall, on which the scouts are now working. Two new boys joined the troop at the last meeting.

Forty boys of Troop 88, of the Salem Evangelical Church, re-registered a week ago Friday, and 15 more registered Friday. Several talks were given, one by former Scoutmaster Bull, in which he encouraged the scouts to go out after more tests and merit badges. Field Executive Hotchkiss spoke on camp and on attendance at meetings. The new troop committee was introduced to the scouts, and their duties assigned. Camparall plans were discussed at a patrol meeting.

Assistant Patrol Leader William Guetbier of the Beaver patrol of Troop 149 has been made assistant patrol leader of the Wolves, and Scout Taylor Murphy has been made assistant patrol leader of the Fox patrol. The Beavers have added a new member, Ralph Frebensizer, to their patrol. Three scouts, William Guetbier, Carlo Koenig and Louis Biery, have signed up for camp. An individual and inter-patrol contest being staged by the troop is now more than half over. In the last two events Scout Charles Beardsley won a harmonica contest, and the Beavers won two fire-by-friction races.

Nineteen scouts and one visitor were present at the last meeting of Troop 161 of the Webster School, and participated in games which were played after test passing was concluded. Yells were practiced after the games, Scout Irvin Weisman acting as cheer leader in the absence of Scout Karl Kripplaben, the regular leader. Scoutmaster Kripplaben was in charge of the meeting, closing it with the scoutmaster's benediction.

South District.

Troop 37, of the Hodgen School, reregistered Thursday evening, with 15 scouts. J. C. Chumchal is the new scoutmaster of the troop. The troop formerly met at the Compton Heights Christian Church.

The Flying Eagle Patrol was returned winner in an interpatrol contest carried on by Troop 63, of the Oak Hill Presbyterian Church, for the last five weeks. The Black Bear Patrol came second, the Panther third and the Moose fourth. One of the projects, making types of fires, was considered to have brought out unusually good work. The troop has registered so many new recruits that it will be necessary to form a new patrol. Field Executive Shippey spoke on camp at the last meeting, illustrating his talk with motion pictures of Irondale.

The investiture ceremony for the boyology training course being conducted by the Knights of Columbus was put on by Troop 76, of the Winnebago Presbyterian Church, Wednesday evening. Plans are being laid by this troop for the coming camparall. Twenty-six scouts went on an industrial hike to the Pevely dairy recently.

Four tenderfoot and three second-class badges were presented to scouts at an investiture ceremony conducted by Chairman Judge Pearcy of the Troop Committee of Troop 77 at a parents' night held by the troop last week. Each patrol gave a play or put on a scouting demonstration, and Field Executive Shippey showed motion pictures of Camp Irondale. Two new members were voted into the troop. Twenty-three tests were passed by the 22 scouts who attended a recent hike of the troop.

Twenty-six scouts reregistered in Troop 91, of the Compton Hill Congregational Church last week. The Troop Committee for this year is composed of William H. Walker, chairman; J. H. Castleman, H. C. Blum, O. J. Erlanger and W. L. Punsky. The troop is working for the camparall.

A meeting of the Troop Committeel of Troop 117, of the Markham Memorial Presbyterian Church, was held Monday evening, the duties of each member being assigned and discussed. Activities were outlined for the coming year, ways and means of making the troop and institution more valuable to each other were discussed, and a policy of co-operation was adopted. Assistant Field Executive Carl Laemmli from headquarters attended the meeting.

A section leaders' and patrol leaders' contest staged by Troop 198 ended last Wednesday evening, the winners receiving half of their necessary expense to the noncommissioned officers' camp at Irondale. A bow and arrow contest, both in building and use of the weapons, will end Wednesday evening. Selection of the eight boys who will represent the troop in the camaparall will be made soon.

West District.

Plans for participation in the annual Scoutmasters' Week-End Camp were laid at a meeting of the Diamond W. Troop, the official West District scout leaders' association, at the Union Avenue Christian Church last Monday evening. The coming camaparall was discussed.

A new Boy Scout troop is being organized at the Elias Michael School for Crippled Children, at Forest Park and Euclid avenues, under the sponsorship of the Parent-Teachers' Association of this school. L. V. Cox, president of the association, is organizing the troop.

Eight boys of Troop 2, of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, are attending the noncommissioned officers' week-end camp at Irondale this week-end. They are Fullerton Luedde, Henry Luedde, Harold Clover, Fred Heuser, Fred McAvoy, Bob Roth, James DeLano and Art Atkinson. Junior Assistant Art Atkinson is in charge of the group, and will make a report on the camp next Friday evening.

The Crow Patrol of Troop 5, of the West Presbyterian Church, led by Patrol Leader Dick Frank, won a competitive and advancement contest staged by the troop. The Elk patrol, led by Will Coats, ran a fairly close second, just nosing out the Panthers, under Patrol Leader Noble Parsonage. Scouts Palmer Vincent Spurr, Vincent Gormann, Louis Troobridge and Robert Anderson joined the Campers' Saving Club after hearing a talk on camp by Field Executive Reaves. Seventeen scouts and two leaders are attending the Parol Leaders' Week-End at Irondale.

An observation hike to Forest Park was taken by Troop 59, of the Eden Immanuel Evangelical Church, a week ago Friday. The troop hiked from the church to the park, and returned by a different route. The next edition of "The Yell," the troop's official publication, will be issued next Friday. The troop is working to develop a first-class patrol for participation in the camparall.

A demonstration of scouting activities will be put on by Troop 94, of the St. Barbara's Catholic Church, at the parish house May 15. Committeemen Peterman and Kurz, Assistant Scoutmaster Wehmeyer, and Junior Assistants Harry Wehmeyer and Robert Furlong are attending the "Boyology" course being given by the Knights of Columbus.

Troop 75 is planning to hold a bird-study hike today, and a treasure hunt next Wednesday evening, under the direction of Scoutmaster John A. Gifford. A number of advancements have occurred in this troop, Scouts Richard Osborn and Robert Hilliard each having earned several merit badges, Scout Harold Hilliard becoming a second-class scout and Scout Ercie Kent passing two second-class tests.

Suburban District.

The scouts of Webster Groves 9 of the Webster Community House are planning to present Scout Charles Fernald with an Eagle Scout ring, in honor of his reaching the Eagle rank. The troop committee attended the meetings of the scouts a week ago, Friday evening, and promised its support to the camparall plans the troop is making in an attempt to retain possession of the suburban district flag won last year.

A new scout troop is being organized at St. John's Evangelical Church in St. Charles under the scoutmastership of Edwin Werner, who was a scout for seeyral years. The troop, which is sponsored by the St. John's Brotherhood, meets on Tuesday evenings.

TROOP 139 UP IN THE AIR

First Scout Organization to Fly Over St. Louis.

Troop 139 of the Meramec School declares it is the first Boy Scout troop in St. Louis to take an airplane tour over the city as a troop, every member of the organization having made a flight last Saturday afternoon at Lindbergh Field.

Arrangements were made by Troop Committeeman Charles Endermuhle with one of the aircraft companies there to take the scouts up in groups of five in a Ryan monoplane.

BOY SCOUT EXAMINATIONS

Tests for First-Class Rank Or Merit Badges This Week.

District Boards of Review, to examine Boy Scout candidates for first-class rank or for the merit badges of camping, athletics, pioneering or bird study, will be held in each of the districts under the local Scout Council this week, headquarters has announced.

The South District Board will meet at the Fanning School tomorrow evening, the North District at the Farragut School Tuesday, the suburban district at the Webster Groves High School Wednesday, and the West District at the Clark School Thursday. All scouts who have applications pending on the subjects of firemanship, personal health and public health which were signed prior to March 25, also must appear before these boards in order to win their badges.

CITY DIVIDED IN 26 DISTRICTS FOR PLAYGROUND CONTEST

Association Hopes to Have 1000 Backyard Recreation Centers to Compete for Prizes.

In a neffort to have 1000 backyard playgrounds in a contest to be fostered by the Park and Playground Association this summer, the city has been divided into 26 districts, each of which will be worked intensively to arouse interest among children in the project.

Five hundred play centers in yards of homes were entered in the contest last year. It was estimated that in these centers, 5000 children played during the summer months, keeping them off the streets and from attendant dangers.

Other plans of the association for this summer include supervision of play on vacant lots and other playgrounds; supervised street play, and various forms of educational work.

A campaign to raise $22,678 with which to provide for the association's budget now is being conducted.

200 HORSES TO BE IN ANNUAL PARADE OF HUMANE SOCIETY

Will March Past Children's and Shriners' Hospital Judging Grounds in Forest Park.

More than 200 horses, representing about 15 classes, will take part in the annual parade sponsored by the Humane Society of Missouri on May 12.

The parade will form in West Pine boulevard, west of Grand boulevard, and will follow a route westward past the Children's Hospital and the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children to the Mounted District parade grounds in Forest Park, where the horses will be judged and prizes awarded.

Included in the parade will be the Mounted Patrol of Overland Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts, and imported donkeys from the August A. Busch stables. Music will be supplied by the Sixth Infantry Band from Jefferson Barracks. Entries for the parade should be addressed to Humane Society headquarters, 1610 Carr street.

DEAN OF MEDICAL SCHOOL TO LECTURE ON HYGIENE

The Rev. Schwettala Will Be Last Speaker in Knights of Columbus Course.

The Rev. Alphonse Schwettala, S. J., dean of the St. Louis University School of Medicine, will deliver an address at 2:30 p. m. today at Sodality Hall, 15 North Grand boulevard, in connection with the "Boyology" Course being conducted by the Knights of Columbus.

The Rev. Schwettala will cover social hygiene and sex questions in his address. The course closes tomorrow evening with a dinner at the Elks Club at which certificates will be issued to the 500 men who have completed the course. Msgr. J. J. Tannrath will be the speaker at the dinner.

NEW INTERNATIONAL TRUCK NOW BEING DISPLAYED HERE

The new Six-Speed Special, on display here at the St. Louis branch of the International Harvester territory last week, has attracted an unusually large amount of interest among St. Louis truck owners.

The truck derives its name from the fact that there are six forward and two reverse speeds, thus giving the chassis power, smoothness, and sturdiness with all the advantages of the economical four-cylinder motor.

It is actually two trucks in one, since the low range lever can be omitted from the chassis, making the chassis a conventional one-ton fast delivery truck or the high range can be cut out entirely for tractor and other heavier duty work, requiring a maximum speed of 18 to 20 miles per hour.

Models are being shown in St. Louis with eight-foot stake bodies, full length top express bodies, and one-yard, roll-off dump bodies, and demonstrations made for several local contractors in the last few days, have surprised large groups of spectators everywhere.

The new truck is over $400 lower in price than any one-ton previously offered by the International Harvester Co., and embodies all the quality and sturdiness which have made this line one of the leaders in the truck field for many years.

The local management of the International branch here reports that their business is substantially increased for the first quarter of the same period last year and, with the announcement of this new one-ton model, they expect a record-breaking year for the St. Louis branch.

WESTINGHOUSE BRAKES SUCCESSFULLY TESTED

"Many of the states are adopting strict regulations in regard to motor car braking efficiency," says Geo. Krause, local Chandler distributer, "one in particular being the State of California.

"A Chandler Six Sporster equipped with Westinghouse vacuum brakes was put through a rigid test for brakes in that State the other day, and it is gratifying to Chandler officials to hear of the high efficiency that the car showed in the test.

"The Chandler was tested by Charles D. Stromgren, patentee of several stating devices and engineer in research and experimental work in Los Angeles; Mr. Moses of the Automobile Club of Southern California, as well as W. P. Hoffman, Jr. of Los Angeles, Cal., Chandler distributer's headquarters.

"A Tapley brake testing meter was used for the test. This brake meter is a most interesting example of modern engineering equipment. The basic principle involved is that a plumb bob hangs vertically. The meter may be calibrated to show the number of feet required to stop a vehicle at any given speed to which it is attached," Krause says.

WIL Reported Preparing to Move Antenna

It is reported that the management of Station WIL, which has established studios in the Hotel Melbourne, plans to move its antenna from the roof of the Missouri Hotel to the top of the Melbourne, at Lindell and Grand boulevards.

KMOX is on the 299-meter wave length. WIL broadcasts on the 258-meter channel. KWK uses the 234-meter channel.

With their antenna located as now—KMOX's in Kirkwood; WIL's at Eleventh street and Locust, and KWK's on the roof of the Hotel Chase, at Lindell and Kingshighway—many listeners have difficulty in separating these three stations completely.

If WIL moves its antenna to Lindell and Grand, many listeners in that part of the city are likely to have difficulty in tuning in KMOX or even KWK.

At top, left to right: MICHEL GUSIKOFF, former concert master of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, who is to be a soloist in the Eveready Hour over KSD next Tuesday night; JEANNE GORDON, operatic contralto, who sings in the Atwater Kent concert over KSD tonight; EDWIN FRANKO GOLDMAN, whose band will give the General Motors program over KSD tomorrow night; MARGUERITE NAMARA, soloist in the Maxwell Hour over KSD Thursday night.

Goldman Band on Air for Hour

Edwin Franko Goldman and his "Symphony in Brass" band will give the entire program in the General Motors family party over KSD tomorrow night. This popular conductor's band had been heard by 1,500,000 persons each season for four years in his open-air concerts in New York prior to his engagement for the big automotive network last fall. Since then he has been heard by many millions more on the air. But Monday will be the first time when the General Motors Hour has been devoted wholly to his band.

Goldman has become almost an institution in New York. Sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim and Mr. and Mrs. Murry Guggenheim, who early showed their faith in Goldman's genius as a conductor, his band has played concerts to New York throngs in Central Park and in Columbia and New York University grounds for nine years.

At the end of each season Goldman has been given a banquet and presented with a "token of appreciation" by city officials and civic organizations until he is the pos-

Gusikoff in Eveready Hour Tuesday Night

A former St. Louis musician, Michel Gusikoff, who was concert master of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra and also of the Philadelphia Symphony, is to be a soloist in next Tuesday night's Eveready hour over KSD. Gusikoff is to play the first movement from the Saint-Saen's violin concerto in B minor and two other numbers.

Honors in the Eveready hour will be shared with Gusikoff by Frederick Gunster, a tenor who has won a reputation in concert and recital and as soloist with some of this country's principal musical organizations. Gunster is to sing two groups of songs by Schubert, Schumann and Greig. Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla" overture, the Ride of the Valkyries from Wagner's opera, and other works will be played by the Eveready orchestra conducted by Nathaniel Shilkret.

Time Change For All KSD Chain Features

A complete change in the time schedule of KSD goes into effect today, due to New York City going on daylight saving time. Through a rearrangement of hours with KFUO, it has been possible to save virtually all of the KSD chain features and to add the biblical drama Sunday night, beginning tonight at 8:15 with "Easter.' But the broadcasting time of each feature advances an hour.

KFUO gives up the hour between 6 and 7 p. m. weekdays and takes the time after 9 p. m. instead. The only exceptions to this arrangement are in the case of the grand opera Wednesday nights, which is to continue until concluded at 9:30 and the biblical drama, which is to conclude at 9:15.

The nightly broadcasting by KSD of New York dance music will be done away with, except from 8:30 to 9 Tuesday and Thursday nights and 8 to 9 Saturday night.

This arrangement with KFUO saves for listeners in this part of the Middle West the Great Moments in History and A & P Gypsies on Monday evenings; Musical Miniatures and Seiberling Singers on Tuesday evenings; Crowell Publishing Co. hour on Wednesdays; Dodge and Hoover programs on Thursdays; Cities Service hour on Fridays, and the Mediterraneans on Saturday evenings.

OLD CIRCUS CLOWN TO BE CENTER OF NEW RADIO SERIES

"Bob" Sherwood, the last of Barnum's clowns, is to play the leading role in a dramatized version of his circus life "Under the Big Top," in a new series of programs called the "Dixie Circus," which is to be broadcast over WJZ, KWK and other NBC stations Friday evenings at 5:30, beginning May 4.

Sherwood ran away to join a circus when he was nine years old. He is now 72 years old, and has been retired for years, but he spent more than 50 years with the big circuses.

127 A New Standard in A-C Radio Tubes

AT LAST—here is an A-C Tube with long life and quick reception—two things you have hoped for in A-C Tubes.

Now you can have real radio reception—electrically!

The ARCTURUS 127 A-C Radio Tube, having these exclusive features—longer life, quicker reception and better tone qualities—leads all other A-C Tubes on the market. It is a five-prong replacement tube of 2.5 volts.

TWO DISTINCT ADVANTAGES

Long Life
Several thousand hours is not an unusual record for the life of ARCTURUS A-C Tubes. Short life has been the big problem of A-C tubes.

Quicker Reception
Seconds after turning on your radio, reception begins—with ARCTURUS 127 Tubes. This is about half the time lag of other tubes.

Your Dealer carries Arcturus 127 Tubes. Get them from him—or write us direct, mentioning your Dealer's name, if he can't supply you.

Namara Will Be Soloist in Maxwell Hour

Thursday night's Maxwell hour over KSD will bring Marguerite Namara, operatic, concert and musical comedy soprano, as soloist.

Miss Namara was born in Cleveland, O., but soon her family went to California, and there she spent her girlhood. At the age of 17 she made an operatic debut as Marguerite in "Faust" in Genoa, where she had gone to study. In this role she was discovered by Henry Russell and brought back to be prima donna of the new Boston Opera Company.

Shortly after her return she left the opera to star in "Alone at Last," a Lehar operetta. When this closed, Miss Namara for a time devoted herself to concert work, touring America, England and the Continent. Then came an engagement with the Chicago Opera Company.

From there she went to the Opera Comique in Paris as prima donna, appearing in "La Boheme," "Tosca," "Manon" and "La Traviata." She returned to Broadway as Yum Yum in the Shubert production of "The Mikado," and the next year sang in "Pinafore."

In the Maxwell Hour Miss Namara will sing "Ah, fors e lui," from "La Traviata," "Aquarelles," by Debussy, under whom Miss Namara studied in Paris; Kahn's "Beloved," "La Partida," by Alvarez, and "The Mandonna's Lullaby," by Lord.

GOLDMAN BAND ON KSD FULL HOUR TOMORROW EVENING

Throughout his career, which began with cornet playing at the age of 14 and carried him through distinctive work in the Metropolitan orchestra under Walter Damrosch, Goldman has specialized on creating a band which could play symphonic music effectively. His achievements in this direction have brought him approval from musical New York, enthusiasm from the general public and then appreciation from the radio audience.

Tomorrow night he will present a new work of his own, "The General Motors March," interpreting the rushing, humming movement of the automobile age.

HANS BARTH, PIANIST, PLAYS OVER KSD THIS AFTERNOON

Beginning at 5:05 o'clock this afternoon, KSD will broadcast a recital by Hans Barth, pianist.

Barth, who has played over KSD and other stations in the NBC networks often in the past, is peculiarly fitted for the exacting task of playing a piano so that it "registers" acceptably through a receiver and speaker.

His program today follows:

Toccata	Schumann
Waltz (G Flat)	Chopin
Arabesque	Bauer
Waltz, from "Faust"	Gounod-Barth
Hungarian	MacDowell

Why will a taxicab often stay in service 50,000 miles longer than your car?

Lubrication tells the story!

A taxicab is no better built, perhaps not so well built, as that fine, new car of yours. You have every facility which the taxicab company has for protecting the motor and keeping the car in good condition.

Yet you will probably be trading in your car many thousands of miles sooner than the average taxicab is worn out!

The whole secret of long car-life is good oil and regular lubrication.

Hundreds of thousands of motorists know that Pierce Pennant oils last longer and make their motors last longer.

That is because these oils are refined from selected crudes, and purified and "de-waxed" by special Pierce processes. Their high heat resistance is "balanced" with low cold resistance, thus giving you protection for your car under all driving conditions.

You gain three advantages when you use Pennant oils regularly. First, you get oils of known quality; second, you get quality that never varies; third, you get super quality at regular price.

There is economy as well as safety in Pennant oils!

Namara Will Be Soloist in Maxwell Hour

Thursday night's Maxwell hour over KSD will bring Marguerite Namara, operatic, concert and musical comedy soprano, as soloist.

Miss Namara was born in Cleveland, O., but soon her family went to California, and there she spent her girlhood. At the age of 17 she made an operatic debut as Marguerite in "Faust" in Genoa, where she had gone to study. In this role she was discovered by Henry Russell and brought back to be prima donna of the new Boston Opera Company.

Shortly after her return she left the opera to star in "Alone at Last," a Lehar operetta. When this closed, Miss Namara for a time devoted herself to concert work, touring America, England and the Continent. Then came an engagement with the Chicago Opera Company.

From there she went to the Opera Comique in Paris as prima donna, appearing in "La Boheme," "Tosca," "Manon" and "La Traviata." She returned to Broadway as Yum Yum in the Shubert production of "The Mikado," and the next year sang in "Pinafore."

In the Maxwell Hour Miss Namara will sing "Ah, fors e lui," from "La Traviata," "Aquarelles," by Debussy, under whom Miss Namara studied in Paris; Kahn's "Beloved," "La Partida," by Alvarez, and "The Mandonna's Lullaby," by Lord.

Throughout his career, which began with cornet playing at the age of 14 and carried him through distinctive work in the Metropolitan orchestra under Walter Damrosch, Goldman has specialized on creating a band which could play symphonic music effectively. His achievements in this direction have brought him approval from musical New York, enthusiasm from the general public and then appreciation from the radio audience.

Tomorrow night he will present a new work of his own, "The General Motors March," interpreting the rushing, humming movement of the automobile age.

LEADER IN RADIO INDUSTRY SPEAKS TO DEALERS HERE

MARTIN F. FLANAGAN.
Executive secretary of the Radio Manufacturing Association who spoke in St. Louis Wednesday.

RADIO MANUFACTURERS' EXECUTIVE VISITS CITY

Flanagan Urges St. Louis Dealers to Take Advantage of Organized Effort.

Martin F. Flanagan, executive secretary of the Radio Manufacturers Association, spoke before the St. Louis Radio Trades Association Wednesday night at a dinner meeting at Hotel Claridge, discussing the merchandising situation and the radio trades show that will open in Chicago June 11.

Flanagan devoted much of his talk to the value of organization and the ways in which organized effort by radio manufacturers, jobbers and dealers may solve the problems of the industry. Organization is peculiarly necessary to the radio industry, he said, because it is the fastest-moving industry and the swiftest merchandising vehicle the world has yet seen.

Conditions today are more stabilized than at any time since broadcasting began, he said, but credit for this is due to those who have banded together and put forth organized, united, intelligent effort.

Flanagan told the jobbers and dealers and factory agents at the meeting that a plan was being worked out to handle radio dealers' paper on time-payment sales. He did not go into details, but evidently had in mind some such organization as the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, which was organized by General Motors to help its dealers handle auto time-payment sales.

He said also that a committee of the R. M. A. stood ready to investigate and assist jobbers or dealers who suddenly found the financial going rough, wherever justified.

Flanagan referred briefly in his talk to a subject which he discussed at length prior to the meeting—that is, the movement to call public attention to the custom set builder. A campaign in behalf of the custom receiver builder is being launched on a nation-wide basis, and is being backed by some of the radio parts manufacturers with expectation that all such manufacturers will join in.

Harold Wrape, president of the Federated Radio Trades Association, and Julian Sampson, president of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association and a vice president of the national trade body, reported on the recent conference at Chicago on the wave length and station power reallocation plan. This plan, which was drafted by representatives of Federated Trades body, the National Association of Broadcasters and the Radio Manufacturers' Association, was presented to the Federal Radio Commission Monday. As has been told, it would enable most of the stations now licensed to continue on the air for a while, but eventually would reduce the number of stations by about 145.

Sampson urged all the local jobbers and dealers to join the Federated Radio Trades Association, the dues being only $5 a year.

Walter H. Dyer made a report on preliminary plans for the St. Louis radio show, which will be held next fall.

George Van Sickle, head of the association's technical committee, reported that May 10 had been set as the last date on which applications for the examination for radio service men would be received. It is planned to hold this examination between May 10 and May 20.

Radio Trade Notes

THE sixth annual convention of Crosley radio distributors will be held at the Crosley Radio Corporation's plant in Cincinnati May 15-16. The new Crosley Jewelbox receiver, operated from lamp socket, and sales policies connected with it will be a chief topic of discussion. The convention banquet is to be broadcast over WLW, radio station of the Crosley Corporation. There will be an entertainment program and addresses by Powel Crosley Jr., president of the corporation, and others.

A new, improved socket power receiver, known as the RCA Radiola 18, has just been announced to supersede the Radiola 16 model. It is entirely self-contained, compact, requires no batteries or external power units, and plugs into a lamp socket.

The Radiola 18 is said to be much more selective than the 16. Tuning is by one knob, an indicator dial moving past a window in the panel. A simple volume control has been devised. The 18 uses an improved form of RCA tuned radio frequency circuit, having r. f. stages, detector and two audio stages. It uses four 226 tubes, one 227 tube and a 171A power tube, as well as a rectifying 280 tube.

The cabinet of the Radiola 18 is in mahogany with walnut finish and newly designed escutcheon plates.

The Philadelphia Storage Battery Co. announces purchase of the Murdock Radio Corporation of Massachusetts, as well as of the Timmons Speaker Corporation of Pennsylvania. It also announces that this summer it will bring out a new type of radio receiver which will have a number of exclusive features.

A new Atwater Kent receiver designed especially to overcome the handicaps of indoor aerials and nearness to powerful local stations, is announced. It is known as model 38 and closely resembles its immediate predecessor, model 37, thought slightly larger. It is said to have an exceptional selectivity and long distance range. It takes all power from a lamp socket, all batteries being eliminated.

The model 38 has three stages of tuned r. f. with Atwater Kent coupling circuit, a detector and two audio stages. It is designed to use 7 AC tubes and a rectifying tube. The cabinet is constructed to shield completely the electrical assembly, and the built-in power supply is doubly shielded. Tuning is by one dial of full vision type. The cabinet exterior is in the new satin finish with gold or dark bronze color combinations.

Laboratory tests of the new Arcturus A-C 127 tube, designed for replacement in electric receivers using a five-prong 27 tube in the detector socket, are said to indicate an exceedingly low hum factor for these tubes. The lowering of the hum factor has been effected by reducing the current to the filament heater from the standard consumption of 1.75 amperes to approximately one ampere. The hum caused by A-C current fluctuations increases roughly with the square of the current.

The reduction of the heater current also makes it possible to wire receivers for these tubes with conveniently small sizes of wire.

A new AC Bremer-Tully receiver, the 6-40R—is all-electric, using AC tubes. Exceptional selectivity and distance ability are claimed for the new set, which uses the well-known B-T circuit. This compact receiver is entirely lamp socket operated. Seven tubes are used in the 640R, four 226 type, a 227 detector, a 171A power tube and a rectifier tube. It comes in two table models, both of walnut.

Bremer-Tully is moving into a new plant on Washington boulevard, Chicago, which has two acres of manufacturing space. An electric dynamic speaker, designed for B-T AC sets is being marketed under the Bremer-Tully name.

A new tube, the 201B type, which has an A battery draw of only ¾ ampere, has been brought out by the Sylvania factory, and is being introduced in St. Louis. This new tube has an A battery consumption of only half that of a 201A tube. It can be used as amplifier or detector, the B voltages being similar to those for the 201A type. A six-tube receiver using five of these 201B tubes and a quarter ampere power tube would have an A current draw of less than an ampere.

The Chas. Freshman Co., Inc., from its executive offices, has announced that at recent meeting of the board of directors, Clarence A. Earl was elected president of the company and Charles Freshman, the former president and founder of the business, was elected chairman of the board. Freshman will continue to be active in the affairs of the company. Earl has been a director of the company for the past year. The new president was one of the pioneers in the automobile business. Was first vice president of the Willys-Overland Co for a time and was commended during the war for his work in turning one of the country's largest automobile plants to the production of gun carriages. Earl is well known in New York financial circles.

A good audio system reproduces down to 50-cycle frequencies and below. This means that such a reproducing system will get practically all of the audible musical frequencies. An A. C. receiver brings alternating current into the receiver and special precautions are necessary to prevent its 60-cycle note from being accentuated.

To prevent alternating current hum from being reproduced loudly in a speaker, Stromberg-Carlson engineers did three things. First, all laminations of audio and power transformers were impregnated in wax to prevent mechanical vibrations. Secondly, special draining condensers were placed across the coils of transformers in the power unit to drain off all power disturbances and undesirable wave formations and reduce them to ground potential. Thirdly, the power unit was made separate from the receiver so that the alternating current could be kept as far away from the reproducing mechanism as possible.

AS METROPOLITAN DEALERS

The Reasons We Chose AUBURN

AUBURN offers the most advanced design and improved motor cars on the market today.

We make the above unqualified claim only after exhaustive study and comparison and we have a unique way of PROVING it: We will let the CAR ITSELF do its own selling.

Changes, radical changes, have taken place in the automobile industry in recent years. The dealer who succeeds today must keep up to date. Just because certain makes of cars were leaders a few years ago does not necessarily mean they are the leaders today.

That is why we have made a thorough examination and comparison of all the finer-types of cars built TODAY.

After all, the "best" car is the one that does best the things YOU want a car to do and gives the greatest VALUE for the least commensurate cost.

Therefore it is NOT what the manufacturers of cars say that determines those two vital things but what the cars THEMSELVES say in actual performance.

We have studied all the better-grade cars; we have gone through the factories and seen HOW they are built; and then we have applied our own tests by driving them.

No private owner could go to greater extremes or take greater precautions in measuring relative values than we have done.

Our selection of Auburn, as the outstanding car of TODAY, is the result of our analysis of:

1—The strength, of the factory and its progressive policy.

2—The advanced engineering that produces better cars and not simply more cars. (Because you are not interested in HOW many cars a factory makes but how GOOD the one is you will drive).

3—The quality of materials and care of workmanship in actual construction.

4—The CONDITION in which the cars come out of the factory. Whether every car is made to meet the same high quality standard or simply rushed out to meet a production schedule.

5—The design, mechanical improvements and PERFORMANCE of the CAR ITSELF.

We NOW know why Auburn sales have doubled every year since 1925; why Auburn owners enjoy exclusive advantages; why Auburn cars stand up and perform better and ENDURE longer and bring a higher resale value.

Before you buy, we offer you the benefits of our investigations without the slightest obligation upon your part. We will be glad for you to make similar comparisons, then after driving the Auburn, if it does not prove better in every way, you will not be asked to buy.

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

Craven in a New Comedy

Appears in His Own Play, "The 19th Hole" for the Final Week of the Season at the American Theater. The Shubert, With Two More Weeks Left, Introduces an All-Negro Musical Revue, "Africana," With Ethel Waters as the Star.

FRANK CRAVEN in his own play, "The 19th Hole," starts the final week of the season at the American Theater tonight. Out at the Shubert an all-Negro revue, called "Africana," gets under way and the year at the Grand boulevard house will wind up a week from Saturday night, the final offering being that melodramatic pistol pastoral, "The Spider," which comes in next Sunday evening. This week, too, is the last for the season of the Orpheum, but out at the Empress the stock company will keep going until warm weather sets in.

The central idea of "The 19th Hole," as in the cast of Mr. Craven's other comedies, has to do with an angle of the human nature that is found prevalent in the everyday people with whom one continually knocks elbows. The young suburban couple in search of quiet and limited recreation and with a none too acute understanding of the conditions about them is again to the fore. But this time the author puts his characters in the midst of as ardent a lot of golfers as any section of the country has ever quartered. That the most dignified men of business and community standing are only boys again when they get to playing on the links and that they contend as fiercely, and sometimes as unfairly, for a nickel or a gold cup, plays an important part in the adventures that happen in this play to Vernon Chase and his wife, Emmy, who are protestingly and unwillingly hurtled into the midst of a maelstrom of contention at the Harmony Golf Club in a quiet metropolitan suburb.

Playing opposite to Mr. Craven in "The 19th Hole" will be Dorothy Blackburn, and in the supporting company are Rae Martin, Marion Abbott, Josephine Deffry, Robert Wayne, Homer Barton, Roy Cochrane, Charles Macdonald, Howard Sidney, Harry Lewellyn and John Harwood.

IN "Africana," at the Shubert-Rialto, St. Louisans will have their first glimpse of a show of the sort that Williams and Walker brought here in the days when "Bandanna Land" was popular. Bert Williams, the Negro, was one of the greatest comedians of any race that the American stage has seen. His partner was George Walker, who might have been but was not in those days, called the "sheik" of the race and there was also Ada Overton Walker, a colored singer and dancer, who was one of the mainstays of their company.

There have been many Negro shows since the Williams and Walker days and New York has had no end of them but few have attempted to tour the country. Heading the cast of "Africana" is Ethel Waters who is best known through her phonograph records, as a "blues" singer.

The entire balcony—there is only one at the Shubert—will be given over to Negro theatergoers this week.

"If I Was Rich," William Anthony McGuire's comedy, is to be the offering of the National Players this week. McGuire also wrote "It's A Boy," which was presented here by the stock company at the Empress Theater last week. Like the latter play, "If I Was Rich" has to do with the vicissitudes of an ambitious young married couple. But, instead of a prosperous, enterprising young business man, the hero of the piece is an uneducated shipping clerk who doesn't even wonder whether or not "If I Was Rich" is good English. In order to break into society and satisfy his wife's longing for a life of gayety and splendor, Jimmie is induced to pose as the son and heir of a South American rubber king. Thus the young people mingle with the Long Island rich for a time but eventually they come to grief.

Don Burroughs will head the cast as Jimmie Sterling, the illiterate shipping clerk. Marianne Risdon, who joined the company last week as leading woman, will be seen as his thoughtless, extravagant wife. The role is similar to that which she played in "It's A Boy." Frank Jaquet will appear as Jimmie's gruff, miserly employer who turns out to be a sort of fairy god-father. Helena Shipman and Millard Vincent are cast as a couple of social climbers.

"If I Was Rich" opened in Chicago and was later produced in New York. It has also been on the road in the East but this will be its first presentation in St. Louis.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 28.

THIS comes to me from Robert Sparks, who lives in Gramercy Park:

It was 6 o'clock. In the Forties near Fifth avenue stood a pathetic figure with a baby in her arms. Her face was pale and her eyes were filled with tears. She was addressing a young man who edged away as she spoke. Her voice was sobbing. In a twinkling a crowd collected.

The young man disappeared. As the crowd edged about her she was forced against the wall of the building behind her, against which she leaned for support in her weakness and grief. Tears rolled down her cheeks and splashed on the face of the sleeping child.

A man choked, detached himself from the circle about her and pressed a folded bill into her hand. Other men did the same thing. And as quickly as it happened the young mother and her baby were gone.

Twenty minutes later on a street two blocks away stood a pathetic figure with a baby in her arms. Her face was pale and her eyes were filled with tears. She was addressing a young man who edged away as she spoke. Her voice was sobbing. In a twinkling a crowd collected. The young man disappeared. As the crowd edged about her she was forced to lean against the wall of the building behind her.

Tears rolled down her cheeks and splashed on the face of the sleeping child. An elderly man pressed a bill into her hand. The man who had done the same thing a few minutes before elbowed to the center of the crowd.

"This woman," he shouted, "is a panhandler, a grafter—a cheat" —— A dozen pairs of arms cut his expose short and he was thrust into the street.

The man, it seems, had seriously offended the highly emotional quality of New York chivalry.

An Eye to the Public and an Eye to the Box Office

BY FRANK CRAVEN.

Mr. Craven, the author of many plays in which he himself has appeared as the star, wrote "The 19th Hole," which is at the American Theater this week, and is playing in it. Mr. Craven is well equipped to give an impression of "what the public wants," as he does in this article.

DO I use domestic themes as motives of the plays I write because my writing tendencies lean in that direction or owing to the fact that acting in most of my own comedies, I find characters created for such themes more to my liking? Neither the one nor the other. Merely, I'm commercial and as an author write with an eye to the box office. I firmly believe that the average man and woman prefer seeing a play that introduces a domestic problem, important to them, than to witnessing any sort of dramatic entertainment.

I may not be wholly right in my conclusions in this respect, but as far as any record exists, there can be little doubt that the most lasting plays in the theater have been those that have treated of the momentarily prominent problems to be found in everyday life and additionally popular have been those where the characters have borne a fairly close resemblance to people met in daily life. This condition is especially true in the United States where comedies and drama that have had to do with outstanding domestic problems and have been peopled with middle class characters, have endured above all others. Therefore, when I write a play, I give it a domestic problem motive and, believing that people prefer being made happy to being made sad, I try to make my situations funny and my lines laughable.

THE stage play is nothing more than a story acted as well as told. It has been slowly evolved from the tale of domestic happening grunted out before a cave fire countless years ago. First came the more or less uninteresting telling of a story—then illustration by gesture and grimace. As the human race developed, verse and song were requisitioned to help depict the stories telling of daily topics—gradually a primitive sort of acting elaborated these stories of comedy and tragedy. Wandering minstrels arrived and whetted the public appetite for descriptions yet more convincing. The Grecians first gave the world witness to the theater and established it as an indelible institution of life.

From the earliest days of story telling up to the present moment, the taste of the public for dramatic tales has changed but little. Customs and manners have been revolutionized but ever has the everyday man found his greatest interest in, first the telling of a story that had a theme familiar to him, and later in plays similarly equipped. For instance, a generation ago, the villain in a play did not escape in an automobile nor was he apprehended by radio but nevertheless he got away and was captured in a manner appropriate to that day and if he was appearing in one of the close-to-the-heart melodramas of the day, he was roundly hissed, thus getting the fullest approval of his audience.

IN these days it requires much less than a decade for the interests of even the most domesticated individual to change. Ten years ago, I would not for a moment have entertained the thought of writing a comedy with a golfing motive—five years ago I would have hesitated long before doing it. When I authored "Too Many Cooks," couples all over the country were wrapped up in plans and contracts for the building of little homes, so I took that craze as the basis of the theme for that comedy. When I built "The First Year," newlyweds from coast to coast were deeply engrossed in the question of how to weather the initial year of their marital career. Hence the theme of that play.

Today, golf, as a sport, is the national relaxation. Millions play it and millions more hear it discussed daily. While the golfing motive stands out in "The 19th Hole," which tonight comes for a week's engagement to the American Theater, it has admirers who know nothing at all of the game. The latter condition exists because the plot follows the domestic angle, and, as I previously mentioned, I keep an eye on box office possibilities while writing a play.

Illinois Students To Present a Play

Pierrots, men's student opera organization of the University of Illinois, will bring their annual musical play, "Nada," to St. Louis next Friday night at Alhambra Grotto. The St. Louis appearance is part of a tour including several Illinois cities, and is sponsored here by the Illini Club of St. Louis.

The three-act comedy is written, directed and acted by men students and is said to have been received with favor on the Illinois campus. A St. Louisan, George D. Greene, senior engineering student, is general manager of the show.

The plot is laid in the desert of Mesopotamia, where "Achmed," prince of the realm, is having difficulty with the ladies of his harem, following the introduction of the latest acquisition, "Sally," an Irish girl who has been sold into slavery. However, a British naval officer appears in time to save the day and things turn out to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The Highlands Will Open Today

Forest Park Highlands opens this morning for the thirty-second consecutive season as a summer resort. Every device on the 14-acre parkage has either been replaced by newer designs or completely overhauled. The novelty this year is the representation in miniature of every amusement device hitherto afforded to adults and now arranged for exclusive use by children. The new department "Kiddie-Land," will have its special attractions in the way of a Ferris wheel, auto track, circle swing, merry-go-round, and many others, all designed and built on reduced scale for the youngsters' benefit. Kiddie-Land is situated west of the family picnic grounds and so arranged as to be under ready supervision of parents and guardians.

Farther out on the grounds will be found the new "ride" with the longest tunnel in this part of the country, racing derby, giant Ferris wheel, new electric railway and many new concessions, and a rebuilt and redecorated open-air dance hall with special dance music orchestra.

Where Do Stars Shoot To?

Advent of D. W. Griffith's "Drums of Love" Brings to Mind Some of the Movie Folk Who Appeared in His First Big Success, "The Birth of a Nation," 15 Years Ago—Fox Paving the Way for a New Star in Nancy Drexel.

WHERE do they come from and where do they go—these movie folk? Faces across the screen—once, twice, thrice—and then disappear. Others—and no more notable examples come to mind than Mary Pickford, Norma Talmadge, Charlie Chaplin or Douglas Fairbanks—are seen, not three times, but year in and year out.

Peering through musty old motion picture records one discovers the names of once-upon-a-time stars and directors who have long since slid down the slide to oblivion. Some of them are alive, far from Hollywoodian glamour, happy in their own homes. Others didn't hear the clock strike. They are the has-beens, who hang on, hoping for "just one more break."

The advent of D. W. Griffith's newest picture, "Drums of Love," which is at Loew's this week, brings an interesting thought to mind. Griffith made a picture some 15 years ago which brought immortal fame to its creator. In "The Birth of a Nation" were many players—some of them are still famous; others flared up and died away.

For instance, looking at a list of those who appeared in the Dixon story, we find—"Jeff, the blacksmith—Wallace Reid." Wallie, the idol of youth the world over, is no more. As "Jeff," he was just one of the crowd. Afterwards he shot to stardom.

"Col. Ben Cameron—Henry B. Walthall." "The little colonel" can never be forgotten. Walthall, filmdom's first character-etcher, remains one of Hollywood's real standbys, but another "Ben Cameron"—? Perhaps the years to come will cast it into his lap.

FOUR directors won their spurs by acting in "The Birth of a Nation." Raoul Walsh, Gloria Swanson's mentor while "Sadie Thompson" was being made, was "John Wilkes Booth." Elmer Clifton, the supervisor of "Down to the Sea in Ships," appeared as "Phil Stoneman." Donald Crisp, who helped Fairbanks film "Don Q," was seen as "General Grant." And Joseph Henabery, director of many Valentino productions, appeared as the martyred President!

George Siegmann and Walter Long, both of whom are still terrorizing lovely screen damsels, were, respectively, "Silas Lynch" and "Gus" in Griffith's picture. Mary Alden, who won laurels as "Lydia," appears in one of W. C. Fields' current comedies. Ralph Lewis, another popular character star—delineator of firemen and policemen—was "Austin Stoneham, Leader of the House."

That fine artiste who was then just a child, Lillian Gish, gave a telling portrayal as Mr. Lewis' daughter, "Elsie." Incidentally, Miss Gish recently figured in the news columns when she announced her alignment with the United Artists forces.

But while these few are still an important part of the movie heavens, who can remember Miriam Cooper or Mae Marsh? What has happened to Spottiswoode Aiken, J. A. Beringer, Josephine Marsh, Maxfield Stanley, Jennie Lee and Howard Gaye? And last but not least, who can recall basking in the smile of poor Bobby Harron? All that he left behind were tender memories of things that might have been.

COMPARISONS are usually inevitable, but even so, why trouble to compare Walthall with young Don Alvarado, the hero in "Drums of Love?" Or, why look first at Miss Marsh and then at Mary Philbin? Who can tell where Alvarado will stand 15 years from today? We know that he attracted attention through his performances in Dolores Del Rio's "Loves of Carmen" and in Constance Talmadge's "Breakfast at Sunrise."

As for the others, they have already chiseled snug niches for themselves, Miss Philbin, originally discovered by Eric von Stroheim, and introduced in "Merry-Go-Round," is said to have been "rediscovered" by Griffith. He has taken Miss Philbin, a proven actress, placed a blonde wig on her dark hair, changed her personality, dressed her in effective clothes and imbued her with artistry.

Lionel Barrymore is also in this film. It was back in 1909 when the eldest of the Barrymore clan enacted his first role for Griffith in a one-reeler called "The New York Hat."

WILLIAM FOX, whose new theater on Grand boulevard is being rushed along now after a long delay, is looking for new stars to take the place of some of the other fading luminaries of past years also. He seems to think he has a good prospect in Nancy Drexel who is in "The Escape" at the St. Louis Theater this week.

Miss Drexel was born in New York and started her theatrical career when but a small girl. She was educated at Cathedral High School, New York, and even during her school days evinced a lively interest in dramatics.

Miss Drexel, formerly known as Dorothy Kitchen, made her first stage appearance in "The Royal Vagabond," when eight years of age. Later she appeared in "Quality Street," "Floradora" and other stage hits.

Like many other successful aspirants for screen honors, Miss Drexel got her start through the medium of a contest conducted by a New York publisher.

Before she was placed under contract by Fox Films, Miss Drexel had roles in productions made by Universal, Paramount and other Western studios. She had a hit in an Emil Jannings picture, "The Way of All Flesh." When Tom Mix made "The Broncho Twister," Fox Films version of a story by Adela Rogers St. John, Miss Drexel was selected to play the role of Daisy Mason. She worked opposite Georgie Harris in "Birthday Greetings," directed by Gene Forde. She had been in pictures less than two years but she photographs well and, according to her directors, is a natural actress of the highest order.

F. W. Murnau, the German director, liked her work so well that he selected her for one of the most important roles in "The Four Devils," Murnau's second directorial effort in the United States. This picture went into production during the first weeks of the New Year.

In "The Escape," based upon the stage play by Paul Armstrong, Miss Drexel is cast as a weaker jected his chief desire after a day or two is to get out of the country. The Fascisti has grown arrogant and overbearing toward the visitor, who is constantly heckled in public. Italy is inviting Americans to see what their Duce has done. The country should show them ordinary courtesy.

My big laugh of the month was inspired by Will Fyffe, a Scotch comedian. He was impersonating the oldest man in Scotland and came hobbling in on two canes. Asked what he believed contributed to his living 102 years, he said: "Well, I never drank, smoked or run around with girls until I was 14."

They are telling those who wear the high hat to "come down off their stilts."

Wilton Lackaye says in an interview he never reads the tabloids. "I shave myself," he explains.

I have received a letter from a sentimental burglar who is hiding out in the Midwest. He is in love with a girl who knows his history, but loves him just the same. He sends me the following poem, but I cannot vouch for its originality—you cannot always tell about burglars. But even if original it is no great shakes, yet it is interesting because it reveals at least the burglar knows he is pursuing a foolish calling. He calls it "The Fugitive's Lament," and here it is:

Hunted—alone outside the law.
Out where Life is cruel, where Life is raw;
Safe only by my own feeble might
The chase goes on both day and night.
While the hounds of the law take their sleep
Their fellows still bay loud and deep.
They are on my trail! They are on my trail!

A trail I did not seek or choose
But now that I'm on it I must not lose.
The pack that hounds me on and on,
Until at last, all resources gone,
I again need use the hold-up gun
And once again I must run and run.
They are on my trail! They are on my trail!

The lonely, the fearful endless trail;
And at the end I can do naught but fail.
The world on one side, on the other I,
By the hinges of Hell the odds are too high.
Though now I am winning, I soon will loose.
Traveling this trail I did not choose.
They are on my trail! They are on my trail!

Catholic Women To Give Circus

Mack Hale Bros.' Circus will furnish 20 circus acts for the benefit show and exposition which the Council of Catholic Women of the St. Louis Archdiocese will give April 30 to May 5, inclusive, at Kingshighway and Pattison avenue.

The proceeds of the circus will be used to help finance the recently organized Catholic School Health Bureau which functions in connection with the local parochial school system.

Approximately 500 feet of canvas will be needed to stage the circus and exposition. Performances will be given daily at 2:30, 7:30 and 9 p. m. Arrangements have been made to have organizations and schools sponsor various performances. School children's matinees, embodying practically every parochial school in St. Louis city and county are listed in the schedule of special events arranged for circus week. Through these special school children's matinees it is hoped to give an opportunity to all parish school children to enjoy this high class circus.

The ring program includes trained animal acts, funny clowns, daring aerialists, riding acts, performing elephants, educated dogs, tight wire performances, acrobatic feats, juggling acts and iron-jaw artists.

A volunteer corps of ushers has been recruited from the members of the organizations affiliated with the council and from local Catholic women's colleges, academies and alumnae associations.

Many Concerts Arranged for Music Week

Special Church Programs Arranged for Next Sunday—Oratorio Society to Present "St. Paul."

FIFTH NATIONAL MUSIC WEEK will be celebrated throughout the country the week of Sunday, May 6. The movement to observe a special music week has grown to such an extent that last year over 2000 city and town celebrations were held. The St. Louis observance is being sponsored by the Musicians' Guild, the committee actively engaged being under the chairmanship of Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum. The committee is soliciting the co-operation of all musicians and music lovers in the preparation of neighborhood or community center celebrations. Organists are working up special church musical programs and it is expected that a music program will form part of the Sunday school services that morning. All local radio stations and the movies will feature unusual musical programs and music teachers and music schools are preparing numerous private recitals.

The Musicians' Guild, co-operating with the Scottish Rite Masons, is planning a festival concert to be given at the Scottish Rite Temple, Saturday evening, May 12. On this program the St. Louis Piano Ensemble, consisting of 16 pianists at eight grand pianos, will perform Dvorak's "New World Symphony" under the baton of William A. Parson. The St. Louis Oratorio Society, conducted by William B. Heyne, will sing excerpts from Mendelssohn's oratorio "St Paul." O. Wade Fallert and Anna Louise Petri will present a group of organ and piano duos.

On Wednesday evening, May 8, at the Odeon, the St. Louis Oratorio Society will present Mendelssohn's "St. Paul" with orchestral accompaniment. The soloists will be Helen Traubel, Emma C. Jackson, B. Fred Wise and Bernard Ferguson. The chorus contains 160 voices. Wm. B. Heyne will conduct.

The chorus has undergone an intensive drill since the early part of January and is in shape for the concert. It consists of some 170 voices selected from church choirs of this city.

The assisting artist-soloists will be: Helen Traubel, one of St. Louis' leading soprano soloists, who also has wide recognition throughout the country. The contralto soloist, Emma Cornean Jackman has appeared with the Kirkwood Choral Society in recent concerts. B. Fred Wise, a Chicago tenor has also been engaged. Bernard Ferguson of this city will take the leading role in the Oratorio, as St. Paul.

The chorus will be accompanied by an orchestra selected from the St. Louis Symphony under the direction of Ellis Levy. Lambert Mennemeyer, organist for the Messiah Lutheran Church is accompanist for the society.

PAUL FRIESS will give an organ recital tonight at 8 o'clock in Christ Church Cathedral, Thirteenth and Locust streets, with the following numbers: Eventide, Harker; Romance, Matthews; Intermezzo, Major; Nocturne, d'Evry; and Festal March, Huhn. There will also be a baritone aria by George Mechalson, "Lord God of Abraham," from Mendelssohn's Elijah.

Instrumental and vocal music will be on the program at the costume reception to be given tomorrow night at Jefferson Memorial, when the Missouri Historical Society and patriotic organizations will celebrate the 125th anniversary of the Louisiana Purchase Treaty.

Noel Poepping with his band will furnish the instrumental music during the evening. Poepping received the prize for writing the "Missouri Song," and this will be sung as part of the program. Sixteen members from the Apollo Club and 18 from the Morning Choral Club will sing, under the leadership of Charles Galloway.

On Tuesday night the Principia Concert and Lecture Course will present The Barrere Little Symphony in the following program:

Behind the Screens Out in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, April 28.

IT'S a great pity the movie studios need so few location scouts.

Scouting for locations is one of those jobs for which almost anyone would hurry to Hollywood to seek if he knew what it was and thought there was a chance of getting it.

This is what a location scout has to do for a living:

A director about to begin work on his next picture calls in the scout and says:

"Listen. Before the middle of next week I gotta have a poppy field in full bloom, with two oaks spreading their branches just under the brow of a little hill that rises out of the field; and I gotta have it so that when the hero lies on his back under the oaks he can look off into the distance and see a snow-capped mountain."

Without a murmur of protest the location scout hops into his roadster and begins to hunt for poppies. It may be one of those spring days when the hot California sun beats down upon the office buildings and makes all the weary bookkeepers and stenographers long to be off on their vacations. But the location scout thinks only of his work. Grimly he points the front wheels of his car toward the open country and a few days later he come back and reports:

"Well, I had to drive all over the State of California; and I'll bet I stretched myself on the poppies under 650 oak trees, but I found just what you ordered."

And the director answers:

"Fine! Your hard work has saved us the $15,000 it would have cost to build that poppy field on the lot."

Sometimes the location scout gets a tough assignment. "Happy" de Rosselli, the wandering cameraman, tells of being asked to find a place not too far away from Hollywood which "looks like the wastes of Siberia in the spring." That one puzzled him. He motored around and around, and finally he motored toward the ocean "to take a swim in the surf and clear my mind." Before he reached the seashore, however, he noticed a gently sloping field which he thought might be made to look like a level Siberian plain if one tilted the camera upward a little. And when he walked to the top of the slope and looked on the other side he saw stretched before him exactly what he wanted: a long, level, slightly grassy tract, absolutely devoid of telephone poles or real estate signs, barren and lonely. And only 12 miles from Hollywood!

The toughest assignment he ever filled, he says, looked the easiest to begin with. It was to find "a palatial home with orange trees in the front yard." Oranges made Southern California famous, but the palatial homes seemed to have anything but oranges growing next to the front porch, and the homes where orange trees abounded were not palatial. Finally de Rosselli located something that was close enough to specifications to pass muster.

Wandering through the studios where the big movie crusade for economical make-believe is in full swing, one squanders a moment or two and sees:

Six new-born rats in a gilded bird cage with their nervous mother, waiting on the edge of the Milton Sills set for their turn to do a bit in an underworld mystery film. Noisy carpenters making bedlam of a great, roomy stage as they hammer into place a quiet country church, full size; and movie gardeners completing the rural set by dragging several trees into the space to be occupied by the peaceful churchyard.

Walking on to the Norma Talmadge set, Gens. Savitzki, Ikonnekoff, Blagoi and Lodijinsky, said to be the only genuine Russian generals working in the movies. Search is still on for the only Russian private in Hollywood. Man with an iron magnet attached to his walking stick strolling up and down the paved studio streets between stages, his special duty the removal of nails which might puncture the tires of stars' and executives' automobiles.

Actor in resplendent military uniform sloshing through the rain under a big umbrella. Another new movie-set heating device being tried out on players wearing scanty costumes; this time it's the size of an automobile but shaped like a hen which is wearing a medieval knight's metal visor. Colleen Moore against the background of a complete hardware store built and furnished for her new picture. Everything about the place, from the glass in the front windows to the row of new lanterns hanging from a beam in the back, is genuine except the cement sidewalk out front, which is made of pressed paper.

Howard Hughes, the youthful oil millionaire now producing "Hell's Angels," sitting happy and pleased amid the metal framework of a Zeppelin and directing Ferdinand Schumann-Heink in a tragic air-raid scene. Another very young man, not a millionaire, earning his movie salary by spreading old age around him as he walks. He operates a cobweb machine built to add a hundred years to the appearance of a set in less than five minutes.

It takes a slump in the motion picture industry to bring up into high relief the many projects always fermenting in the inventive, speculative or constructive minds of the film colony.

Hardly had the closing of the Sennett and Christie studios put an end to pie-throwing comedy production for a while when real estate men beat their tom toms and invited the public to attend a "mammoth pie-baking" on the site of a new cinema center. Al Christie, Mack Sennett, a chorus of bathing beauties and a throng of sight-seers were there, and 2000 pounds of prunes and 500 pounds of sugar simmered in the big pie to celebrate the sale of $416,520 worth of lots in the subdivison.

The lull in picture production was brightened, too, by the publication of further details concerning the $650,000 apartment hotel Pola Negri is preparing to build. The new establishment will be known as the Princess Apolaine Mdivani; and Pola, who in private life is the wife of the Georgian Prince Serge Mdivani, will occupy the upper wing of the T-shaped building. This will give winter visitors in Southern California a chance to live for a while under the same roof with a Prince and picture star; and as an added thrill an airport maintained for the exclusive use of guests will house the Prince's own plane.

At the same time Conrad Nagel and other leading film players were reported to be busy with plans for a securities corporation to be operated in connection with and for the profit of the Motion Picture Relief Fund. Such an organization would aim to serve film folk at both ends of the screen ladder, by guiding into safe channels the investment funds of prosperous players and, with the profits of this business, aiding the unfortunate player who, in the days of his prosperity, spent foolishly or invested unwisely.

And numerous other film celebrities, winners of high financial rewards on the screen, were so busy investing their surplus earnings that they scarcely noticed the slowing down of studio activities.

Efforts by the organized title-writers of Hollywood to raise their craft to the dignity of a profession recall the fact that title-writing has passed through many interesting phases since motion pictures were invented.

Back in 1896 a motion picture was such a novelty in itself that it needed no subtitles, nor even a main title, to explain itself to the spectator. The sheer wonder of pictures come to life on a screen was enough to monopolize the attention of the beholder; and besides, there was no room for subtitles in a film 50 feet long.

When a film version of the famous Passion Play was produced a few years later, words appeared necessary to help the unfoldment of the action on the screen, so a lecturer was sent around with the picture to tell the audience what it was seeing while it was seeing it. Then there came an era of very simple but useful subtitles, phrases which could be filmed and kept on the shelf for insertion in pictures as needed; titles such as "That Night," "Ten Years Later," "Forgiven," "The Next Morning."

With the expanding prosperity of the industry came a desire for fancier titles, and producers everywhere encouraged the reproduction of prose poetry on the screen. "Came the Dawn" took the place of such crude expressions as "The Next Morning," and instead of "That Night" the subtitle crooned: "Night, like a silken shroud, wrapped its starry folds about the sleeping village." This sort of thing led to the oratorical era, when most pictures began with a long philosophical essay designed to lift the intellect of the audience up to the level of the picture.

sister placed under temptations in New York's night life.

NOW, of course, few get the chance that Miss Drexel has had, but still every one, apparently, wants to get into the movies.

Tentmakers in Timbuktu, perfumers in Paris, bean bakers in Boston, are alike in their desire eventually to own a Hollywood bungalow and draw their living from the films.

The films draft workers from every other field of human activity that the show may go on. In the trade of picture production all other trades are called upon to pay their toll of talent as ambitions magnetically are drawn cinemawards.

To quote Jesse L. Lasky of Paramount, and one of the founders of the industry: "Every person in the world seems to want to get into the film game. At least that is my belief, based upon 14 years of personal experience."

There seems a solid basis of truth for this statement when the roll of occupations to which studio workers were apprentices is called. Not one trade or profession in the list of human endeavor is missing.

Run down the lists and observe the amazing variety of occupations from which motion picture people are recruited. "Motion picture people" is a phrase used to denote everyone connected with the studios, no matter what department they may fill. The actor and the electrician alike are known as "studio" to the lay mind.

BEGIN with the actors, since they are more in the public eye. Richard Arlen was a professional athlete and later an aviator. George Bancroft was in the navy and later famous on the stage before he drifted into pictures. Wallace Beery was a musical comedy star. Tom Kennedy was a heavyweight contender a decade ago. Clara Bow was summoned from a business school where she was learning to be a good stenographer. Mary Brian was a budding artist when she was selected to play Wendy in "Peter Pan."

Clive Brook was a newspaper man on a London paper. Louise Brooks was a dancer with the Ziegfeld Follies. Lane Chandler was a passenger agent for a railway in the Yosemite National Park. Chester Conklin was a clown with the Al G. Barnes circus. Gary Cooper was a commercial artist. Bebe Daniels—one of the rare exceptions—was bred to the cinema almost from babyhood, as was Esther Ralston. Richard Dix tried surgery, bank clerking and later took up the study of architecture. Fred Thomson was studying to be a minister of the gospel. W. C. Fields was a stage comedian. Neil Hamilton was an expert gunmaker with the Marlin Arms Co., and later studied for the ministry. Ray Hatton was a farmer. Jack Holt was a civil engineer and later a cattle puncher. Emil Jannings wanted to be a sailor and ran away to sea. Percy Marmont was studying law in England, following the footsteps of his forebears. Arnold Kent was a civil engineer in Italy—surely a long jump away from motion pictures and Hollywood, where he is a featured player.

36 LOCAL INDUSTRIES ON TOUR TO KANSAS

Good Will Party to Get Warm Welcome, Letters to Manager Indicate.

More than 36 different types of St. Louis industry will be represented on the good-will extension tour through Kansas the week of May 6, and this number may be increased before the tour starts.

Letters from Kansas to Scott R. DeKins, secretary-manager of the tour, indicate the St. Louisans will receive a warm welcome from the merchants. Most of these letters point out that St. Louis is the logical market for the state of Kansas, said DeKins, who pointed to a letter from Frank L. Dunn, Mayor of Wichita, which stated "Wichita looks to St. Louis more than any other city as her market."

The purpose of the trip, as stated by DeKins is not only to create good will, but also to give executives an opportunity under favorable conditions to go into their trade territory and meet their customers, see their stores, methods and the city in which their goods are sold.

The speakers include John B. Edwards, Lawrence McDaniel, Jules R. Field, S. R. Kalish and S. E. Wilkinson, general sales manager of Butler Bros., who will speak on "The New Problems in Distribution." Flint Garison, editor of the Drygoodsman, will speak on "How St. Louis Is Equipped to Assist Merchants in Meeting the New Problems in Distribution."

It has been 12 years since St. Louis sent a trade extension trip through Kansas.

DANGER

Your tongue is the best barometer of your physical condition. Look at it every morning before breakfast. If it is coated with white, yellow or brown coloring, and does not have a clean red appearance you are constipated and not well.

Heed Its Warning

Constipation causes more ailments than all other diseases, and is the result of not having a daily bowel movement. Sick-headache, indigestion, biliousness and sallow complexion follow. Ask your druggist for a 25c red paper package of CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS "Safe Laxative". Take a dose to-night and continue one pill after each meal. Don't stop—until your tongue is clean. You will be surprised at the tonic effect this doctor's formula will have on you.

RECIPE TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

You Can Make a Better Gray Hair Remedy Than You Can Buy.

Gray, streaked or faded hair is not only unbecoming, but unnecessary.

Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo compound and ¼-oz. of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

BODY ODOR...a problem all of us must face

BODY odor! The very mention of it repels!

Yet isn't that all the more reason why we should face this serious matter frankly—to make sure we are never guilty of this unpardonable offense?

Do you realize, for example, that not one of us is safe from body odor? We must perspire constantly, or we'd die. And the cooler the weather, the more danger of body odor—because then we stay indoors more, in warm, stuffy rooms, in crowded cars and theatres.

Body odor rarely warns the offender

Even on coolest days, our millions of pores continually give off invisible perspiration—often as much as a quart of waste every 24 hours.

This body moisture, whether visible or invisible, is always odorous. And no wealth or position can bring immunity from it. Heiress or society leader may at times offend as seriously as newsboy or conductor—unless they take precautions.

And we musn't think we're safe just because we aren't conscious of offending.

For, once an odor becomes familiar to us, our own sense of smell becomes deadened to it—though it remains perfectly apparent to others. You've probably noticed that even fastidious people often offend . . . without realizing it.

Body odor more noticeable at this time of the year—due to stuffy rooms—closed windows.

Pores give off as much as a quart of waste a day—even in coolest weather.

Now, a purifying toilet soap. Its bland antiseptic lather keeps you safe from body odor.

Easy to end body odor

Yet there is a simple way to be certain we're always safe from body odor. Just wash and bathe often with the delightful toilet soap that millions enjoy—Lifebuoy—it deodorizes.

The same bland and abundant antiseptic lather that helps protect health by removing germs—prevents body odor by purifying pores.

To millions of enthusiastic users Lifebuoy also means a clear, fresh skin. They find it a joy to use Lifebuoy for every toilet purpose.

You will learn to love Lifebuoy's pleasant clean scent, which tells you Lifebuoy purifies, yet which quickly evaporates after rinsing.

Gives Your Hair Unusual Beauty

The attractiveness of even the most beautiful women depends upon the loveliness of their hair.

Fortunately, beautiful hair is now easily obtained. It is simply a matter of shampooing.

Proper shampooing makes the hair soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color, and leaves it fresh looking, glossy and bright.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why discriminating women, everywhere, now use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather which cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

It leaves the hair soft, silky and easy to manage and makes it fairly sparkle with new life, gloss and lustre.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store.

How Utilities Spend $1,000,000 Propaganda Fund in One Year

Organization of State Units Supported by Electric, Gas and Street Car Corporations, Cover Every Town in the Country That Has a Light Plant While a Joint Committee Lobbies in Washington—Authors and University Professors Subsidized.

WASHINGTON, April 28.

A PROPAGANDA machine, comparable in extent and influence to that of the Anti-Saloon League in its heyday, is being closely examined by the Federal Trade Commission in its investigation of electric and gas utilities as ordered by the amended Walsh resolution.

In general structure, there is considerable resemblance between the now slightly dilapidated Anti-Saloon League model and the bright and up-to-date utilities organization. They differ in their choice of agencies, for where the Anti-Saloon League used churches and Sunday schools, the power companies work through Chambers of Commerce, universities, colleges, high schools and newspapers. Both have demonstrated that they can bring pressure to bear on the national Congress, State Legislatures and public officers with their lobbies.

Lobby's "Victory" Not as Complete as It Seemed.

When the Senate refused to accept the original resolution introduced by Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana calling for a Senate investigation of the utilities and adopted the amendment of Senator Walter F. George of Georgia which shunted the investigation to the Federal Trade Commission, the utilities lobby was credited with a victory, apparently on the theory that the shift would prevent a real investigation. It now appears, however, that the resultant enthusiasm was ill timed and that the commission will make a searching inquiry not only into the financial arrangements of operating and holding companies but also in the propaganda and political activities of the power groups.

The commission estimates that the investigation will take at least a year. The evidence which has been gathered within the last two months, however, gives definite indication of the course of the inquiry and at least an inkling of the "educational" and political activities of the power groups. It is true that the trade commission's findings may not get the publicity that a Senate committee's work would have received, but the indications are that the commission's report and record of the investigation will be thorough enough to furnish the Senate material for whatever legislation may be deemed necessary.

Utilities Propaganda Fund $1,000,000 This Year.

The commission's investigation has already disclosed that the utilities group has more than $1,000,000 for propaganda purposes this year. This, however, is only part of the money that will actually be spent by the national and local units. Like the Anti-Saloon League, the national organization expects its local units to look after and finance local propaganda to meet local conditions.

Enough evidence has been gathered by the commission to disclose the general working of the propaganda and lobby machine and its objectives. This evidence shows that the machine has been remarkably successful both in national and local fields.

In keeping with the utilities industry in general, the propaganda unit is a pyramid. At the top is the joint commission of National Utilities Associations which has its headquarters in Washington. This joint committee is composed of representatives of the National Electric Light Association, the American Gas Association and the American Street Railway Association. These three associations in turn are divided into regional units. As the commission has more evidence relating to the National Electric Light Association than to the others, the organization of that association will be followed in this article.

How Electric Light Association Pulls Wires.

The Electric Light Association is divided into 12 regional units, which are sub-divided into State units. Of these State units, the Illinois district has been developed to such an extent that it is the model for similar units throughout the country.

In the State units, the utilities are merged with the national organization, under the name of the State Public Utilities Information Office. In Illinois this information office is supported by the Illinois Electric Light Association, the Illinois Gas Association and the Illinois Electric Railway Association. The interlocking nature of this merger is shown by the testimony of Robert V. Prather, who said he was secretary and treasurer of the Great Lakes division of the National Electric Light Association, and held similar positions in the Illinois Electric Light Association, the Illinois Gas Association and the Illinois Street Railway Association.

The director of the Illinois Public Utilities Information Office is Bernard Mullaney, vice president of the People's Gas Light & Coke Co. of Chicago, an Insull corporation. Mullaney is also vice president of the American Gas Association.

The Illinois Information Office has subdivided the state into 10 sections for "educational" or propaganda purposes, and in each of these sections, managers or owners of public utilities are expected to look after local conditions and report to the State unit. In this way, the propaganda extends from Washington to the smallest town in Illinois that has a privately owned electric light or gas plant.

Steady Campaign Against Government Ownership.

What is the object of this elaborate organization beyond the usual desire for more business? Evidence before the commission discloses that a purpose of the organization is to fight public ownership of public utilities, whether that ownership be national, as proposed for Muscle Shoals, and Boulder Canyon Dam, or municipal, as exists where a community owns the local light, gas or water plant.

The national organization—the Joint Committee—looks after the national propagandizing and lobbying as it did when it defeated the original Walsh resolution and as it is now doing in opposition to the Norris bill for government operation of Muscle Shoals and the Swing-Johnson Boulder Canyon dam bill. The State Information Office looks out for conditions in its own area. If Illinois is a good example of State work, it is difficult to say whether the State or the national organization is the more effective.

Evidence before the commission discloses that the Illinois Information Office checked up on virtually every item that had the remotest relation to public utilities. If an impromptu speaker told a woman's club about the benefits of municipal ownership a report was sent to the state headquarters where arrangements were made to have some one tell the club about the superior benefits of private ownership. Every bill introduced at the State Legislature was scrutinized to see whether it had a utilities angle. Books on public utilities subjects on the shelves of public libraries were studied to see if they were "unfair" to private ownership. Text books used in the universities, colleges and high schools were carefully examined to see if they contained anything detrimental to the power group. Speakers were listed as "wrong," "fair" or "right," according to their stand on Government ownership of utilities.

University Instructors on Their Subsidy List.

This type of propaganda was negative. On the opposite side, the Illinois Information Office and the Great Lakes division of the National Electric Light Association apparently did not overlook a bet. They subsidized instructors in colleges and universities, furnished lecturers to high schools and clubs, distributed pamphlets to the grade schools, arranged radio speeches, underwrote text books written by college professors and supplied newspapers with an information service. This was in addition to the financial interests Samuel Insull took in the nomination of Frank L. Smith, Chairman of the Illinois Commerce Commission, and George Brennan for the United States Senatorship.

Rob Roy McGregor, assistant to Mullaney, told the commission about the extent of the Illinois propaganda. He said, with some show of pride, "I will say that we reach almost everybody who can be reached by the methods we use, allowing for people who do not read or appear in any club or gathering. There are certain people who do not read up and who are not reached in any form."

"Do you have pamphlets that are distributed in the lower grade schools?" he was asked. "They are distributed chiefly in the high schools and the eighth grade," he replied. "We do not consider the pamphlets useful or understandable lower than the eighth grade. If they are so distributed they are not intended to be."

Keeping Track of Books Issued by Public Libraries.

Mullaney testified that 615 Illinois high schools, three-fourths of the number in the State, were using the pamphlets.

In a letter to K. L. MacKinnon, general superintendent of the Nebraska Power Co., who asked for information about the Illinois Information Office, McGregor gave a brief outline of the Illinois work, which included the following:

"Some time ago, we undertook a review of the text books on civics and economics used in Illinois, finding much material derogatory to public utilities. Remedial measures have been taken by the national associations.

"At present we are making a survey of the libraries of the state to find what material on government ownership of public utilities in general they have on file. Such activities are not on a routine basis, but are undertaken as a special situation seems to warrant the work."

MacKinnon in thanking McGregor for the information said: "We feel that here in Nebraska there is a fertile field for work in a State which produces a Howell and a Norris. We feel that the work in the past has not been done, and we are particularly anxious to get any information we can about what public utilities could do in addition to sending out weekly bulletins."

Many Missouri High Schools Get "Educational" Service.

Nebraska was not the only State that followed the Illinois lead on pamphlets and text books. J. B. Sheridan of St. Louis, secretary of the Missouri Committee on Public Utility Information, reported to his association: "The Missouri Committee has instituted what it considers a very great success, a public welfare and public utilities educational service on the same lines as similar services instituted in Illinois and Indiana. The Missouri committee accounts itself very fortunate that upon its first offering, 210 of 617 high schools in the State requested that they be furnished with the service. Reports from principals of high schools on the service are reassuring.

"The Missouri Committee has devoted considerable time to examination of text books affecting utilities and used in public schools and universities of the State. It has found that in many instances the material embodied in these text books appears to have been written by theorists, or by men unfamiliar with the operation of public utilities under State regulation. Most of the matter printed in these text books appears to have been written in the early 1900s, at which time municipal regulation prevailed and when utilities were unwilling victims of a great deal of political pressure and, naturally, of a great deal of journalistic muckraking. The Missouri Committee is taking steps to direct the attention of the authors to the great change that has taken place in public utilities operation since State regulation has replaced municipal control."

Some of the Work of Education Was Legitimate.

The Great Lakes division of the National Electric Light Association went after the instructors in the universities, through its committee on co-operation with educational institutions. According to the Trade Commission attorneys, some of this work, such as the preparation of strictly technical text books, was legitimate. These attorneys contend, however, that much of this committee's activities was concerned with the economics of utility operations. To substantiate their arguments, they cite a report of the committee which said: "Arrangements should be made, as a matter of educational interest, for conspicuous and leading figures in the utility industry, nationally known if possible, to speak before the student body, including those students not intending to enter the utility field."

The reason for such general speeches is contained in another exhibit, which contained the address given by Dr. Horace M. Gray of the University of Illinois department of economics before a joint session of the utility interests in March 1927. Speaking on "Some Problems of Public Utility Education in the Social Sciences," Dr. Gray said: "It is reasonable to expect that young men, being familiar with the fundamental facts of the utilities service as a result of their college training, will display a sympathetic and understanding attitude towards utilities. They will, in their capacity as citizens, approach utility problems in a reasonable frame of mind and will not be miscarried by every

Missouri Criminal Code Weak, Wickersham Says

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 28.

GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM, former Attorney-General of the United States and lately the counsel for the Senate in the habeas corpus proceedings brought by Robert W. Stewart, in an interview with the Post-Dispatch correspondent yesterday, singled out Missouri as one of the States that had failed to give due attention to the improvement of criminal procedure.

Wickersham was here to preside over the annual meeting of the American Law Institute, of which he is president.

His interview supplemented a speech in which he told the institute that the administration of criminal justice in the United States had become "a matter of reproach to thoughtful men."

Says Public Is at Fault.

He blamed that condition in large part on the failure of the public to improve the character of the judiciary.

"In Missouri," he told the writer, "you have a judiciary serving for short terms at low salaries, selected originally in primary campaigns and voted for in general elections. These selections are generally made on a political basis.

"The result of such a system too often is the election of Judges who are always looking for popular approval in order to hold their jobs. How can such men be independent?

"How can they control the conduct of criminal prosecutions so as to prevent miscarriage of justice?

14-Year Term in New York.

"By contrast, Judges in New York are elected for 14 years. There has grown up a tradition seldom broken that when a Judge has served well he shall be renominated and re-elected. Generally this is done at the instance of the Bar Association. While the politicians will tell you that the Bar Association does not control, the anxiety that is shown to get the approval of the association for candidates proves the contrary.

"In several conspicuous instances, the politicians have tried to break the rule, but the opposition of the Bar Association has compelled a retreat.

"You can't have a satisfactory administration of criminal justice without a strong independent judiciary. It's amazing that the people won't see that. They are coming to see it in some of the older States, but the newer States, as a rule, have not yet comprehended it."

"Is it not true," Wickersham was asked, "that the administration of justice suffers also from an excess of laws?"

Too Many Laws, He Says.

"Indeed it is," he replied emphatically. "One of the chronic diseases of democracy is a pathetic confidence in the efficacy of the law to right a wrong. For almost every ailment of society, real or fancied, there are people who say, 'let's have a law about it.' In many cases the law is more of an evil than the wrong. We should have done with our everlasting tinkering with the statutes."

Wickersham explained that one of the chief labors of the institute was the drafting of a simplified code of criminal procedure to be presented to the States as a model for their consideration. This work was undertaken at the instance of the late Gov. Hadley, of Missouri, and money for it was provided by the Laura Spellman Rockefeller Memorial. A tentative draft of a portion of the code is before the institute at its current meeting.

Present Alliances of France Stand in Way of Kellogg Plan

Lloyd George Says Peace Proposals of United States Would Be Effective Method Toward Ending War and Are Not at Variance With League Obligations, but Asserts Briand's Replies Cloak Real Obstacles to Their Adoption.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
War-Time Premier of England.

LONDON, April 28.

THE Kellogg-Briand or Briand-Kellogg proposals for universal arbitration are rapidly assuming the dimensions of a great diplomatic conflict. From the narrow channel of diplomacy they have already debouched into the wider plains of journalistic criticism and controversy. They may soon become the dominant political issue in several European countries. The latest French note has defined their issues for all those who take the trouble to interpret its real purport.

No such far-reaching proposals for world peace have so far been made as those which are now the subject of discussion. Hitherto the establishment of peace has been dealt with in a haphazard way by means of regional agreements of non-aggression and arbitration. The arbitration, however, was only partial, seeing that no great power excepting Germany had ratified the optional clause for the Permanent Court.

French Plan Conservative.

While treaties of mutual non-aggression between two powers have too often suggested possibilities of aggression against a third, the French counter-proposals do not improve materially if at all upon this highly unsatisfactory position. They represent no appreciable advance in the direction of substituting arbitration for war as a means of settling international disputes in any case where serious differences are likely to arise and are even now threatening the peace of Europe.

The American proposal is a real business. It exacts from the great powers an all-around renunciation of war as an instrument of national policy, America itself joining in the undertaking, the American idea being that were the great powers to agree, the rest of the world would follow.

If the American proposal is accepted by the Powers, it is calculated to create the right atmosphere for the firm consolidation of European peace, an atmosphere not hitherto existing. Moral disarmament is the only effective way to material disarmament, and the short cut to moral disarmament is the solemn outlawry of war as proposed by Mr. Kellogg. Until now all the attempts made at Geneva and elsewhere to consolidate peace had aimed at preventing war by organizations for war.

Russian Plan Defeated.

This is the second acid test (to quote Woodrow Wilson's phrase) which has been recently applied to the zeal affected by European diplomatists for a genuine peace based on judicial right. The first was the offer of Russia to disarm provided the nations of the League would do so simultaneously. Litvinoff and his message were as welcome at Geneva as Martin Luther was at the Diet of Worms. His allocution was received in stony silence. Lord Cushendon's attack on him was hailed with delight.

The second acid test is the Kellogg memorandum proposing the pacific settlement of all international disputes of every kind and quality. The victors have no intention of surrendering the supremacy which their hard won triumph secured for them and all-around disarmament and arbitration would involve such surrender. Their huge armies make them Lords of Europe.

Equality is of the very essence of any sound and sincere arbitral arrangement. There is no equality when one man appears before a tribunal armed to the teeth whilst his opponent is stripped of every weapon except a blunted dagger. The fully armed litigants mean to stand by the status quo, come what may. They have no intention of submitting to any tribunal boundaries, rights or advantages accorded to them by post-war treaties or won by them by force of arms outside the treaties. Any pact which would exclude these questions from the sphere of arbitration would be futile, for they will continue to be the cause of irritation and trouble until they are settled by agreement or by some impartial authority.

Press Opposes Plan.

It is because the Kellogg proposal pretends that every dispute that threatens the peace of the world should be settled by pacific means that the Allied press—except in Britain—almost unanimously condemns it and does not conceal its anger with M. Briand for ever having started on the slippery slope of arbitration. I am convinced that this distinguished French statesman genuinely desires peace and is prepared to take great risks to achieve it. He has, however, no real support amongst his colleagues. He is accused of having rushed along the perilous paths of peace with a "light heart," unmindful of the yawning precipices on both sides. What a crime! It is an act of treason that the Parisian press will not forgive readily.

But the effect of Mr. Kellogg's bold moral act (it is infinitely more than a gesture) is bound to be great on the minds of the peoples of Europe. Its real significance will be appreciated gradually. It means restored and assured co-operation of the United States of America in the cause of the world, including European peace. It implies, not League membership by America, but American collaboration with all League powers in the furtherance of the League's main purposes with all the moral and indirectly to a large extent the material strength of America thrown in for the benefit of that cause.

Aloofness May Be Aid.

Many in Europe may regret that America still will remain outside the League. Nevertheless America's freedom from what may be called the prejudices and timidities and intrigues of European diplomacy at Geneva may be of advantage at this date to the League by reinfusing into it something of the freshness and robust idealism of its founders. Much of this has been lost or has withered through excess of diplomacy.

Indeed, far from conflicting with the League (as some of Mr. Kellogg's critics and opponents would like to make out) his proposals are eminently calculated to strengthen its authority, usefulness and moral influence. M. Briand suggests for instance that there may be some incompatibility between the obligations of League members and the obligations embodied in the American draft treaty. This is a fallacy, for the American treaty would not in any way detract from the obligations of League members but would rather supplement them in the direction of the elimination of war and the substitution of arbitration and conciliation for the use of force.

The League covenant, it is true, does not wholly bar war, but its clearest purpose is to go as far as possible in that direction as the Governments of 1919, still under war influences, would allow it to go.

Time for Step Farther.

America rightly considers that the time has come to go a big step farther. The League as a matter of fact does, if not explicitly, at least by implication, bar war as an instrument of national policy. For it only recommends war and can only recommend it by a unanimous vote as a police measure designed to curb an individual disturber of peace. In those circumstances, a League war is not war as an instrument of national policy, not private war but war as an instrument of international justice.

To that conception the United States itself would, I am confident, not object since its police measures in case of serious disorders among smaller neighboring American states form a parallel to the enforcement of League sanctions on the old Continent. From this it will be seen that there is no incompatibility between the obligations of League members under the sanctions of Article 16 of the League covenant and the American proposal.

The French reservation that a multilateral pact should be signed by smaller as well as greater nations already has been conceded by Mr. Kellogg and is not unreasonable, provided it is not used for the purpose of dishing the American proposal by inspiring one or two of the smaller powers to act as obstructors, a role which France itself dare not perform openly.

Limit on Provision.

The French assert that the right of legitimate self-defense, as it is called, should be safeguarded is equally sensible so long as it means no more than what it seems, namely that a Power attacked by another shall be free to defend itself. It is another matter, however, when it means that because some third-rate Power attacks or is attacked by another third-rate Power, all the Powers—including the great—which are signatories to a multilateral treaty should be freed immediately from their pledge of mutual non-aggression toward each other and be authorized to rush in and fight, thereby extending a hundredfold the field of slaughter.

Now this is what the French Government really means when it suggests that League members in general and France in particular have existing international obligations under the League with which Mr. Kellogg's multilateral treaty would conflict.

Unfortunately the whole of France's system of military alliances is built upon obligations involving the sanction of war. That is to say that where the League council was unanimous France's alliances would work, but also that where the League did not reach

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Vote the Bonds.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I DO not pose as a good roads expert, and above all I do not wish to depreciate our very worthy citizen, Theodore Gary, but just the same, I live in Missouri, and believe myself to be an average citizen of Missouri, long known as a State that contains more valuable undeveloped resources than any other State in the Union, capable of supporting a population ten times greater than it now has, and noted for the backward character of its leading citizens—and I say vote the $75,000,000 bonds. Spend the money on good roads. Do it now.

It is a fact that nothing is perfect. It is also a cinch that after we have spent the $75,000,000 we will be like the great yet ordinary State of Illinois when compared with Missouri, that keeps doubling its road fund because it never had enough—but for the love of Mike, get out of the class of backward states, for

The old gives up to the new today,
Tomorrow the new is old
And the tears that are shed
For the old that is dead
Gave life to the new
On the day it is wed
To the World, in its glad array.

Only the souls that cling to the old
Are barred from the wedding feast.
For they mourn all the day,
As they earnestly pray
For the world to stop,
And cease to be gay.
While they gather their crop of mould.

Mr. Hay's Harmony Plea.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MR. HAY'S plea for harmony in party ranks is rather belated. It comes at a time when he thinks it will help him to the Senate. We always mistrust the Greek bearing gifts. When the party was in the stress to maintain its oldtime principles and Reed was the leader, Mr. Hay denounced him in press interviews and on the stump. In 1922 Reed won for the party a splendid victory over Hay's opposition. By this test, Mr. Hay as leader would win a splendid defeat for the party. He, with smooth words, denies he was a member of or in affiliation with the League of Loyal Democrats to "rid us of Reed." We demand proof that he was not amongst its counselors.

In October, 1922, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch reported on organization at Sedalia formed to oppose Senator Reed's election. Mr. Hay was a member of the Executive Committee of that body. The papers reported that organization at that meeting as resolving "that Senator James A. Reed does not and has not represented the views of the citizens of Missouri as applying to the Volstead law and the eighteenth amendment" and urging his defeat. Yet he says he did not vote for Brewster. There is no way of proving this now. In 1922 Reed and Brewster were the only candidates he could vote for. But he did urge Reed's defeat. Was he sincere then? Did he do what he advised others to do? If so, has his desire for office changed his views since?

He then placed the Volstead act and the eighteenth amendment above all party issues. If true then, is it still his view? Does he still believe the Anti-Saloon League is the best and only guardian of morality and the rights of the people? JOSEPH J. MESTRES.

Chairman Democratic City Central Committee.

With Jules Verne to the Earth's Center.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WE KNOW nearly all that is to be known about the surface of the earth, and, due to fearless aviators, we are learning more and more about the air, clouds and atmospheric conditions. The landing of Wilkins and Eielson in Iceland reminds me how greatly I became interested in that island years ago on reading Jules Verne's romance, "A Journey to the Center of the Earth." In that story the adventurous hero and his companions let themselves down the extinct crater of the Icelandic volcano, Snefels, and, following the directions left by a former explorer, penetrated deep into the bowels of the earth, having most surprising adventures.

As a youth, with the spirit of adventure, I was so interested that I memorized the inscription—in Latin—which Verne told had been left near the bottom of the crater by the Icelander, Arne Saknussem, as a guide to others. In English it read:

> "Into the crater of Snefels when covered by the shadow of Scartaris in July, descend, bold traveler, and you will reach the center of the earth. Which I have done. Arne Saknussem."

The deepest mine in the world is a shaft of the Calumet & Hecla in Michigan. It is only 5990 feet deep. The deepest boring is less than a mile and a half. I do not suppose that there would be much profit, and there might be great risk in exploring the craters of extinct volcanoes. But we do want to find out more of the earth's crust, and no one can tell whether some of Jules Verne's imaginings regarding what is below the crust may not be as prophetic as some of his other scientific romances have proved to be. H. M. W.

FOR FARM-TO-MARKET ROADS.

Theodore Gary continues to insist that there is no provision for farm-to-market roads in the proposed road bond issue. He also insists that the plan for apportioning funds among the counties on the basis of area and population is unfair. On those two objections he apparently now rests his case.

His assertion that there is no provision for farm to-market roads is a mistake. On that point the text of the proposed constitutional amendment reads:

> The funds which are herein required to be allotted by the State Highway Commission to the construction of supplementary State highways and bridges in each of the counties of the State, in addition to other State highways and bridges, shall be apportioned to the counties on the basis of area and population. * * *

By "supplementary State highways" is meant farm-to-market roads. It is stipulated in the text of the amendment that those roads "shall be selected by mutual agreement of the State Highway Commission and the officials of such counties or political or civil subdivisions (including road districts) having charge of or jurisdiction over the roads in the territory through which such supplementary roads are to be constructed, improved and maintained."

Mr. Gary professes not to know what "supplementary roads" means. If he is sincere in that profession (and we gladly accord him sincerity), we believe he is a minority of one in his confusion. Certainly the text is plain. Certainly it should be plain why the designation "supplementary State highways" was chosen. Certainly it goes without saying that the proposed bond issue would virtually stand no chance of adoption unless it contained a provision for farm-to-market roads.

The State Highway Commission has estimated that by the ratification of the proposed bond issue there will be available, from 1930 to 1937, the sum of $40,000,000 for the construction of farm-to-market roads among all the counties of the State. That estimate is the Highway Commission's pledge, so to speak, to rural Missouri, and is so regarded by the forces supporting the proposed amendment.

Where does that leave Mr. Gary? In asserting that there is no provision for farm-to-market roads it leaves him in the unfortunate and untenable position of inferentially charging the State Highway Commission with bad faith; of charging the Governor with bad faith; of charging the Automobile Club of Missouri with bad faith; of charging the Governor's special committee that effected a compromise between the commission and the Automobile Club with bad faith; of charging the campaign committee headed by Maj. Stark with bad faith; of charging every Chamber of Commerce, every civic organization and every newspaper that have indorsed the bond issue with bad faith.

That is a grave and sweeping indictment for a private citizen to return against a Commonwealth, but that, we submit, is what Mr. Gary has presumed to do.

As to the unfairness of the plan for apportioning funds among the counties for farm-to-market roads, on the basis of area and population: If any fairer plan can be devised, what is it? If Mr. Gary has, or had, a fairer plan in mind he very becomingly might have submitted it throughout the long controversy on the bond issue which was happily settled at last by Gov. Baker's special committee. No such suggestion was made then and none is made now. And the reason is that the plan proposed is the fairest practicable method of allotting those funds.

The Post-Dispatch desires again to congratulate Mr. Gary on the able service he is rendering the road bond issue. The opposition to the great project of utilizing the ample resources and credit of Missouri in hastening the construction of an adequate, balanced State highway system has no case. Mr. Gary is demonstrating that fact unwittingly but conclusively.

THE SPLENDID BALANCE.

When a man of great wealth and a man in the high official circle of the President's Cabinet enter into the degraded relationship of briber and bribee the world hangs its head in shame. But from the sordid story told at the Washington trial we turn to the glorified obscurity of Greenly Island and learn that the breed of Homeric heroes is still carrying on. And the papers that reported the jury's verdict of acquittal also told of a flight in a tiny plane over the Arctic wastes never looked upon before.

Our Sinclairs and our Falls we may, perhaps, have with us always, but we shall also have with us always our Huenefelds and Koehls and Fitzmaurices, risking their all, including their lives, in the realization of a dream. And the names of Wilkins and Eielson, written across the skies that arch the desolation between Point Barrow and Spitzbergen, will be spoken with honor and pride in far-off, spacious, finer days which will never hear of the oil scandal's sorry pigmies. In the ledger of yesterday, today and tomorrow there is, and will continue to be, a splendid balance to humanity's credit.

ENCOURAGING AGRICULTURAL CONDITIONS.

It is just barely possible that, by the time the much-mooted farm relief question is settled, farm relief as an actual problem rather than as a political talking point will have, in part at least, solved itself.

There is evidence that agriculture is gradually rising from the slough into which it was cast after the war. Crops in 1927 were valued at $9,114,000,000, against $8,438,000,000 in 1926 and against $6,410,000,000 in 1921. It is true parts of the corn belt suffered from poor crops and a slump in the hog market; but 1927 was what might be termed a moderately profitable year in the diversified dairy and fruit sections of the East, the cotton belt, the spring wheat belt and, in a lesser degree, in the winter wheat belt, the western portion of the corn belt, the cattle and sheep country of the Far West and the Pacific coast.

Farm bankruptcies diminished from 122 per 100,000 farms in 1926 to 99 in 1927. What is probably even more encouraging, for farmers even when hard-pressed, are not wont to resort to bankruptcy courts, is a considerable decrease in the farm-to-city movement. While 1,020,000 persons were lost to the farms in 1926, only 604,000 left the land in 1927. Taking account of births and deaths, the farm population lost only 193,000 during 1927, the smallest figure for the past seven years. The continuing improvement of farm implements, and the introduction of such great labor-saving devices as the "combine" harvester, have increased crop production in the face of a declining number of farm workers.

After summing up the encouraging factors, however, one is face to face with this fact: Though farmers have been earning in the last two or three years as much or more than they did prior to the war, the cost of industrial goods and services has increased disproportionately, with the result that the farmer's dollar has lost ground. In other words, the protective tariff which the farmers seem intent on indorsing by their support of protectionist candidates has operated to put agriculture in the hole. It is plain that politically the farmer has worked against his own best interest.

IMPROVING CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

Both Chief Justice Taft and former Attorney-General Wickersham, in speeches to the American Law Institution, touched upon the movement to improve procedure in criminal cases so that justice might be administered with more certainty and speed.

Chief Justice Taft praised the institution for its efforts in that direction. Mr. Wickersham placed the blame for the present inadequacy of the administration of justice on Congress and the State Legislatures "for the delays and miscarriages of justice which characterize American criminal law."

Much can be done by legislation to simplify the code of procedure. The present laws in most of the states are cluttered up by technical obstacles in the way of the sure and swift punishment of the guilty. But the work of obtaining reform in laws is slow. Nearly all of the results of the Crime Commission's work in Missouri was lost for a time at least through the failure of the Legislature to act. A large percentage of the legal profession favors the advantage which criminal lawyers now have in defending persons charged with crime. The criminal element since the advent of bootlegging has ample funds to expend for legal talent, and the lawyers who act as their attorneys are loath to lose these rich pickings.

Meanwhile, there are signs of progress under pressure of aroused public opinion. In the trials of criminals under the present laws, St. Louis has just had a notable instance of the successful prosecution of three criminals indicted under the habitual criminal act, which carries a life sentence. These are the cases of Edward Taylor, Elmer Schneider and Joseph Buschman.

In the trials of two of the men the principal witness was murdered, to protect the men from the effect of his testimony. But in the cases of Schneider and Buschman the transcript of the testimony of Odell Slattery, the murdered Negro witness, was used. Both were convicted, thus frustrating the murder plot. Fortunately, the police found evidence upon which to indict Buschman and two others for the murder of Slattery.

The record in these cases proves what can be done when the Judges, prosecuting officer and police cooperate to get results.

AN INSTRUMENT OF PEACE.

Ten years ago, when roaring flights of Spads and SE-5's swept the pock-marked Western Front in never-ending search for patrols of Fokkers and Halberstadts, when the airplane was civilization's newest and most effective gift to the business of killing men, it would have taken a visionary man, indeed, to conceive the plane as an active instrument of peace.

Yet such it has become. The value of Colonel Lindbergh's flights in fostering international relations, is, as has been said before, inestimable. Similarly, the Chamberlin and Byrd flights across the Atlantic, the army's South American good will trip and the American visits of Costes and Lebrix have brought nations closer together.

And now, as a final demonstration of its peace-making powers, the airplane has brought Baron von Huenefeld and Capt. Koehl to our shores, along with their Irish comrade, Major Fitzmaurice. Ten years ago Koehl and Huenefeld were fighting against the United States. Today Congress is considering awarding them the Distinguished Flying Cross. Who knows but that some day, in the near future, an American may win the Iron Cross? So much has the airplane done to break down old enmities, to lay old hates and cement new friendships. It has proved that contacts and contests in peaceful pursuits make for understanding and peace.

If the Sinclair jury thought Sinclair was guilty but did not think anything ought to be done about it, isn't that a pretty fair cross section of sentiment all over the country?

THE STATE AS AN EMPLOYER.

Thomas J. Brown, chairman of the State Public Service Commission, made an interesting speech to the St. Louis Rotary Club the other day. It was a sort of confession. Here was a country lawyer suddenly confronted with problems that dazed him. These problems involved money in amounts he had never dreamed of. The very language which the petitioners spoke was a foreign tongue. Of "B. T. U.'s," of "grounded lines or common batteries," of "conductive or inductive interference in a telephone conduit"—it was all Greek. Thus, in a vein of humorously exaggerated self-depreciation he recounted the trials of his early apprenticeship as a Commissioner.

In the day's work he fitted himself for his job. How well we cannot say. Manifestly, though, there is no comparison in his value as a public servant between the novice he described and the Commissioner whose term will shortly expire. "I wish," he remarked, "I could stay longer—if the salary were more."

In that statement is an explanation, perhaps, for the relative inefficiency of our public service. Men are chosen for these difficult offices who, in the nature of things, have had no special training. They get that training at the expense of the State. They make themselves proficient. They enhance their earning power. Then, for economic or political reasons, they go back to private life and their superior equipment is lost to the public. The practice is directly contrary to that of the business world, where compensation increases with the growing ability of experience.

It ought to be practicable to remedy this condition. A man who makes good on the Public Service Commission—which is really a profession—is manifestly worth more to the State after six years than when he started in. Why should not the State pay him more? Obviously, the State as an employer cannot compete dollar-for-dollar with private enterprise, but the principle of substantially recognizing ability and experience is so fundamentally sound and just that the policy, we believe, might within limitations be adopted by the State.

Cleveland has voted to retain her city manager plan, which she finds does very well until she finds another Mayor like Tom Johnson.

Still Rises the Tide Against War

Protest Against Big Navy Program, Resulting in Its Collapse, Illustrates the New State of Mind Toward War; This Is Peculiarly the Time for Agitation in the Interest of the World's Will-to-Peace.

JOHN PALMER GAVIT in The Survey.

PEACE is not a formula or legal arrangement; it is a state of mind. Nations sometimes find themselves in war when none of them means to; it is far less likely when all of them "meant not to." The encouraging things these days are the evidences in all directions that the people of the world "mean not to." Against this increasingly evident determination there appear many efforts to thwart it—on the part of those whose game and profit is in war, of muddlers and mischief-makers, of the general pessimists—but it moves on.

In Washington the other day I was told that nobody there could remember such an avalanche of public sentiment as that which overwhelmed the first exorbitant demands of the navy crowd. I saw from letters which Senators had been obliged to issue in self-defending protest to their constituents against the assumption that they might be led to support that exuberant raid upon the Treasury. There is something pathetic in the contrast between the flamboyant arrogance with which the big-navy boomers announced that they would brook no interference with their program, even from the President, and the panic in which they were glad to accept the revised estimate of less than half. There were gloomy moments when they feared they might get nothing at all.

WE have come a long way since the installation of the Bryan treaties of 15 years ago (1913-14). In their day they were thought to be very advanced, even utopian. Mr. Bryan did not venture—perhaps it hardly occurred to him—to suggest the complete renunciation of war, all he did was to provide for a period of suspension of action, a margin of time for cooling off. Now comes Secretary Kellogg with a definite proposal to all the great nations to renounce war altogether. The original suggestion of M. Briand that war be outlawed as between France and the United States, now is being submitted on the part of both, to Great Britain, Germany, Italy and Japan. Without the active or passive participation of one or more of these, war on a large scale could not be carried on anywhere. It is the fashion in some quarters to sniff cynically at Mr. Kellogg's efforts; to regard his interchange with M. Briand as solemn bluffing. Senator Borah does not share this attitude, nor believe the efforts futile. As he said the other day:

> At present we have a network of treaties and understandings relative to peace—arbitration treaties, conciliation treaties, the Hague Tribunal, World Court, peace machinery of the League of Nations, peace machinery of Locarno. The effect of the Kellogg proposal is a solemn pledge to let all this machinery work.

Mr. Borah adds, however, the crucial point—peace is a state of mind; of the public opinion of the nations, of the world:

> Tradition, customs, fears, hatreds, fixed habits, and institutions cannot be dispelled overnight through the necromancy of words.

Given the "will-to-war," the state of mind continually provoked by fearful and pessimistic attitudes, race prejudice, mischievous gossip about our neighbors in the world, sneers at efforts to lubricate international relations, then treaties, mere words-on-paper, will be juggled, evaded, swept aside, as they were in the last war. Mr. Kellogg said it, March 15, to the Council on Foreign Relations:

> In addition to treaties there must be an aroused public conscience against the horrors and frightfulness of war.

Of the Bryan treaties, those with France, Great Britain, Japan, Norway and Portugal terminate this year; those with Chile, Ecuador, Haiti, Peru and Uruguay run "until denounced"; the treaty with Holland expires next year (March); that with Sweden runs until March, 1930. In addition to these there are other treaties in various stages of progress or suspension. It is the psychological moment.

SO this is peculiarly the time for agitation in the interest of the world's will-to-peace. Peculiarly mischievous just now—and probably that is the underlying, more or less unrealized reason for it—are all the kinds of effort to embitter international relations; including the obstinate broom-work of the militarists to sweep back the rising tide of international friendship, to minimize all tendences and measures to substitute conciliation for swashbuckling.

This "broom-work," the deliberate attempt to keep hatred alive, takes many forms. Lord Birkenhead, Secretary of State for India in the present British Cabinet, lately took occasion in the London Daily Telegraph to protest against the production in England of the film Dawn, dealing with the martyrdom of Nurse Cavell. Aside from the alleged historical inaccuracy of the dramatization, Lord Birkenhead goes to the essence of it:

> What would Nurse Cavell herself have said? The true purposes of this sainted woman—her only message to the world—are engraved on her memorial: "Patriotism is not enough. I must have no hatred or bitterness for any one."

This is no academic question for sentimentalists. It is horribly practical. Brutal statistics just published by a League of Nations committee show that something like 27,000,000 human beings are not alive now who would have been alive but for the World War. Ignore if you will the 21,000,000 decrease of births from this cause, on the theory that the world can tolerate that slowing down of population increase; remains a total of 10,000,000 casualties in the field and at least 6,000,000 civilian deaths induced by war privations. What would not the world be doing now in the face of a threat of 16,000,000 deaths due to flood, famine, pestilence, or earthquake? How volunteers would rush to serve the Red Cross, how purses would open!

To just such staggering catastrophe as this, contributes every effort to stifle the movement toward international co-operation and understanding; every cynical sneer, every mean and mischievous interpretation placed upon overtures of neighbors; every cautiousness of the hard-boiled "optimist" who "doesn't care what happens so long as it doesn't happen to him." But in the long run it does happen to him! Every "gold star" in America is the measure of the interest of that home in that assassination at Sarajevo in Herzegovina.

NOW ABOUT THIS TIME, the young man who felt that women are human creatures and that a man should be the boss around the house, was more to the young lady who had ideas of her own, but liked to listen to a monologue. Nor did he suspect aught when she appeared readily to his statement that he would handle the household finances. Nor did he suspect anything when there was dinner one evening. But thereafter, he left sufficient money about the house to pay for the groceries. And when the light company got catty and turned off the light because he had forgotten to pay the bill; he formed the habit of letting the inferior one attend to that matter also. But he persisted in believing that he should select his wife's clothes until he saw the bill. Thereafter, he was content to let her choose her own wardrobe. Now his home resembled a cross between a Kansas cyclone and a Sahara sand storm. Wherefore, he of his wife minded to put his sanctum in some semblance of order. But from the ensuing uproar, she realized that she had made a mistake. And thereafter she was content to let him misplace things as much as he would. Finally, one day, his wife asked for a pair of old shoes proving futile, she demanded did his wife know aught of their whereabouts. Now he had taken to give them to the janitor, but she responded sweetly. "You put them somewhere, dear." For some men realize these things by instinct, and for those that do not, there is the school of experience.

"It should not be expected that they will agree in all particulars with all acts of all utility corporations. Furthermore, it should not be expected that their training will transform them into ardent utility advocates. If, however, they are rendered more competent than would otherwise be the case to render praise where praise is due, to examine current utility practice in a scientific way, then their training will be well worth while. If by chance some should in after years take an attitude opposed to public utilities such an event should not be invoked as a condemnation of the instruction itself. No system of education can guarantee the quality of the product."

With much more similar evidence in the record, witnesses for the utilities were bold enough to testify that they did not consider such activities as propagandizing. In a prepared statement Mullaney justified his activities in the following words: "We do not regard our efforts as propaganda and it has no relation to Government or public ownership. Any attention we have given to the question of public ownership has only been just incidental to our informational intentions as we consider them in turning out and clearing inaccuracies, misstatements and information promulgated by broad public ownership advocates.

"A minister on Sunday devotes his time to explaining the gospels without being accused of being a propagandist. And I think we are wrongfully called propagandists in relation to the public utilities interests. We are in a successful business, an important business that touches the lives of more people than any other business enterprise in the country. We are not propagandists, we are only trying to tell the facts to everybody who will listen."

Such is Mullaney in theory. In practice, he asked his assistant, McGregor, for a hypothetical speech to be prepared for a hypothetical candidate for Senator who was opposed by a rival who favored Government ownership. McGregor's reply contained the following footnote:

"Pin the Bolsheviki Idea on Opponents."

"My idea would be not to try logic or reason but to try to pin the Bolsheviki idea on my opponents. I don't believe that the theory of Government ownership would be of much use except before a hand picked audience." Other exhibits in the record show that Mullaney made a speech shortly after this correspondence in which he called advocates of public ownership "Russia Reds."

The same divergence between fact and statement was brought out in the early hearings of the commission when utility witnesses tried to explain the statements in the newspapers owned by former representative Ira C. Copley, a former associate of Insull in the utilities business. When it was charged that the Copley papers would reflect the utilities point of view, the following statement was printed in the papers, signed by Copley: "These papers will not be the personal organs of myself or any one else. I have no political ambitions. I have no connection with any public utility anywhere and no connection with any other business than the newspaper business anywhere."

Copley's $5,000,000 Oversight.

The facts as ascertained by the commission, were that Copley still holds $5,000,000 worth of public utilities securities. One Copley employe explained the divergence by testifying that Copley meant that he held no office in the utility business. Another employe surmised that Copley "overlooked" this $5,000,000 investment.

In its recent first report to the Senate on the original Norris resolution for investigation of the alleged power monopoly, the Trade Commission said: "The right of the industry to present its case before the bar of public opinion is unquestioned, provided such presentation is made openly in the name of the industry and therefore without a semblance of deception such as may be involved in the subsidizing of authors, teachers, universities or research organizations in order that inspired text books or other materials may be given greater credibility because issued over the names of supposedly impartial writers, research or organizations or institutions of learning.

"Where this is done the general public may well question whether the scientific attitude and integrity of established institutions of higher learning are not being undermined. Truly no greater calamity could happen either to inquiry or to the public than for educators or educational institutions to become the paid mouthpieces of economic groups."

This is strong language. Yet with the present investigation just starting there is every reason to believe that the forthcoming report will be even stronger, with considerable evidence to back up the conclusions.

unanimity (and France could always prevent unanimity against one of her allies) these alliances would still work.

Other Alliances Conflict.

Thus it is not France's obligations as a League member that conflict with America's request for unqualified renouncing of war but France's independent obligations as a signatory of multiple military alliances. Such alliances and not the League covenant of which Mr. Kellogg pointed out the danger to peace in a previous note are the real obstacle to the successful negotiation of a real pact of world peace to which we are convened by the United States of America and which America may rest assured no British Government would be found prepared to reject or emasculate on technical or any other frivolous grounds.

British opinion, irrespective of party, is immeasurably nearer to Washington in this respect than it is to Paris. Almost in the same degree as America, we are unencumbered with military alliances and wholly averse from military commitments in hypothetical contingencies which have not arisen. The Liberal party, which places the League in the forefront of its foreign policy, is wholeheartedly with Washington in the matter.

What a comedy the whole business is! Conferences, committees, notes, diplomatic exchanges on disarmament and arbitration — the dove of peace chasing a hawk around the map. When she catches up it will be the hawk that will strike. The comedy will end in a tragedy.

MUNICIPAL OPERA SETS NEW RECORD IN ADVANCE SALES

Total Value of Tickets Subscribed to Date for Anniversary Season Exceeds $100,000.

CHORUS OF 96 TO BE SELECTED THIS WEEK

Scenery for Season of 12 Numbers Now Being Built — Principals Busy Learning Parts.

The Municipal Theater Association's plan of providing "seat insurance" for the tenth anniversary season of Municipal Opera, which opens June 4 at the Municipal Theater in Forest Park, has been received warmly both in St. Louis and the immediate trade territory.

A subscription for a season reservation insures the subscriber the same seat on a designated night of each of the 12 weeks of the opera cycle without the inconvenience of waiting in the long lines at the ticket offices. It also removes the possibility of the patron missing some particularly popular production because of a sell-out of tickets in advance.

An intensive campaign for season reservations was started by the theater association four weeks ago. At the time there were 1400 season reservations for 1928. More than 600 have been added in a month and the value of the tickets now subscribed exceeds $100,000. There are also a number of reservations for single nights for visiting delegates to conventions that will meet here this summer.

Largest Sale in History.

The total advance sale for the season is by far the largest in the history of the Municipal Opera, and officers of the association look upon it as being indicative of a greater interest than ever before in the al fresco presentations.

Incidentally, it is stated that the income from ticket sales this summer must exceed that of last summer, the previous banner year, if the enterprise is to remain self-sustaining. The budget for 1928 is larger than the total income realized last year from gate receipts and other sources. That is due mainly to a larger amount set aside for royalties so that the anniversary year's repertory might include outstanding light opera and musical hits of the last 10 years, and also due to higher salaries that had to be paid to obtain the principals desired for the jubilee cast.

With only five weeks before the opening of the opera season, preliminary plans are being rushed. The chorus of 96 will be selected this week from among the 200 St. Louis boys and girls who have been attending the association's chorus training school. The chorus will meet a week from tomorrow morning to begin rehearsals of "Princess Flavia," the opening week's attraction.

Principals Learning Parts.

All the principals have been furnished with scripts of the parts they will play during the summer. They are expected to be letter perfect when they arrive in St. Louis May 21.

Improvements and repairs at the Municipal Theater are well under way and the plant will be in first-class shape by the first night of the season. The scenery department is engaged in the construction of scenery for the 12 operas and the company which supplies the costumes has been furnished plates of the requirements for the entire season.

The out-of-town advertising campaign to be carried on by the association in conjunction with railroads and bus lines entering St. Louis will start next week. Literature will be distributed by the agents of the transportation companies within a 100-mile radius. Large posters will be displayed in the more important cities of the local trade territory and a smaller placard bearing an official invitation to residents of other towns to participate in the observance of the opera's tenth birthday will be placed in all railroad stations within 200 miles of the city.

GROUND LEASED TO ENLARGE NEW 15-STORY HOTEL

CLEARING BEGUN FOR HEISS HOTEL

Bradshaw Elated Over Plans for Proposed McKinley Bridge Station, at Twelfth and Washington.

BY BERRY MOORE.

Plans for the new 15-story Mark Twain Hotel to be erected at the southeast corner of Eighth and Pine streets will be revised to embrace additional ground on Eighth street.

The 20 by 128 foot plot occupied by the Eighth street entrance of the old Stratford Hotel building, but not included in the plans of the original new project, has been acquired under a 99-year lease by the building syndicate, of which Julius Feldman is president, to provide for the enlargement.

The lease of the additional ground provides for an annual net rental of $3500 for the first 10 years and $5000 a year for the remainder of the 99-year lease, the latter figures representing 5 per cent net on a valuation of $100,000 or $5000 a front foot. This dwarfs all previous records for inside ground south of Olive street in the downtown district.

Negotiations for the lease were handled by the Mercantile Trust Co., representing Thomas Dunn, owner of the plot, and Frank Dubinsky, president of the Dubinsky Realty Co., acting for the hotel building syndicate.

56 Rooms to Be Added.

The project originally only embraced 128 feet on Pine and 60 feet on Eighth street, which the building company purchased outright. With the additional ground, it will have a total depth on Eighth street of 80 feet, with a frontage on Pine of 128 feet, extending east from Eighth street to the north and south alley of the block.

The expansion will provide for an additional 56 rooms, or a total of 256 rooms, with entrances off both Pine and Eighth streets. The larger project will entail an outlay of $2,800,000, instead of $1,500,000, as under the original estimate. It has been underwritten by Straus Bros. of Chicago and New York, and the Simon Van Raalte Investment Co., of which Simon Van Raalte of St. Louis is president.

The present four-story Stratford Hotel building occupying the Pine street side of the site, is now being torn down.

Clearing Ground for Heiss Hotel.

Wor of razing the seven-story building at the northeast corner of Washington avenue and Ninth street was begun last week to make way for the new Heiss Hotel, which will rise 25 stories. Overtopping the Statler the new Heiss Hotel, designed by Preston J. Bradshaw, will establish a new sky-line for Washington avenue.

Bradshaw was elated over the plans of the McKinley System for the erection of a 12-story freight and express terminal on the city block facing High street between Morgan street and Lucas avenue, and for the establishment of a passenger station in the adjoining Carleton Building at Twelfth street and Washington avenue.

Both Washington avenue and Twelfth boulevard would be imbued with new life, he believes, as a result of the enlarged McKinley system, both streets at once assuming new importance. The entire downtown section doubtless would reflect the benefits of this project, in view of the influx into the city incident to the added transportation facilities, he suggested.

The project is heralded as a big factor in renewed real estate activity, especially in North St. Louis, where industrial activities are expected to receive stimulation.

Santa Fe Station Report.

This recalls a report current a few weeks ago to the effect that the block bounded by Twelfth boulevard and Spruce, Poplar and Thirteenth streets was being acquired for a station for the Santa Fe system. Color was given to this report with the ordinance introduced in behalf of the Santa Fe for the vacation of certain streets in this district on behalf of the Santa Fe Railroad. A passenger station on this block, it is pointed out, would be feasible in view of the railroad tracks on Poplar street. The report, however, lacks confirmation.

HUMANE SOCIETY ANIMAL SHELTER

$38,000 for New Building Pledged by Man and Wife; Site Undetermined.

A new office building and animal shelter is planned by the Humane Society of Missouri, and will be built as soon as a suitable site is provided. Money for the building, which will cost more than $30,000, has been pledged by a man and his wife, interested in the organization's work, according to an announcement made by the officers.

A campaign is now being carried on for funds for the purchase of the needed site, the location of which has not been indicated. The present quarters of the society are at 1618 Carr street.

The new cashier will have quarters for horses, dogs and other animals, and a section for contagious disease cases. Office quarters, and living quarters for a night attendant are included in the plans. Outside runways will be constructed.

ISAAC T. COOK CO. TO MANAGE LINDELL TOWER APARTMENTS

A contract for the management of the Lindell Tower Apartments by the Isaac T. Cook Co. was announced yesterday by Herbert C. Smith, manager of the apartment house division of the company. The building which is located at 3745 Lindell boulevard, is to be a 14-story structure, featuring two, three and four-room units, with bath.

Notable points of the building will be a garage occupying the entire basement and a roof garden which will serve as a playground for children and a portico for guests. The roof garden will be on a set back of the twelfth floor.

On the thirteenth and fourteenth floors will be unusually elaborate suites. Electrical refrigeration will be furnished as well as gas and electric light. The living rooms are to be large, many of them can be equipped with twin in-a-door beds at the option of the tenant.

Foundations of the structure are being poured and the Isaac T. Cook Co. is now taking reservations for October occupancy.

INTERNATIONAL LIFE ADDS TO ITS OFFICE SPACE

The International Life Insurance Co. now occupies seven entire floors of their building at Eighth and Chestnut streets.

The removal of the architectural offices of Preston J. Bradshaw from the tenth floor permits the legal and investment departments to occupy these offices. The first year department has moved from the sixteenth to the fourteenth floor, and the mail and service departments are occupying quarters on the thirteenth floor. The agency contract department has been shifted to the sixteenth floor, and the educational and public relations departments to the sixteenth.

TWO NEW BUSINESS BUILDINGS FOR DELMAR

West End Bank Will Have Quarters of Unusual Type in University City.

As a site for two new buildings, Robert Smith has purchased, through Henry R. Weisels, Inc., 50 by 100 feet on the north side of Delmar boulevard, 65 feet east of Leland avenue, in University City, from Lillian Marburger.

The eastern 32x100 feet will be improved with a new type of bank building, getting away from the old traditional style for the West End Bank. It will be two stories in height with terra cotta front. The interior will be 26 feet in height, with balcony in rear.

The west building will be 18 by 85 feet, two stories in height, terra cotta and brick front and will contain one large store. The second floor will have beauty parlors, fronting on Delmar, with efficiency apartments in the rear. It will be under the management of the Henry R. Weisels company.

The buildings to be erected by Smith will involve a total of $100,000.

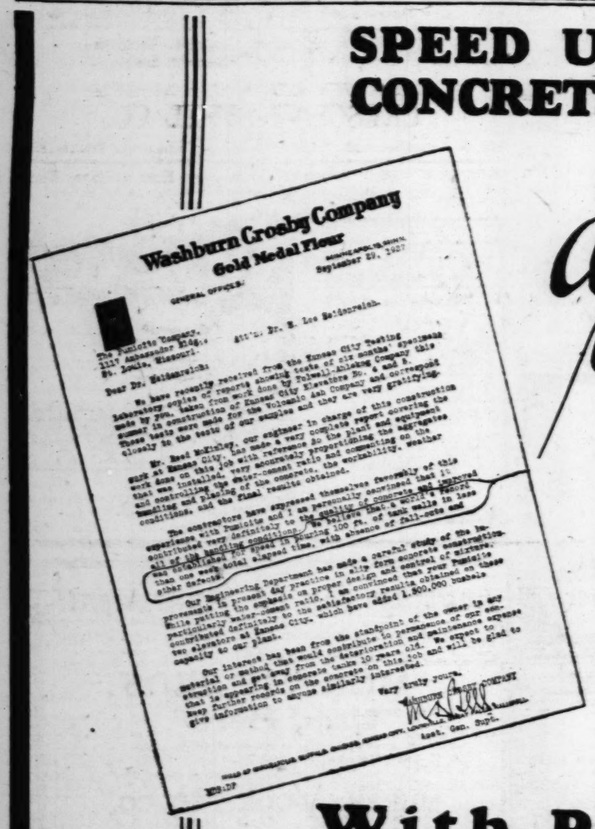
APARTMENT TO BE BUILT AT 4615 LINDELL BOULEVARD

Plans have been completed for the erection at 4615 Lindell boulevard of an apartment building of 80 units. The new building is to have a lobby across its entire front, which will be handsomely furnished. A garage will also be a feature.

The front units will consist of a reception room, six spacious rooms and three baths and a reception room and five rooms and two baths. Maid's room and maid's bath are included in the larger units. These large units are so arranged as to have the living room, master's and guest's bedroom facing south on Lindell boulevard.

There will be smaller units consisting of a spacious living room, dinette, dressing room, bedroom and a large bathroom. Only a few without bedrooms are included, and treated the same as for the smaller units. The building was designed by David R. Harrison, architect. It is being built for Harry C. Felter of the Felter Hardware Co.

SPEED UP YOUR CONCRETE WORK



A World's Record!

On this particular job test cylinders were made to determine the crushing strength per square inch. On 5½ bags of cement used per cubic yard, straight cement cylinders in 28 days broke from 2234 lbs to 2300 lbs. The cylinders where Pumicite was substituted for part of cement by using 5 bags of cement and 40 lbs. of Pumicite per cubic yard in 28 days the weakest cylinder broke at 2260 lbs., the strongest at 2680 lbs. In the 60-day strength test, straight cement cylinders broke from 2026 lbs. to 2604 lbs., while Pumicite mixed with cement broke at 2730 lbs. to 3722 lbs.

With Pumicite

If it enabled Folwell-Ahlskog of Chicago to build elevator bins at an average rate of 13 feet 2 inches per day with a maximum of 14 feet—compared to an average of plain concrete of between 7 and 9 feet—if it speeded up their job—it will do the same for you. Actual tests show that where Pumicite is used as an alloy with cement it makes a more workable mortar; keeps conveyors cleaner; makes a denser mix; makes a stronger concrete; makes a smoother wall; with no loss in weight or bulk.

Resolve now that your concrete work will be better and faster—call on us, write, phone or wire, and we'll prove to you that "Pumicite Perfects Concrete."

There is no additional cost in using Pumicite, each bag replacing one of cement.

Cost Finding and Financing Your Own Home.

Specifications and Definite Plans Are Very Important, and Must Have First Consideration.

By F. R. Wyatt
STRODTMAN & STRODTMAN R. E. CO.

It is very desirable to ascertain as closely as possible, what your proposed building is going to cost. To do so, you must have definite plans and specifications for your house which you can submit to local contractors for estimates. Then decide definitely on such items as heating, lighting, plumbing, and interior finish, for they very materially affect the total cost.

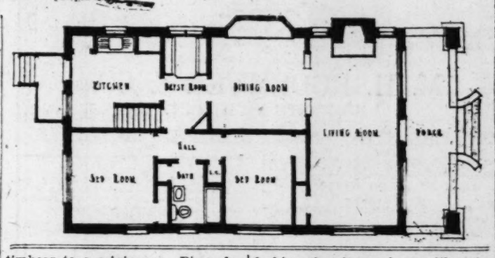
Except when you buy a house, on contract, already built by some home-building company, you should own a lot, have some money saved up for a first payment, and have your house plans complete, before undertaking the problem of financing. Then have your plans convincing — that is, such that the house, costing about five times the value of the lot, would show when built the least possible depreciation, and prove readily salable if necessary. Thus equipped, you are well prepared to talk business.

Of course, if you have saved up half enough to pay for the house and lot, there is practically no problem at all, except to be sure that you are in a position to carry and liquidate the first mortgage you place on the property to secure the other half of the needed fund. In fact, you may find it desirable to carry a first mortgage indefinitely, provided you are sure that you can make more on the money in your business than the mortgage costs.

In case you have little or no accumulated capital, the building and loan association offers an excellent plan for financing your project in which you are dealing with only one party. Some local association whose officials are known to you will perhaps prove to be most satisfactory to deal with. Membership in the association is necessary in order to participate in its benefits, as it is operated by and for its members only. You become a member by purchasing shares of stock — as many or as few as you choose — which may be paid for in monthly or weekly installments of 50 cents or more per share. These payments participate in the profits of the association, compounded quarterly or semi-annually.

To secure a loan for your project, you subscribe for stock equal in amount to the sum desired, paying monthly installments of perhaps one per cent of the value of the stock.

A Beautiful Six-Room Home



THIS beautiful six-room bungalow is ideally arranged for a small family. A large porch extends across the entire width of the house. As you enter, the living room extends full length, with a fireplace at one end, and a large window at the other. There are two large windows in the front, and two small ones at either side of the fireplace. Immediately to the rear of the living room is the breakfast room and kitchen.

The two bedrooms and bath are connected by a hall, and are entirely away from the rest of the house.

A long sloping roof with a dormer window about half way down gives the outside of the house a very pleasing appearance. The lower part of the side wall is built of timber and the gables are stuccoed.

For further information regarding this house address the Home Builder, Post-Dispatch.

Plumbing Is an Important Item in Home Building.

By John J. Shea,
PEERLESS-MISSOURI CO.

One of the most important items about home planning is the plumbing system. A house is an utter failure if the plumbing is not perfectly sanitary and equipped with modern day fixtures and a properly arranged noiseless and convenient system.

Good plumbing promotes health, and good health means happiness. The prospective home builder should first consult a good architect and builder and instruct them to employ good reliable plumbers-mechanics who desire to do a first-class job and capable of doing it in that manner.

The installation of the elementary piping, such as pipes for water supply, sewage and ventilation, should be given particular attention. Some plumbers are careless about this work and in order to rush a job often cut the floor joice and partitions in such a way as to weaken the house.

A plumbing system arranged by thoroughly reliable and competent plumbers will reduce this cutting of timbers to a minimum. Pipes for the water supply conduct water from the main in the street to the house and to the various fixtures in the kitchen and bathroom.

Pipes for sewage carry off waste from the fixtures, discharging into the sewer, or cesspool or septic tank system.

Pipes for ventilating admit fresh, clean air to the sewage system. Piping and fittings should be the best and should be airtight and watertight and joined in such a fashion that it can be readily taken apart and cleaned for repairs.

Do not overlook the importance of selecting fixtures for the kitchen and bathroom. The charm of a beautiful bathroom enriches the entire house or home. The bathtub, lavatory and kitchen sink are necessary furnishings for the modern home and should be given the proper thought when building. White enameled ware has proven itself the most desirable and durable for this purpose.

Tile Is the Ideal Interior Finish.

When you have the interior of your home finished in beautiful tiles you have the satisfaction of knowing that it is the finest you can buy. The first cost is not excessive—and it is the only cost, for tiles never have to be refinished in any way. What counts is this perpetual economy of tiles, which is demonstrated in their use from day to day and in their long life.

Tiles assure the proper kind of walls and floor for that most important room—the kitchen. The tiled wainscot solves the problem of splashed, spotted walls. A damp cloth will clean them instantly. The floor of tiles is pleasant under foot. Refinishing is never necessary. Ever new in appearance—always attractive—unlimited in design and decorative possibilities.

The fireplace is truly the heart of the home. Here one seeks the dignity of quiet beauty, and an atmosphere of restfulness. Tiles impart such an atmosphere in an unusual degree. Their distinctiveness sets the fireplace apart as a thing of charm and a source of continuous satisfaction.

THE COMIC-STRIP ROMANCE of the School Teacher and the Rich Mr. Stork

For Twelve Years It Ran Its Course Through Assault-and-Battery, Damage Suits and Divorce—And Now They Are Married.

Mrs. C. Warner Stork No. 2.

C. Warner Stork.

By ARTHUR STRAWN

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

BALTIMORE, Maryland.

A LAWSUIT for $100,000, a divorce, an arrest for disturbing the peace, two more suits for $300,000, and, finally, an elopement and marriage—such are the chapter headings that mark the comic-strip romance of C. Warner Stork, wealthy Baltimore real estate operator, and Miss Adelaide Doing, former school teacher, who, after 12 years of battling, legal and otherwise, were married in New York last month.

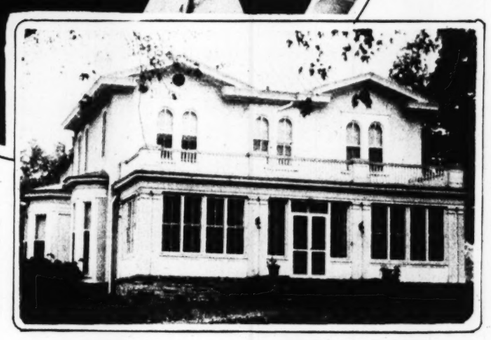
Theirs was obviously a case of true love, for its course was no smoother than the North Atlantic in a winter storm. And in the end, despite the rough sailing, love triumphed. Their large circle of acquaintances, consisting of the newspaper readers in and about Baltimore, are wishing them the best of luck and hoping they will live happy ever after. After being provided with so many years of entertainment, only an ungrateful public could do less.

However, to the many Baltimoreans who have been keeping up with the irregular installments of the Stork-Doing thriller, the final chapter came as something of a sharp surprise. To be sure, sentimental novelists and disillusioned cynics both agree that marriage is the usual way to end a romance. But after that little scene in the Northern Police Court, four months ago, where Mr. Stork informed the Judge that he didn't have a very high opinion of Miss Doing, and where Miss Doing hastened to assure the Judge that the feeling was mutual, who would have dared to prophesy that a few months later they would skip off to a preacher and put themselves in a position where they would have to listen to such opinions from one another for the rest of their natural lives?

The exact circumstances under which the newlyweds met remain a mystery. But the event took place about 12 years ago. Clinton Warner Stork was then a man of 45 and had just amassed enough money in real estate transactions to begin calling himself C. Warner Stork. Besides apartment houses, dwellings and property, Mr. Stork had other possessions, to wit: One wife, to whom he had been married almost 20 years; two daughters and a son. Miss Doing was a young lady of 22. Furthermore, as she told Magistrate Schroeder four months ago, an inexperienced one. To complicate matters, Miss Doing was in love with another man. These circumstances would have been enough to discourage most men. But not C. Warner Stork.

"Mr. Stork told me that he was unhappy with his wife," said Miss Doing to the Magistrate. "He told me that he couldn't live without me. Then he took me to Europe to forget the other man."

Mrs. Mary Stork, the first wife of Mr. Stork, and their two daughters.



Mr. Stork's residence in Baltimore.

The trip to Europe seems to have been a master stroke. Miss Doing not only forgot the other man completely, but Mr. Stork seemed to have done exactly the same thing for his family.

However, he continued to live in his large house in the fashionable neighborhood of North Charles street, but he was spending many week-ends away from home. He took many trips. Sometimes his older daughter or son accompanied him.

THE strange part of it was that Miss Doing would accidentally run into them somewhere along the route and thereafter remain a member of the party. Of course, all the proprieties were observed. On the trip to Cuba, for instance, Miss Mary Stork shared her stateroom with Miss Doing, and later, when they reached New York on the way home, each had a separate room in the hotel. And on another occasion, when Stork was in Florida with his son, Miss Doing happened to meet them. From then on she stayed on Mr. Stork's small yacht. There was only one large cabin on the boat, and at night she shared it with Mr. Stork, but that was quite all right, because their bunks were separated by a heavy curtain. At their father's request, neither of the children reported these events to Mrs. Stork.

"You see," Mr. Stork would explain to them, "Miss Doing is a very good client and I have to be nice to her. And your mother, of course, wouldn't understand."

Not knowing about these events, Mrs. Stork, of course, didn't understand. And when she did find out about them, she proved that Stork had sadly underestimated her judgment. She understood it all very clearly, and the odd part of it was that her understanding didn't make her like it a bit more.

As Mrs. Stork later testified in Superior Court, an event took place which made her understand the situation without a shadow of a doubt. One Saturday night, in November, 1924, Mr. Stork went out. At 3 o'clock on the following morning the telephone in the Stork home rang. Mrs. Stork answered it. It was from her husband.

"A woman is coming to the house," he informed her. "Don't let her in. She has just broken my glasses and stuck her foot through my windshield."

This was, one must admit, rather surprising information to receive from a husband over the telephone at 3 o'clock in the morning.

"Why don't you have her arrested?" she asked.

"I can't," Stork replied. Then he hung up.

Mrs. Stork then got dressed and awaited the advent of her early morning visitor. From the window she soon saw her husband driving his car into the path leading to the garage. A minute later a woman and a policeman appeared on the scene. They followed Stork into the kitchen. And then Mrs. Stork saw that her caller was none other than Miss Doing, the same good-looking, statuesque brunette who had been introduced to her one day at her husband's office as "a client."

Stork asked Miss Doing to leave the house. Even though the dapper little real estate operator bore the marks of having been roughly handled by the lady, he was still courteous enough to offer to call a cab in which to send her home. This offer didn't please Miss Doing.

"You've taken me home many times yourself," she replied, "and you're going to do it now."

At this time the officer of the law interrupted.

"Why, you can't expect this man to take you home," he expostulated. "You busted his glasses and he can't see."

MRS. STORK then turned to her husband and asked him to be good enough to explain Miss Doing's presence in their kitchen.

"Oh, it's something you don't understand," he answered. This reply, however, did not dispose of the question, and his daughter, Mary, who had formed Miss Doing's acquaintance on the trip to Cuba, then asked her the object of her visit. Instead of answering this question, Miss Doing informed the group that Stork had taken her to Europe. Furthermore, she added that she considered him a "damned cad." Both the policeman and Stork thought this was a very harsh name to call a man who had taken her to Europe. Whereupon, they both escorted her out of the house. A few minutes later Stork returned.

"The policeman put her in a taxi and sent her home," he explained. "I hope you're satisfied."

As events proved, this was hoping for a little too much. Not only was Mrs. Stork not satisfied, but neither was Miss Doing. A short time later the lady who had called Mr. Stork a "damned cad" added injury to insult by suing him for $100,000. The suit was filed by titling. Thereby the grounds for the suit do not have to be disclosed until some time after filing, so that the reasons for her suit were not made known at the time. And while this suit was pending Mrs. Stork, in May, 1925, filed suit for divorce.

THE case came up in October. Miss Doing was named as co-respondent. Mr. Stork was described by his wife as "a night owler" and "one of the greatest week-enders in Baltimore." Evidence was introduced concerning the numerous trips Stork and Miss Doing had taken together, including two to Europe. Looked at from any angle, the testimony was not very flattering to Stork, although it did make him out a sort of devil with the ladies.

"Five years ago," Mrs. Stork said to the Judge, "I swore I would never spend another vacation with him at Atlantic City because of his carryings on with other women there. He paraded on the beach with all of them and paid very little attention to his family. Sometimes he would make eyes with the girls on the beach right under my very nose. His actions were very objectionable. The waiters snickered at us at the hotel where we stopped because he was always late for meals. He was in his bathing suit walking with other women on the beach."

Two days of such testimony convinced Mr. Stork that enough had been said on the subject. The case came to a sudden end. A settlement was made out of court and Mrs. Stork was granted an absolute divorce, an annual annuity in lieu of alimony and a sum for her counsel fees. And just 10 days later Miss Doing withdrew her mysterious suit against Stork for $100,000, without ever having disclosed the grounds on which it had been brought.

Two years passed, and it seemed that Mr. Stork's affairs had settled themselves. Then, late one afternoon last November, Mr. Stork dashed into the Northern Police Station and frantically asked for help. He was excited and disheveled and looked something like he had appeared that morning after Miss Doing had broken his glasses and kicked in his windshield. He said that a woman was at his home and he wanted her removed and arrested for disturbing the peace. Patrolman Moore accompanied him to his residence. The woman who had so upset Mr. Stork was still there and seemed to be quite willing to accompany the officer. She was arrested and locked up. She refused to be bailed out, and instead spent the night at the station. And the next morning Baltimore was again made aware of the fact that Mr. Stork and Miss Doing were still enjoying their romance.

AT THE hearing before Magistrate Schroeder in police court, Stork appeared as prosecuting witness against Miss Doing. He presented his complaint with heat.

"For five years this woman has been bothering me," he told the Court. "Three years ago she broke up my home. Then she sued me for $100,000. Lately she has been coming to my house and refusing to leave when asked. Last night I came home with a guest and found her already in my house. She was making so much noise that my guest was forced to leave. Then I went into the kitchen and she followed me and said: 'If you don't give me $5000 I'll kill you!'

"I talked to her and tried to get her to leave, but she grabbed me and started to tussle. She tore my coat. See, here it is."

Stork displayed a badly ripped coat and then added that, under pretence of going into another room for a drink, he had left the house and hastened to the police station.

Miss Doing had another story to tell. She told the Judge that when she came to the house she found Stork already there with his guest. Furthermore, she added, that guest was a woman.

"There was no disturbance," she said, "except what Stork made. He threw me on the floor and bruised my knee.

"I have given that man 12 years of my life," she added.

"All this has very little to do with the case," interrupted the Judge. "The charge is disturbing the peace. I don't want to hear any more of it. I am going to hold this case open for six months. If you are brought here again for disturbing Mr. Stork's peace, a double penalty will be imposed."

TEN days later Miss Doing filed two suits against Stork. One asked for $100,000 damages, alleging that Stork had assaulted her and thrown her to the floor the night of her arrest. The second suit, for $200,000, was for breach of promise and alleged that she and Stork had "agreed to marry, and that she was always ready and willing to have the ceremony performed, but that he refused to carry out his agreement."

Three months later Stork and Miss Doing, accompanied by a few friends, took a train to New York and were married. They had decided, apparently, to stop quarreling in public.

The Stork-Doing nuptials were chronicled largely in the Baltimore papers, but not, it should be added, in the society columns. They are not going to Europe on a honeymoon. Europe, it seemed, was just too full of memories for Mr. and Mrs. Stork. And if the newspapers which have had so much to say about the Storks are a little bit disappointed at this tame ending, the Judges of the city, who grew slightly weary of geometric exercises, demonstrated on the Stork-Doing triangle, are well pleased.

Bailey Manning.

TAZEWELL, Tenn.

A T TWILIGHT on October 20, 1924, Dr. E. J. McDaniel, town dentist, strolled to the post-office for the late afternoon mail. With him was his 11-year-old son, Stanley. After exchanging greetings with the Postmaster, the dentist and his son left and walked down the quiet street toward home.

Suddenly a sport model Dodge automobile drew up to the curb and the muzzle of a shotgun was poked out. The gun roared five times and Dr. McDaniel fell to the sidewalk, riddled with slugs, as the machine sped away The dentist died almost instantly.

The murder occurred without warning and so quickly that no witnesses to the actual shooting could be found. The police, therefore, looked for someone who might have had a motive for shooting the dentist.

First of all they ran over the list of Tazewell citizens who owned Dodge automobiles. One of the first names they came across was that of Bailey Manning, garageman, and brother-in-law of Dr. McDaniel. The men had married sisters.

So Bailey Manning was arrested for questioning. There was a story current among the town gossips that Manning was "pretty friendly" with Mrs. McDaniel. This was supported by the fact that the McDaniels didn't get along very well and that Bailey Manning called frequently on his sister-in-law.

Manning admitted that he was fond of his sister-in-law but denied that he sought to turn her against her husband or that their relations had been improper. But the preponderance of testimony was against him and he was formally charged with the murder and put on trial.

The prosecution, through a long list of witnesses, built up a strong case of motive and circumstantial evidence and Bailey Manning was convicted and sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary. He appealed the case and waited two years for the Supreme Court's decision.

Meanwhile he reflected that, while things looked pretty black and he might have to go to prison, he was still at home with his wife and three children, and Jim Willis was still standing by him.

THIS Jim Willis was a real pal. All through the long hours of the trial he had stood by Manning, believed his story and given him words of encouragement. Except for Manning's wife, Jim Willis was probably the only person in the courtroom who believed in his innocence. He had once been a lawyer but was now a farmer.

Before his "trouble," Manning had always rather disliked Willis, not definitely, but vaguely, as people will sometimes conceive a dislike for a stranger. But when he had been arrested and people were noising it about that he had killed Dr. McDaniel, Jim Willis had come to the rescue with kind words and cheer and, most important of all, faith in Manning's innocence.

"Stick it out, boy," he would say, with a pat on the back, "and everything will turn out all right." And when Manning would repeat over and over again that he had been alone on

But Many of Bailey Manning's Townsmen Still Wonder About the Slaying of Dr. E. J. McDaniel.

Meanwhile he reflected that, while things looked pretty black and he might have to go to prison, he was still at home with his wife and three children, and Jim Willis was still standing by him.

THIS Jim Willis was a real pal. All through the long hours of the trial he had stood by Manning, believed his story and given him words of encouragement. Except for Manning's wife, Jim Willis was probably the only person in the courtroom who believed in his innocence. He had once been a lawyer but was now a farmer.

Before his "trouble," Manning had always rather disliked Willis, not definitely, but vaguely, as people will sometimes conceive a dislike for a stranger. But when he had been arrested and people were noising it about that he had killed Dr. McDaniel, Jim Willis had come to the rescue with kind words and cheer and, most important of all, faith in Manning's innocence.

"Stick it out, boy," he would say, with a pat on the back, "and everything will turn out all right." And when Manning would repeat over and over again that he had been alone on another street at the time of the murder, Willis would accept it as gospel truth. Everybody else sniffed at the unbolstered alibi.

Jim Willis was optimistic over the chances of the jury's decision being reversed by the Supreme Court. He knew the ways of the courts from his years of experience in the cockpits of jurisprudence and he couldn't see anything but a reversal. They used to talk it over when they met on the street. He was certainly a comfort, was Jim Willis.

It was a sad blow, then, to Bailey Manning when, six months after his conviction, Jim Willis himself was shot by a deputy sheriff in an altercation over a contempt summons. The bullet lodged against Willis' spine and paralyzed him below the waist, so that he became a helpless man. Worse than that, it wrecked his health and it was plain that he couldn't last many weeks.

ONE night Jim Willis summoned L. D. Smith, who had defended Manning in court, to his bedside, ostensibly to talk over with him plans for filing a damage suit against the deputy sheriff who had shot him. He was not going to die, not he, and while he had a spark of life left in him he was going to settle with that deputy. His wife and a neighbor nodded approval of his attitude and when Willis asked them to leave the room for a few minutes, while he conferred confidentially with lawyer Smith, they departed, satisfied that he would fight for his life to the last ditch.

But when they had left, Jim Willis sank back against the pillow exhausted and called to lawyer Smith to come closer. And for half an hour they talked, Willis carrying the burden of the conversation while the lawyer wrote and asked an occasional question. Finally, the lawyer handed the paper to Willis, who read it over and signed it with a quivering hand.

Once more he sank back against the pillow but this time his face wore what looked like a smile.

"I've wanted to get that off my chest for a long time," he said. "You keep that in your pocket in case I die. Better call my wife back and let her witness that signature."

Mrs. Willis and the neighbor came back and signed the paper without bothering to note its contents. Lawyer Smith put the paper in his pocket and departed.

Not many days later Jim Willis died.

That was the hardest blow of all for Bailey Manning. He could stand being misunderstood by the majority of his friends as long as one stood by him, and without the old familiar voice of Jim Willis and his welcome pat on the back Manning felt like one at the mercy of an inscrutable fate, and a hard one. He knew in his bones now that he was slated for the penitentiary.

In another year and a half, the Supreme Court's decision came and it was an unfavorable one. It upheld the decision of the lower court and affirmed the sentence. This was no news to Bailey Manning, who had already prepared himself for the long servitude behind the bars.

So he went, and Tazewell resumed its ordinary pursuits, relegating the Manning-McDaniel case to history. It saw no reason to doubt that justice had been served in the case of Bailey Manning and it regretted that a fine fellow like Jim Willis should have been so deceived by a branded murderer. There was no accounting for such things and Tazewell philosophically accepted it.

To Bailey Manning, however, after a year in the penitentiary came a pardon.

JOYFULLY, he packed his grip, stepped back into civilian clothes and took the train for Tazewell. In his pocket was a paper certifying to the fact that the Governor of Tennessee, believing that Bailey Manning had been unjustly convicted of murder, thereby granted him his freedom and restored his citizenship, and let all persons by these presents be so informed. That seemed to clear up everything for Manning. All he had to do now was go back home, show the town his pardon and everything would go on as it had before this ghastly murder experience.

But, if he thought that, Bailey Manning was mistaken. Tazewell was not prepared to accept him back in such an easy manner. More than that, many of its citizens were indignant that he had ever been released. And they didn't hesitate to say so.

And why?

Because the evidence used in obtaining the pardon consisted largely in a document that cast a slur on the memory of one of the county's respected dead! Because the document on which the Governor had acted named the late Jim Willis of hallowed memory as the murderer of Dr. McDaniel!

And it wasn't only some witness' affidavit that connected Jim Willis with the crime; it was Jim Willis' own word, rising up out of his grave, that he had killed Dr. McDaniel with his own hand, and that Bailey Manning was innocent! A confession, signed in the wabbly hand of a paralytic!

This was the paper which Jim Willis had dictated and signed a year and a half previous when, fearing death, he called in lawyer Smith and conferred privately with him. Lawyer Smith was now Attorney-General of the State.

The confession read:

"I, James N. Willis, in view of mortal injuries sustained on August 8, 1925, at my home, and the belief that I have not many days to live, having been so advised by reputable physicians and surgeons in whom I have confidence, as well as my own knowledge of my physical condition, desire to make this statement and confession in justice to the innocence of Bailey Manning, who has been unjustly charged with having killed Dr. E. J. McDaniel.

"About a week before Dr. McDaniel's death, he mistreated me in such a way that I told him at Middlesboro, Kentucky, that I would kill him. The details of the trouble I need not state, but his treatment of me was worse than I had ever experienced and I did not think I could stand it.

"Suffering from that insult and that treatment, the feeling for revenge grew until it became an almost insane impulse to carry out my threat to kill him. So that I did so in Tazewell, Tennessee. Bailey Manning had nothing whatever to do with it and is entirely innocent. The responsibility is mine and I take the burden of answering to God for my act. This statement is made that my own conscience may be relieved and in justice to all concerned. Done at my home on this 28th day of September, 1925.

(Signed) "J. N. Willis."

Well, wasn't that a pretty development! So the man who had befriended Manning and stood by him in his darkest hours, ready with a pat on the back and a word of encouragement, had committed the crime for which Manning had gone to the penitentiary? No wonder he had been friendly.

People openly disbelieved it; said the confession was a forgery. Bailey Manning himself admitted he had never suspected Jim Willis.

Bailey Manning and his wife, who helped him to get a pardon.

"I DIDN'T commit the crime," he said, "but I went to prison because I was afraid some other innocent man might suffer the same fate that faced me. I knew that Dr. McDaniel had had dealings with a number of persons and that he had had trouble with several.

"As for Willis, somehow I had always thought he didn't like me much. During and after my trial, however, I began to think I had misjudged him. Every time he met me he would slap me on the back and say, 'Don't worry, my boy, you'll come out all right.' At the time I didn't attach much importance to these remarks."

A lot of people didn't attach much importance to Manning's remarks, either, and said so. Attorney-General Smith, under fire, told the circumstances under which he had obtained the confession.

Tazewell citizens demanded to know why Smith had waited almost two years to submit the confession. To which Smith replied that the first time the Supreme Court had considered the case, Willis was alive and that his confession was therefore still a confidential matter. However, at the time, Smith intimated to several officials that he had a confession clearing Manning in order to pave the way for its introduction later.

When the court again took the matter up, Willis was dead and his statement could not be presented before that body as evidence, since it had not been offered to the trial court. He waited until the sentence had been affirmed and then put the document before the Board of Pardons. The late Governor Austin Peay was unable to see his way clear to granting a pardon but his successor, Governor Horton, issued one.

Still, people were not satisfied. They once more began to review the murder and the events which led up to it. Bailey Manning and Dr. McDaniel had married sisters. Because of the relationship, Manning was very devoted to Mrs. McDaniel and often called on her. Gossip linked their names unfavorably. What more natural than that enmity should exist between Manning and Dr. McDaniel?

THE tread-prints in the street near the scene of the murder corresponded to those left by the tires on Manning's car. Shotgun shells found in the gutter were of the same make as some purchased from a local store by Manning.

Manning's description of his whereabouts at the time of the shooting was not satisfactory. No, nobody was with him. He had no witnesses to swear to his alibi. Just his own word.

Some people in Tazewell and elsewhere still don't think it is enough. Mrs. Willis, for instance, the widow of Jim Willis, states that she never left the room during attorney Smith's visit, when he claimed to have obtained the confession that let Bailey Manning out of the penitentiary. Nothing was discussed but the damage suit, she avers.

T. L. McDaniel, of Ewing, Virginia, brother of the murdered dentist, offered the pardon board an affidavit of one A. T. Drinnon, Hancock County banker, to the effect that he was with Jim Willis on the evening of the murder and that they never left the house.

But the majority of Manning's acquaintances accept his innocence and, anyway, he has a pardon from Governor Horton that makes him a free man.

Manning doesn't know what he will do. Probably he will go into the garage business again and try to rebuild. Mrs. McDaniel and her son have moved elsewhere to forget the tragedy. But the identity of the man who shot down Dr. E. J. McDaniel will always be an open question in the minds of many here in Tazewell.

The Girl Who Started Her Career by Robbing Her Grandfather Now Wants to Die Rather Than Accept the Life-Term Prison Sentence of An "Habitual Criminal."

Jean Cameron.

Another view of the comely adventuress.

Jean Cameron as she appeared a few hours before she took poison.

ALBANY, New York.

JEAN CAMERON, girl criminal, whose brag was that she could "vamp any guy, any time, even in jail," has encountered a new type of guy here in Albany hospital. This guy has taken up his post in the corridor outside her room and is so immune to the usual racket of man-charming that Jean Cameron has given up trying to trap him.

He is rather a familiar figure, clothed in a dark brown robe whose folds blow apart now and then to show his bony frame underneath. Under his cowl grins a human skull and in his hands rests an hourglass, slowly and exactly counting the hands of life. It's hard to get a reaction out of this gaunt caller. There is no fire to light up in his eye sockets and he never says a word. A peculiar guy; no particular appeal and no reaction at all. You can't get a rise out of him. The nurse says he isn't there, but he is.

Bichloride of mercury has taken a bit of pep out of Jean Cameron anyway and she is not trying hard to delude her visitor. Rather, she welcomes his apparent mastery over her as the only release from the troubles that now beset her.

She would much prefer his company, with all it means, to the life sentence in a New York penitentiary which awaits her as an "habitual criminal," as described in the Baumes law. The day before "going to bat" on a charge of stealing an automobile, Jean swallowed the mercury tablets. The State of New York is trying to save her life for the long stretch in the penitentiary, but she wants to die.

DEATH, or the Baumes law, will end a career that has received much flamboyant publicity since 1919, when Jean, then 19 years old, robbed her grandfather. Appropriately enough, this first offense, the beginning of a colorfully splotched career, took place in Chicago, now renowned as the home of "pineapple" tossing and protected "spots." Jean, however, was born in Milwaukee and was sent to Chicago by her mother so that she might grow up in a favorable atmosphere! Her parents were separated and her mother wanted her raised for society. She should have frocks, gowns, nice companions and a debut, followed, perhaps, by a brilliant marriage, for Jean was strikingly pretty.

Jean accepted the clothes and the surroundings, but chose her own companions. They were four slick boys who were living high in Chicago on the backwash of the war. It was a sippy life, but it took cash, more than Jean's allowance gave her. So the five good friends hit upon the idea of robbing Jean's grandfather, John R. Mulvey, a well-to-do wholesale candy dealer. Jean was caught and told of her four companions, but the affair was hushed up by Mulvey.

At this time, Mrs. Robert Wells, one of her best friends, not knowing of the Mulvey affair, asked Jean to come and live with her. Jean was a lively and pretty girl, although it was not known at the time that the glow in her eyes was due to tuberculosis. She would be an adjunct to the Wells household.

Two days after her entrance into the Wells home she disappeared, taking along with her a sable coat, frocks and gowns and jewelry valued at $10,000. Arrested in New York with her loot, and a new friend, Jean was taken back to Chicago and put in a jail cell. Here, with the help of Chicago newspaper reporters, she broke into the headlines by sticking her tongue in her cheek and asking: "Well, what are you going to do about it?" Jean was one of the original juvenile delinquents whose escapades were blamed on the war. "Society girl," too. That made good copy.

NOW she had a good start on her tabloid career. A jury convicted her and sentenced her to from "one to ten years" in the State prison at Joliet. What a story it made a few months after she went to prison when she calmly "walked out" one day! She was the only woman who ever got away with that at Joliet. Headlines again, pictures of the "girl bandit" and nation-wide search followed.

For three years she managed to evade capture while daring robberies were attributed to her, rightly or not. In 1923 she was caught in her old home town of Milwaukee, but in some manner won her release. No one ever knew how she did it, but she was a stunning looker and "wasn't saying much." Judge for yourself.

Illinois never gave up the search, though. It wasn't long before a "rubber" check that she had left in Albany snapped back at her and landed her in jail here. Through the alert press, Joliet authorities heard of the 30 days' sentence she received on the bad check charge and sent an officer to bring her back.

Jean heard about it, and it is safe to say that she was beginning to feel oppressed that police officers were always trying to run her down. Before her 30-day sentence was up she snatched a pistol from the pocket of a Deputy Sheriff one day and shot herself. The wound was serious and she had to be invalided back to Milwaukee, from which place she was returned to Joliet to finish her sentence. Here a member of the Parole Board became interested in her case and recommended her release on the grounds that her health had been seriously undermined by the gunshot wound and tuberculosis. So Jean was paroled.

After a long rest, she began operations all over again, this time in the East. The jailer of the Mount Holly (N. J.) lockup eventually became her host. It was another case of a bad check. A butcher had become suspicious and called a policeman. Jean had fled and had been captured after a long chase, being jailed in default of $500 bail.

ENTER jovial Harry ("Bowler") Haines (call me Bowler), bootlegger, grocer, "sportsman" and friend of the downtrodden, particularly girls.

Haines may have known his krispy crackers and Post Toasties, but his other "groceries" had suffered from neglect. All he saw was a pretty girl, behind bars. Thanks to the art of Jean Cameron, he didn't see anything else. Otherwise she might have languished in Mount Holly indefinitely.

The "half a grand" bail money was petty cash to the "Bowler." Not content with this glowing act of charity, he was soon bowling along to greater efforts, spurred on by the captivating Jean. First, he bought her old automobile from her, the one in which she had performed a number of "jobs" with Frank Urban, a companion. They drove in this car to Camden, N. J., to right a few more wrongs leveled at the little girl by police officials.

CAPTAIN GOLDEN of the Camden force was willing to listen to reason in the matter of a few checks passed on Camden merchants. After a long conference Captain Golden gave vocal birth to the benevolent paradox that Jean "was an habitual crook, but not a bad girl." And that was that.

But it wasn't all, as "Bowler" Haines was beginning to realize. There was Mrs. Anna Baker of Albany, who insisted on knowing what had become of her $800 fur coat. Haines settled that. But the Trenton officials were yelling about another bad check charge. Haines hired a lawyer and the lawyer obtained a writ of habeas corpus from Supreme Court Justice Katzenbach, after Jean had spent a few days in jail.

Well, you'd think a girl might show a little gratitude after all that, hey? What does she do? She "lams it" with $100 of his cash! These janes! A fellow had to learn, hey? If the "Bowler" hasn't learned by now, he is probably working behind a grocery counter again.

Mrs. Julia Howe, a well-to-do young widow of New York City, was the next victim of Jean Cameron's treachery. Mrs. Howe had once gone to school with Jean and when they met on the street in New York, Jean invited her old friend to her apartment at 73 Madison avenue, where she introduced Frank Urban, her accomplice, as her fiance.

They went to a show and supper club that night and returned to Mrs. Howe's apartment at 45 Fifth avenue for another bite. It was late and Jean and her "fiance" were invited to stay for the night. Urban stretched out on a settee and Jean was to sleep with Mrs. Howe.

Just as she was about to retire, Mrs. Howe was slugged from behind, knocked unconscious and brutally beaten. When she came to, bound and gagged, she found that her guests had departed with jewelry and clothes valued at $6500. It was hours before she could attract the attention of a maid, who summoned police.

"She looked like a mule had kicked her in the face," said Detective O'Neill. She has been traveling ever since, trying to regain her strength.

IN A FEW more weeks the law had once more laid a finger on the fur collar of Jean Cameron's coat, and she walked to an automobile with one arm gripped by a big hand. This time it was in Albany again.

Hardened, but still cocksurely pretty, she marched into the Albany jail.

"I won't be in long," she said, and the jailer took it to mean that she had a way of escape figured out. Or perhaps she figured on beating that charge of stealing an automobile, for which Frank Urban was also to stand trial.

The day before the trial she made her meaning clear when she swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets. The trial was postponed and the defendant was taken to Albany hospital.

Now, outside the door waits the gentleman with the hourglass and scythe. He can wait, his attitude seems to say. And Jean Cameron for the second time shows the white flag. She wants to die.

The Emperor Caligula, from a bust in the Capitoline Museum in Rome.

ROME.

THE lake at Nemi is to give up its secret. The two pleasure barges of the debauched Emperor Caligula which have lain beneath its tranquil waters for nearly 20 centuries will be revealed by the ingenuity of engineers who have already begun the task of draining the entire lake. By next autumn the prow of the ship which is at the highest level is expected to appear above the gradually lowered water line. And then archeologists hope to learn the truth about these almost legendary boats.

They are believed to have been the ultimate caprice of Caligula, who succeeded during the less than four years of his reign in spending more than $100,000,000 that his predecessor, the frugal Tiberius, had accumulated. If we can believe the accounts of ancient historians, they contained great hanging gardens, fountains played amidships, the decks were paved with porphyry and serpentine, outlined in red, green and gold enamel, all the accessories were of the most exquisitely wrought bronze, and aboard these vessels the wildest debaucheries occurred, the most exotic and perverse spectacles were staged for the enjoyment of an Emperor who devoted all the energy of an inflamed and half-mad mind to such pleasures.

There is, of course, another theory. Rodolfo Lanciani, eminent Italian historian, has suggested that they were the property not of the State nor of the Emperor but of the sanctuary of Artemis Taurica. He believes that they were used not so much for the conveyance of pilgrims from shore to shore as for religious ceremonies and for combined processions on land and on water.

But it will not be many months before it can be determined which theory is correct. Already the great electrical pumps are in place and a horde of workers and engineers has invaded the quiet of the Alban Hills in which Lake Nemi is set, a two hours' trolley ride from Rome.

THIS is not the first time that the quiet of Nemi has been broken by curious searchers. Four earlier attempts to learn the secrets at the bottom of the lake have failed. The first effort was made by the engineer and mechanician, Leone Battista Alberti, at the instigation of Cardinal Prospero Colonna in the fifteenth century. Huge hooks, hung to chains, to be wound up by capstans, were prepared and seamen from Genoa brought to attach them to the prow of one of the sunken ships.

But the immense weight of the wreck baffled their efforts. The chains broke, many of the hooks were lost, and the few that were successfully hauled up brought to the surface fragments which filled the workers with marvel and admiration. According to the record left by the learned Cardinal, it was seen that the framework of the vessel, ribs and decks, was of larchwood, that the sides were made of boards three inches thick, caulked with tar and pieces of sail, and protected by sheets of lead fastened with copper nails.

A more nearly successful effort was the last one, begun in 1895. Search made by divers led to the discovery of six mooring-rings of solid bronze, representing heads of lions, wolves, and tigers and one of Medusa, to which objects a prominent place has already been given in the history of Greco-Roman art, so exquisitely beautiful are they in moulding and finish. This attempt also revealed that the decks were inlaid with porphyry

Search made by divers led to the discovery of six mooring-rings of solid bronze, representing heads of lions, wolves, and tigers and one of Medusa, to which objects a prominent place has already been given in the history of Greco-Roman art, so exquisitely beautiful are they in moulding and finish. This attempt also revealed that the decks were inlaid with porphyry and enamels. And for the first time the measurements of the two ships were made known.

The length of one ship was found to be 200 feet, with a 60-foot beam, and the other is 250 feet in length. Fifty years ago this would have been large even for an ocean-going vessel, although they seem small in comparison with the steamship Leviathan, for example, which is 907 feet long. The ancient Roman man-of-war was only 168 feet in length.

Why were these great ships built for use on a little lake, scarcely more than 4000 feet in diameter? That is a question which has long puzzled archeologists and which may be answered when the waters of Nemi are pumped out and drained to the sea.

Lake Nemi was a summer resort to which the ancient Romans came in an effort to escape the hot summers. Earlier it was the scene of the bloody rites and human sacrifices offered to the Scythian Diana. Sir James Fraser, in his "Golden Bough," gives an arresting picture of this sheet of water, which lies at the bottom of an ancient volcano cone, surrounded long ago by dark and sinister forests.

It is known that Julius Caesar built a luxurious villa there and then tore it down when he decided he did not like the location. Other villas are believed to have been erected there, the remains of some of which may be disclosed at the bottom of the lake. It is almost certain that Caligula came here, too, in search of new and wilder pleasures. Tacitus, a contemporary Roman historian, gives an account, without definitely naming the water on which they were floated, of two of Caligula's pleasure barges. They were fabulously fashioned of marble, precious metals, rare minerals and even jewels. Illuminated by hundreds of torches and manned by companies of oarsmen, they served as stages for great night spectacles, which were witnessed by the Emperor and his friends from the shore, spectacles in which, according to Tacitus, every form of human perversity was exhibited, saturnalia that have never been equaled.

At the very height of one of these displays, Tacitus writes, the Emperor ordered great plugs in the bottom of the vessels withdrawn and they sank very quickly, carrying down with them their cargoes of debauched humanity, the torches hissing swiftly as they met the water, leaving the scene in darkness. That was Caligula's way of walking out on a show that bored him. It is possible that these are the self-same barges that lie at the bottom of Nemi.

Suetonius, another Roman historian, has much to say of the vices and mad passions of Caligula. No one in Rome, from the highest to the lowest, was safe from this jealous madman. He mistreated his own sisters, forced his father-in-law to commit suicide, banished his mother and how many thousands of persons he put to death, or condemned to exile, there would be no way of knowing.

"After disfiguring many persons of honorable rank, by branding them in the face with hot irons," Suetonius writes, "he condemned them to the mines, to work in repairing the highways, or to fight with wild beasts; or tying them by the neck and heels, in the manner of beasts carried to slaughter, would shut them up in cages, or saw them asunder. Nor were these severities inflicted for crimes of great enormity, but for making remarks on his public games, or for not having sworn by the genius of the Emperor.

"He compelled parents to be present at the execution of their sons; and to one who excused himself on account of indisposition, he sent his own litter. Another he invited to his table immediately after he had witnessed the spectacle, and coolly challenged him to jest and be merry. . . . He burned alive, in the center of the arena of the ampitheater, the writer of a farce, for some witty verse, which had a double meaning. A Roman knight, who had been exposed to the wild beasts, crying out that he was innocent, he called him back, and having had his tongue cut out, remanded him to the arena. . . . . He generally prolonged the sufferings of his victims by causing them to be inflicted by slight and frequently repeated strokes; this being his well known and constant order: 'Strike so that he may feel himself die.' Having punished one person for another, by mistaking his name, he said, 'He deserved it quite as much.' . . . . Being incensed at the people's applauding a party at the Circensian games in opposition to him, he exclaimed, 'I wish the Roman people had but one neck.'"

Of the Emperor's luxuries, Suetonius says:

"IN THE devices of his profuse expenditure, he surpassed all the prodigals that ever lived; inventing a new kind of bath, with strange dishes and suppers, washing in precious unguents, both warm and cold, drinking pearls of immense value dissolved in vinegar, and serving up for his guests loaves and other victuals modeled in gold; often saying that 'a man ought to be a good economist or an Emperor.' Besides, he scattered money to a prodigious amount among the people, from the top of the Julian Basilica, during several days successively. He built two ships with ten banks of oars, after the Liburnian fashion, the poops of which blazed with jewels, and the sails were of various parti-colors. They were fitted up with ample baths, galleries and saloons, and supplied with a great variety of vines and other fruit trees. In these he would sail in the daytime along the coast of Campania, feasting amidst dancing and concerts of music."

These, rather than the ones mentioned by Tacitus, may be the barges which lie at the bottom of Lake Nemi. Since Caligula never conceded the impossible, ordering mountains leveled and plains built up into mountains, it may very well have been that he commanded these barges to be taken inland to the little summer resort of Nemi for some special spectacle. Such a feat, while seeming almost impossible without the aid of modern machinery, might have been accomplished at the Emperor's command.

"In building his palaces and villas," Suetonius writes, "there was nothing he desired to effect so much, in defiance of all reason, as what was considered impossible. Accordingly, moles were formed in the deep and adverse sea, rocks of the hardest stone cut away, plains raised to the height of mountains with a vast mass of earth, and the tops of mountains leveled by digging; and all these were to be executed with incredible speed, for the least remissness was a capital offense. Not to mention particulars, he spent enormous sums and the whole treasure which had been amassed by Tiberius Caesar, amounting to two thousand seven hundred millions of sesterces, within less than a year."

AFTER nearly four years of such a ruler, a conspiracy grew up and while talking to some young boys of noble extraction, whom he had brought from Asia to act upon the stage, he was struck down by the leader of the plot. And as the secret cry of the plotters, "Strike again!" resounded, his body was riddled with sword wounds.

It is plainly seen that if the whim had taken him to transport the two huge and cumbersome barges from the seacoast to Lake Nemi he would not have hesitated to order it done. Some reason to believe that they were Caligula's barges is seen in the discovery, in the course of the last effort to raise them, of a copper water pipe marked with the name of the Emperor.

If these barges were transported overland the task was accomplished at a tremendous cost not only in labor but, inevitably, in human lives as well. The job of draining the water out of the lake with modern machinery and electricity will be, by comparison, a simple undertaking.

The original scheme, suggested by a Government Commission formed a year ago to plan the project, was to connect the lake at Nemi with its neighboring Lake of Albano by a great underground tunnel. Albano lies at a lower level than Nemi, and is about

GROSS EXAGGERATIONS

In the Dumbwaiter.

IT GREW GRADUALLY FROM KATZ DE HOIL PEECTURE BY PINKOWITZ.

KATZ had a wife.

"Eightinn yirrs I merried to you —ha dope?!!" she would say. "Eightinn yirrs!! Und wot do I got?? Wreenkles in de faze! Dot's a hosband. I got a hosband—und by Meesus Monkey in de zoo is ulso a hosband—is no, dope?!! Honly de monkizz henging arond witt monkizz—und you henging a whole time arond witt de goot-for-notting Pinkowitz, wot he rizzambles gradually a nenny-gutt!!!"

Pinkowitz occupied a derby hat, overcoat and a pair of shoes in his married daughter's home. The rest of the time he devoted to Katz.

Sitting across a table in Grubnick's restaurant one afternoon, Katz was studying a picture that Pinkowitz held for his inspection. Under a green sky, a nymph with purple hair was trying to kick herself in the back of the neck. The nymph had two left feet and the picture was signed: "Butterwitz, 184 Kelly street."

"A hoil peecture," said Pinkowitz. "Mine property. He's for sale. You want you should buy heem? It'll cust you chip—tan dollars."

Now Katz wanted to buy the picture about as much as he wanted to join the Foreign Legion! But just at that moment, over the rim of his saucer, his roving eye caught sight of the beautiful Julia Epstein, watching the transaction from her cashier's seat. So he announced loudly:

"Sold. Wrep me opp de peecture!!"

"Hmmm—noot ladies I nidd herr in de house, ha dope?!" said Mrs. Katz. "We should gat yat arrasted maybe, ha?? Who made dees jonk,?? De jenitor's boy, maybe??"

"Sh—dollink—wait——dun't making resh hopinions"——

"Nails you got to hemmer me in de wall—I ain't got enoff a headache—ha dope?? De noifs you got to hunstreeng me a leedle!!"

"Switthott—Baby—wait——It's a boggan—de peecture. It cust me by Pinkowitz honly"——

"Cust!!"

Mrs. Katz dropped an armful of dishes and advanced toward her lord and master.

"Cust!!" she said. "You paid for dees trash monney?

"You see—dollink," argued Katz, "witt a peecture is like dees: Foist you dun't liking heem. So den—wait plizze witt det potato mesher, Switthott—So you henging heem on de wall—Den you looking on heem—So gradually it begeens it should grow on you de peecture. So it gruzz und gruzz und gruzz—so den you liking heem! Pinkowitz oxplained me!"

"Hm—a conoozer from hart you bicame, ha dope? So you witt Pinkowitz togadder should looking on a wedgetable stend so it should grow on de bote from you kebbidges witt kerrots in de bast from halth. . . . ——Besites —— wherr-deed-you-got-money-you-should-paying-for-peectures ? ?!!"

Here was a kettle of herring for Katz. The ten bucks was part of a secret roll that he always kept parked in the false bottom of his tobacco tin. So he stalled——

"Heh—heh—dollink—of cuss. I deedn't exectically paid for heem yat—I jost took heem by aprooval—I could retoin heem. . . .

Sure he could—He could return the picture all right, but he had as much chance of getting his $10 back from Pinkowitz as he had of turning a tennis ball inside out without breaking the cover.

Summer came and went and autumn lingered and—so did the picture.

"Bot wot's by you de rosh, Pussybonny dollink?"

"I'll geeve you a Pussybonny—witt a broom in de faze!! Rosh—he esks! Soppose it should die Pinkowitz?"

"Noo—so would be wot??"

"So would be wot, he esks!! So if it dies Pinkowitz so we'll hev to pay de femily for shame!!"

"Wot's dees?" thought Katz. "If it should die Pinkowitz so she would geeve me tan dollars I should paying for de peecture! Und alrady I paid heem once—is no?!!——So it's by me in de pocket tan dollars—if Pinkowitz dies—Ho boy!! a hidea!! Say—maybe if it heppened to Pinkowitz sometins—pipple got to die sometime! is no?—Tan dollars—Ho boy!—Say—so long wot Pinkowitz got to die irregoddless—so wot's de deeference a copple monts!—Odder naxt wick—Tonight!! Who couldn't use tan dollars—sa-aay—— . . . Mmmm—YIYIYIYI!" Katz leaped up suddenly. "A moiderer—dot's I'm!! I weeshed a man he shell die for tan dollars!! Yi yi!! A MOIDERER—DOT'S I'M!!"

The horror of his selfish thought struck him. He thought wildly of feigning insanity to allbi himself with heaven. Visions of Pinkowitz tormented him. Pinkowitz with wings. Pinkowitz in a tail and horns. Pinkowitz dead and reincarnated into a horse, looking at him with big, reproachful eyes.

He couldn't sleep that night. From then he was different. His one concern was Pinkowitz's health.

Pinkowitz would say: "I drenk."

"De troat you goggled it shouldn't be by you dizzizzizz witt infactions?"

"I goggled."

"Speenitch you ate?"

"I ate."

"Robbers you wurr in de rain in conjonction witt a hombrella?"

"I wurr."

"Hm—Ho K. Comm now by de sudda-wodder stend you should dreenking de multed meelk. So den I'll ridd you gradually wot it stends in de noospaper hotticles how you should leeve you should be a hondred yirrs from hold hage!"

Thus it went. He studied Pinkowitz's tongue. He felt his pulse. He mothered him, fathered him, sistered and brothered him and chased flies away from him!

Six months later Pinkowitz died. Katz was grieved and conscience-stricken. Standing before the picture he made a resolve. He would return the picture to Pinkowitz's daughter. He would lose the money he had paid, but gain his peace of mind.

"Noo, dope, so wot you doong now?"

He turned and faced Mrs. Katz. "Wot I doong?" he lied gallantly. "I retoining de peecture. Jost bicuss dite Pinkowitz is no criterion why we should be paying for heem now."

"Wait, Julius," said Mrs. Katz. "I got—I—got someting to tell you. I—I—Julius—I was stending und looking und looking by de peecture—dun't gu med plizze, Julius—und it was grung—und grung—und grung—so it grew by me de peecture. . . . TALES of REAL DOGS

By Albert Payson Terhune

Dougal, the Scotty With a "Human Complex."

I WANT to preface this strange story by saying that its incidents are unprecedented in my own somewhat long experience with dogs, and that the dog I am going to tell of has a trait I never found in another member of the canine race. If I were a psychologist, I should say he had a "human complex."

His name is Royal Dougal of Scone. He is a highly pedigreed and beautiful Scotch terrier. He belongs to C. E. L. Wingate of Boston, a man with big enough brain and heart to bring out all that is best in his dogs—as was shown by my story of his little dog, Towser of the supernatural homing instinct, which I wrote for this series some time ago.

It has been my experience and theory that practically no grown dog will give a second glance to his own reflection in a mirror. Dogs rely chiefly on their miraculous powers of scent, next on their acute hearing, and, last and least of all, they rely on their near-sighted and nondependable eyes.

Thus, a dog, seeing his reflection in a mirror, is told at once, by his scenting powers and by his sense of hearing, that no other dog is there. So he believes his reliable ears and nostrils and discredits what his unreliable eyes tell him. Therefore, he pays no further attention to the mirrored reflection.

But Royal Dougal of Scone is the rare exception to the rule. Always, he has been so. Mr. Wingate describes thus the Scotty's reactions when he sees a looking glass:

"Dougal, from puppyhood, until he learned it was simply a mirror, would stand in front of a glass and growl and bark, and then would edge up to the door of the cabinet whose mirror reached down to the floor, and try to look behind the door to find the dog there.

"THIS was unaccountable, because the dog in the mirror was his own size, and kept moving as he moved. So I was not so much surprised, although I think it is unusual for a dog to notice reflections in a looking glass."

Mr. Wingate might have changed the phrase, "I think it is unusual," to "it is practically unheard of." I have seen a goat charge his own likeness in a mirror, and I had two peacocks, years ago, that would stand for hours in front of a triple shaving mirror I placed on the lawn for their amusement. Indeed, the female would stand preening herself and peering into it and behind it until night shut off her view.

But dogs are different. A puppy, once in fifty times, will glance carelessly at his reflection, for a moment. But almost immediately he discovers the hoax and will pay no more attention to the supposed "other dog" mirrored in the glass before him.

However, the mirror-studying is wholly uninteresting and commonplace, compared to another phase of Dougal's almost human mentality. I shall describe this startlingly unusual bit of discernment in Mr. Wingate's own words:

"We had just bought a magazine holder—a metal box to carry magazines—which was set on the floor in front of my reading desk. On the front of this holder were painted a Scotch terrier and a West Highland terrier, beautifully done and very artistic and real, but about one-quarter the natural size.

Dougal would stand in front of a glass and growl.

"Dougal had not happened to notice this until my daughter turned the reading lamp so that suddenly its rays fell, full glare, on the painted picture. Dougal was five feet away.

"Instantly he stiffened, throwing out his hindlegs as far as he could and bracing his forelegs in front of him, his hair bristling from head to tail. He gave one of those low, deep, prolonged, warning growls which a dog gives when he is puzzled and wants to voice a possible threat to the thing he sees, in case it may be hostile.

"OF COURSE, we said not a word. We just watched him. Slowly he pushed himself forward, an inch at a time, keeping his eyes fixed on the picture and emitting a growl which grew deeper and deeper as he could get no answer. Then he stopped and gave a sharp bark to stir the other animal up.

"His last move, naturally, was to be expected. As he drew near the picture his sense of smell came into play and he began to doubt his eyesight. So he walked slowly ahead, peered over into the magazine box to see if there was any living thing back of that picture, and, finding nothing there, he turned and walked sheepishly away.

"But this is the first time I have seen a dog recognize or even notice a picture. We have often, as tests, put big photographs in front of some of our dogs, and have even shown them colored pictures. But they had an absolutely blank look as they saw the likeness, and they glanced at us as they turned away, as if to inquire what in the world we were thrusting that wall of paper up against their faces.

"But Dougal evidently saw the picture, in every sense of the word: the outline, the resemblance to dogdom, etc. And he saw it so clearly and vividly, in his actual optical vision, as to think the two pictured dogs were real."

To me Mr. Wingate's story is of intense interest, as it will be to all students of canine nature. For it depicts a phase of canine psychology or physiology or mentality hitherto unknown and hitherto deemed impossible.

Naturally, Dougal is a rare exception, in this power of discerning the details of a painted picture and in recognizing therein the likeness of two dogs. It is not typical, in any way.

A psychologist could draw some wild inference, perhaps, or could suggest other and similar tests. I am content to tell the story and let you draw your own inferences.

MADRONA

By ZONA GALE

HER mother had named her for a street in a California town, and at 19, when she was going West with the rich New York people who had adopted her, she demanded to be taken to see her own people.

"Drona," said her foster-mother, "they will be impossible. Even if they are living, they will be impossible."

Drona said lazily: "Don't pretend, darling. I know quite well about the papers I signed in the lawyers' office."

Mrs. Hunniwell looked annoyed. "We didn't conceal from you, Drona," she said, "that those papers concerned your parents and affected you."

"I saw San Francisco on the envelope," she said, "and I know my own name. It's Melloy. I have a good case, Mummy."

She appealed to the man who was sitting before a giant fireplace.

"Daddy," she said, "mayn't I see my proper father and mother, when we get to San Francisco?"

He lifted his eyebrows and said: "Puss, your generation is the living limit. My word, I believe the only reason you want to see them is curiosity."

Drona considered. The man who called himself her father looked as if he thought her consideration enchanting, and that she had made herself superlatively so that night. Roddy was coming to take her to somebody's dance.

"I'll ask Roddy if he thinks that's why," she said.

"For heaven's sake," said Mrs. Hunniwell shrilly, "don't say anything to Roddy Crispi about your family. His mother—he mustn't know—at least, not until"——

"Not till I've hooked him," Drona comprehended. "Well, I think I have. My, mother, but you're honest, aren't you?"

Mrs. Hunniwell colored—it made a second distinct shade on her face. She murmured that she was sure she was only thinking of her daughter's future, and went on:

"I've never spared your feelings, though, in telling you about them, Drona—your father a longshoreman, your mother a waitress, your sisters and brothers in shops and restaurants" . . . She closed her eyes, and opened them to say pleadingly: "You wouldn't let us in for anything unpleasant, would you, darling? Why, they might blackmail papa."

"Everybody knows I was adopted, don't they?" demanded Drona, who wasn't listening.

"Certainly," said Mrs. Hunniwell. "I've been honest about it. I said your family were distant and poor and perfectly respectable relatives."

Drona laughed and said: "Not that they are relatives."

"But I've been perfectly honest about saying you were adopted."

"Then you don't care if I talk about it, now that we're going West?"

"Most certainly I care. You have us to think of, Drona."

"It's me, me, me," said Drona. "My parents. I'm going to talk about it, darling. I hate subterfuge. And I'm going to tell Roddy. He loves me enough already."

"DRONA!" Mrs. Hunniwell whispered tensely, as the front door closed. "His mother will never"—

"I'm thinking of marrying Roddy," said Drona. "Not his mother."

Roddy came in, and, while the others greeted him, Drona looked indifferently at his clean-cut face and then said:

"Hello. Do you love somebody else more than me?"

He slipped his arm about her and said to Mr. and Mrs. Hunniwell:

"May I have her?"

"He's asked me and you, but I haven't asked him yet," said Drona. "I don't know whether I'm going to."

"My dear boy," said Mr. Hunniwell, "don't ask us whether you can have Drona. We've never known whether we've got her ourselves. She's an independent party."

In the car Drona said: "Roddy, your father is worth millions and millions, isn't he?"

"Good heavens!" he said; "you little fortune hunter!"

"But I guess he'll cut you off, if you marry me," she exclaimed.

"Don't be your own idiotic self," he begged.

"Because my father—my real father—was a longshoreman, and my mother was a waitress," Drona proceeded, "and I've lots of waitress sisters and bartender brothers—or I did have bartenders, I expect, but now they may be in jail."

"This fellow does nothing but creep," said Roddy. "I'd get him fired—only for his grin. Yes, darling, go on about the family. Is it true? What a lark!"

"Isn't it!" said Drona. "I'm going to see them this winter—wouldn't you?"

"Would I miss it?" said Roddy. "What's the people's number? Why don't they have a decent number, so a fellow could remember where their dance is?"

They drove on in silence.

"Come on, longshoreman's daughter," said Roddy, as they entered the ballroom.

"Honestly, don't you care, Roddy?" she asked, as they danced.

"Care what?"

"Care me. Care that I might have been a vulgar little thing with no manners?"

"Shut up. You are now," said Roddy, "or you wouldn't talk so."

"No, but honestly."

"No, but honestly for me, too. I might have been a worse bounder than I am now, if I hadn't been born my father's son."

"Were you?" she asked. "Can't you possibly find out that you were adopted from a bandit's brood?"

"I'll try," he promised.

"But don't you honestly care," she stressed it, "that I come from—from" . . .

"Isn't it funny," he said absently, "that there were once actually people who would? People are a lot more real now, Kid."

SHE told him that his mother would care now, but he said: "Oh, well, mother' . . . she has to have some excitement."

"But the children," she said; "they might take after something you wouldn't like."

"They might," said Roddy. "My grandfather was an old hypocrite, from all I can hear. Will you risk me, woman?"

She said: "I'm going to tell the bunch and see what they say."

"You know the bunch," said Roddy.

At supper eight of them sat together in a corner of the hall, and Roddy began:

"Drona wants to spring something."

She said: "Really, it doesn't need so much emphasis. You all know I'm adopted. I've just found out about my family." She told them, rolling the longshoreman and bartender clauses with an air. "And I'm keen to see them, when we go out to the coast next month. Wouldn't you be?"

"Darling!" said Helen Coles, rapturously. "How romantic!"

"Why, rather, I'd see them. Being poor and finding out you're rich," said Peggy Bell, "that's commonplace. But think of walking in on your own family and giving them things. What fun you can have!"

Arline Bell, whose mouth was quick to curl in distaste at anything that she called dull, which was nearly everything, said enviously: "That's what I call bringing an interest into life."

"Of course," said Emily Bowes, "you don't have to like them. Nobody has to like her family. They'll be jolly interesting to see—just as if you didn't belong to them—I mean never had belonged."

The men were not so sure. Rupert Bond didn't know. "Might make themselves awful nuisances," he objected.

"Will you let them know who you are?" Rupert's brother asked. "I shouldn't, I believe. Just make some excuse, distribute the stuff, and get out."

"How grand," said Bobby Oliver, with intense fervor, "not to know your own sisters! Many's the time"——

"Or my own brothers," Drona reminded him.

Peggy Bell looked thoughtful. "Supposing you liked them," she asked. "Liked your mother."

"What a curious idea, Peggs," said Bruce Overton. "Yet you might, you know. There have been instances, they say, of those who have liked their parents, even without being strangers."

"Gives you an advantage to be able to leave 'em," said Rupert. "Still, I don't know but I'd chuck it. What's the use? You'd get more fun out of something that couldn't be disagreeable afterward."

"That's no risk," said Roddy. "This has risk. May prove a bore or a nuisance, may be dangerous."

Drona listened. "Mother doesn't want me to tell about my family. She thinks it reflects on her—isn't it a scream?"

"Old stuff," they said, and the music began again.

At the last minute Roddy decided to go to California, too, and begged to be tucked into the Hunniwells' private car.

HE HAD begged that the engagement be announced before they left, and, on the eve of the announcement dinner, Mrs. Hunniwell ventured timidly to Roddy:

"Do tell me what your mother said of Drona's fearful taste—telling about her family, you know. If I had guessed such a thing, I wouldn't even have told her—and what must your mother" . . .

"I don't believe," said Roddy, "that I mentioned it to her, did I? I will."

Mrs. Hunniwell cried: "Oh, don't, unless you think you should."

"Should what, Mrs. Hunniwell?" Roddy asked, with an air of perplexity.

"Well, at least try, my dear boy," said Mrs. Hunniwell in relief, "to persuade Drona not to let herself in for any unpleasantness by going to see her family. She doesn't realize."

"Sure, she realizes," says Roddy. "Excuse my pointing out. I'm afraid I'd hate it if she didn't go. I'm going with her. I'm as curious as she is."

"Curious!" said Mrs. Hunniwell.

Privately, to Mr. Hunniwell, she complained:

"They're a cold-blooded lot, Drona and Roddy and their crowd. I don't think they have the least feeling about this business of her family. I don't think we need to worry. I expect they'll go in to see them, stare about a bit, ask some questions, and leave—and tell about it as an experience. What are the young people coming to?"

The private car, Roddy said, was a sunroom moving through space. Wicker and cretonne, rugs and flowers, a victrola, a radio, a piano, the sun streaming in at the wide windows—"books, magazines, candy, and a fiance," said Drona, "and a neat view over his head."

IT WAS the third day out from New York. The train was standing at Albuquerque, and there it would spend an hour. Roddy came out of the shop at the station and made his way between dusky lines of Indians with their wares, toward Drona, who had been walking on the platform. But he saw her flying down the bricks and boarding the car.

He wondered at this, saw Mr. and Mrs. Hunniwell pacing solemnly through their constitutional, and went to join Drona. He found her lying with her face hidden in the cushions of a chaise longue, and she was sobbing. Over her head a canary was singing shrilly, and when Roddy cried: "Drona, my darling—what is it?" she merely said: "Can't anything stop that b-b-bird?" as if the bird were the trouble.

Roddy waved one hand at the canary and with the other tried to turn her face toward him.

She sat up and said waveringly: "I'm a fool. Did you see those people out there? The mother and the five children?"

Roddy had, but he hadn't noticed them especially—a woman with her little brood, sitting on a suitcase and portioning out a lunch.

"I just thought," said Drona, "what if my f-f-family is living that way! Isn't that fool? Why didn't I feel bad over that woman out there and let it go at that?"

Roddy's reply was brief and eloquent. He took her in his arms and kissed her. "I knew you were like that," he said.

But she blazed back: "I'm not like that! I'm not a sentimental idiot!"

Roddy said: "Certainly not, sweetheart," and gazed out the window at adobe walls. "Gosh, I love you," he concluded.

He got off the train, showered the little family with fruit and bonbons, and came back to find Drona frowning at him.

"If I were out there with my family, would you get off your private car and give me some candy?" she said mockingly. "Roddy," she added, "I don't think I'll go near my family. I don't want to see them, ever."

Through a long, lazy California month, days of sun, nights of silver, and then of velvet, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hunniwell discussed Drona and Roddy.

"Romance is dead," said Mrs. Hunniwell with conviction. "I never have seen anything like those two."

"What's the matter with them now?" Arthur Hunniwell asked, but as if he knew the answer.

"THESE two" were reading in the garden, paying no attention to each other. They had been there, Mrs. Hunniwell went on, the whole morning. The night before they had danced with altogether too many that were not themselves, she confusedly continued, and, when her husband grinned, she cried:

"Well, you and I didn't act like that, Arthur Hunniwell. The whole world knew we were crazy about each other, and those two—nobody would know they were engaged. Anybody would think they were married. They don't act in love at all."

"My word," said Hunniwell, "do you mean all those things?"

"All the young people are the same," she said absorbedly. "They're all so matter of fact that it's pitiful. They behave as if they hated one another—they behave" . . .

"There are cats in this world," her husband reminded her, "who have objected to young people acting too fond of one another. But you" . . .

"If you haven't romance, what have you?" she inquired with melancholy.

They returned from a trip up the Ojii Valley, to find a message at their hotel, sent from the vague high seas and saying merely: "Six best friends sailing into San Francisco Bay Sunday morning," and naming their hotel. It was signed, "Bobby."

"The Olivers," Drona divined happily, "have come through the canal on their yacht and have brought everybody. Let's go, Daddy!"

They motored north at the week end and were registered at the hotel when Peggy and Bruce, Helen and Emily, Bobby and Rupert and the elder Olivers arrived.

"We've come to take you back with us," they explained.

"By the horn or the pole?" Drona asked. "It's yes either way, isn't it, Daddy?"

Mrs. Hunniwell murmured merely, "I sail like a Morris chair," and looked resigned.

They dined together, and, as they sat very late over their coffee, it was Peggy who said: "Let's plan tomorrow." Said it with a small yawn, as with a look backward over the days monotonous with delight. Chinatown, Tamalpais, the Presidio, were all passed over.

"Might swim the Frisco Bay—what?" said Bobby.

Mr. Hunniwell offered the car to run down to Santa Barbara, and they had all but settled on that, when Drona said, with her accomplished languor:

"Why not a thrill? Can't anybody do better than that? A private car's no thrill."

"A thrill's no thrill to you," said Roddy. "Suggest one."

"This one would be for me," said Drona, and enjoyed their mystification. "Have you forgotten," she went on, "my San Francisco family? I invite you all to come with me tomorrow to call on them."

"Drona!" Mrs. Hunniwell gasped.

"Why not?" Drona asked, and nibbled a bonbon. "You all know about them. I'm going. Why shouldn't we all go? It's a case-study," she coolly concluded.

She glanced with amusement at Roddy. Mrs. Hunniwell glanced at him with consternation. He was regarding Drona gravely, and, what was worse, appraisingly.

But there was no doubt about the others. They regarded Drona, they said, as a brick.

"Not ashamed of my lowly origin and all that," Drona said. "I didn't pick my family. Did any of you? No, not even Roddy." He continued merely to stare at her, without smiling.

"She's just joking," Mrs. Hunniwell tried to say. "Anyway, she hasn't the address—I saw to that."

"HAVEN'T I?" Drona countered gayly. "Not for nothing did I hunt out the family lawyer, just before we came away. I've the address safe enough—but it's not in a slummy part of Frisco," she added. "I asked the hotel clerk. I was disappointed—I'm afraid it's no tenement."

Their table, conspicuous even in that great room of flowered tables and lovely gowns, became a center for the eyes of the other diners, as its guests laughed and lifted their glasses.

"To the family," said Bobby Oliver. "May they disown their daughter."

"In favor of their son-in-law," said Bruce, but Roddy sat silent.

They went off to a picture show, but Mrs. Hunniwell went up to her room and spoiled her husband's bedtime cigar.

"She's lost him," Mrs. Hunniwell wept. "Drona has no sense. She thinks this modern stuff is life—and Roddy isn't—he doesn't—and he's so rich" . . .

"Romance," said Mr. Hunniwell wearily, "is dead, my darling. Go to bed, do."

Toward 1 o'clock, when Drona came into the hotel, Mrs. Hunniwell slipped across the corridor and tapped at her door.

"Now, darling, I'm sleepy," said Drona, when she saw her foster mother's face.

Mrs. Hunniwell sat down with finality. "You've got to listen," she said. "I've never told you—I never meant to tell you—but you don't know what you're letting yourself in for."

"Oh, good!" said Drona. "This sounds interesting."

"We were staying here in San Francisco, your father and I," said Mrs. Hunniwell, with a manner of haste. "It was 15—16 years ago, because you were just four. I had your curiosity then, Drona—though I wasn't so unshockable—I rather liked being shocked" . . .

"Of course," said Drona. "Fifteen years ago everyone liked being shocked. Now everyone likes not being. One does one's stuff, that's all."

Mrs. Hunniwell stared. "And so," she said, "one day, when your father left me alone, I did a terrible thing, I'd seen everything else, and I went to the police court."

"Why, mother, you brick!" said Drona. "I didn't know you had it in you. Of course, a police court is a frightful bore" . . .

"IT EXCITED me very much," said Mrs. Hunniwell severely. "There was a gambler up—his house had been raided the night before, and he'd got his wife and children all in court, lined up so the Judge would be sure to see them—a sad-looking wife and six of the loveliest children I had ever seen. You were the youngest."

"Mother!" cried Drona rapturously. "Oh, this is good."

"It seems your—your father had done other things. They had him on several counts. They finally sent him to San Quentin. Your—your mother couldn't keep all the children. When we left for home in April, I took you."

"Lucky me, who am a gambler's child. Oh, joy!"

"Drona!" her mother cried. "Now, stop it!"

Drona laughed and said: "Why didn't you tell me before? Why deprive me of all this charm?"

"I brought you up to know that you were adopted," Mrs. Hunniwell said, "but the matter never would have come up—if we hadn't had to have your signature to those papers."

"In the lawyer's office," said Drona. "What did I sign for, mother?"

"The money—when you're 21," said Mrs. Hunniwell. "You see, Drona, it's not the way you think. Your father got out of jail—he made a fortune in the mines—and, when he died, last spring, his will named you and some others—— You see, it isn't as you think. Your own mother is probably very rich—and a most awful creature, Drona, without a doubt. You see, darling, she was probably a gambler, too."

Drona stared. "My word!" she said, "it'll be a spiffier party than I thought and not half so smelly. How much have I got, darling?"

"Drona—I'm quite sure she's—she's rather disgraceful," said Mrs. Hunniwell.

"Won't the bunch be thrilled!" said Drona. "It's even better than I thought."

Mrs. Hunniwell rose. "The trouble with you," she said clearly, "and with your whole set, is that you want to be in the movies—and you evidently constantly pretend that you are there."

She turned erectly to the door, Drona smiling languidly.

"Darling," said Mrs. Hunniwell suddenly, "don't be so"——

Drona was laughing. "When I think of that woman at Albuquerque feeding her young—and I thought—I thought" . . . She laughed hysterically. "Run along to bed, mother, do. I'm passing away for some sleep."

THE house, in the old Nob Hill district, was one untouched by the fire—an enormous place of the Eastlake type, turreted and many-winged. The iron gates were standing open—looked, in fact, to be rusted open—and the two cars drew up the neglected drive to the door. Drona's eyes had lost their languor and were shining, as she left the car and ran up the steps before the others. When she put her hand to the bell, Roddy's hand closed over hers and held it. She looked up into his face, grave, stern, without tenderness.

"Drona," he said, "I ought to tell you that if you lead all this crew in there, out of curiosity for what you'll find—it's going to—to do something to me that I can't get over."

She stiffened. "Are you threatening me," she said coldly, "with the loss of you, Roddy—if I don't behave—as you think I should?"

"Drona," he said, "I can't bear it. Don't you see, for you and me to go here—that'd be one thing. But for you to lead in this bunch"——

She pressed the button.

And then they heard a halting step, and a woman opened the door. Her colorless face and expressionless eyes were hardly more alive than the frosted glass of the panel. She said nothing, waiting.

Drona asked curtly: "Are you Mrs. Melloy?" and, when the head inclined, with no curiosity in the look, Drona added: "May we all come in? We've something to say to you."

The woman stepped back, still silently, and they all filed by her. The hall was high and dim, and a winding staircase was lost against a stained-glass window. A vast, empty fireplace hollowed a wall, and open doors led to twilight rooms. Mrs. Melloy closed the door, made her way among her guests, and began to mount the stairs. Even in that dim light they now saw that the dark wood of the stairs and the floor and the objects near at hand were thickly coated with dust.

They filed up the winding stairs, their feet echoing through the silent house, and the black, erect figure went silently before them. She crossed a bare, octagonal hall, threw open a door, and moved back for them to precede her. This room looked inhabited, had sunlight, and was scattered with the materials for needlework. In one end was a small oil stove and a dining table with dishes. Now the mistress of this strange place spoke:

"There aren't any chairs," she said. "I'm sorry. You came about some work?"

"No, Mrs. Melloy," said Drona. "My name—is Madrona Melloy."

Her mother's eyes narrowed with a sharp ingathering of attention. She said: "Ah-h," long drawn, and said no more.

"These," Drona went on, "are my friends. We're staying here for a few days. We—we wanted to come to see you."

Now her mother moved toward her, laid a hand on her hand, and searched her face, her hair.

"You was a pretty little thing," she said. "I guess it's you." Her eyes wavered. "Did you come to get me to do some sewin' for you?" she asked.

Drona caught her breath. "Sewing? No," she said. "I don't understand."

Mrs. Melloy made a stiff gesture toward the room. "I do sewin'," she explained, "and keep myself."

DRONA turned a brief look on her friends, as if she were appealing to them to interpret a moment that was beyond her. They were staring at this woman—at her pale face, her disordered hair, her cheap, neat dress, her rough hands, her wavering look.

"Oh, yes," she said readily. "Yes, I used to sew, you know, until he made his money. I can sew quite nice."

"But why are you living like this?" Drona asked resolutely. "Why, just lately—all the money they wrote me my—my father had left"——

"It all went," said his wife. "He made his will and then gambled it all away, every cent. He'd promised not, but it got him. He wasn't so young any more—he couldn't play good any more. They got it—all but this house. I wouldn't sign my name." She shook her head with vigor. "I would not sign my name," she told them.

"But you?" Drona said uncertainly.

"I got the homestead," she said, and now she laughed. "I saw to that! But there wasn't a cent. I can live here and sew—till the taxes come due. Maybe they'll forget me, too," she said thoughtfully. "Everybody else has."

"Your other—my—your other children?" said Drona.

"Three died," she answered monotonously. "Seems strange, don't it—my telling you, like this? Anna, she married a foreigner and was ashamed, and her pa let her go. There was only you and Pearl. And we hadn't heard from either of you for years. I don't know where Pearl is now. Her address didn't answer about the money," said her mother, "so I guess she's maybe dead." She stared at the wall.

Roddy spoke now, very gently. "But how were you all so separated?" he asked.

"HE WENT to jail," she told him simply. "Drona and Pearl were adopted 'they were the prettiest. I didn't want to"—an old woe leaped into her eyes. "But I was sick—I sewed—but the three died. Then Anna married before he got out and made his money. He and I had the money all alone."

Again her hand went out to Drona's. "I used to sew for you," she said. "Make little things . . . you and me."

She stared at her daughter, then her eyes went to the sleeve, where her hand lay. "Nice cloth," she said. "I'm glad you can wear nice cloth."

Suddenly she looked up fearfully and hurried to her sewing. "Excuse me," she said. "I've got to get this done, account of the man coming for the money," she whispered. "He turned off my lights once. I was here a week in the dark."

Drona ran to her, stooped to her, took her hands. "My dear, my dear," she said.

She didn't hear the others when they left the room. When she looked up, Roddy was there with her alone. He was saying:

"Mrs. Melloy—you must let us share in this—Drona and me. I'm going to marry Drona."

Drona's hand found his, and her mother looked up quite sweetly:

"I used to hope she'd find somebody nice—when she was a little thing," she said. "Now I must do my sewin'."

When the others had finished dinner that night and wandered quietly into the lounge, Drona and Roddy joined them, slipped in, saying nothing. They had brought her down to the hotel, had dined with her in Drona's room, and now she was asleep. When now the two joined the others, they all looked up quietly, and at last it was Bobby who blurted out:

"I say, Drona, we're all most awfully . . . and you're no end . . . you know," he ended feebly.

It was Peggy who cried tensely: "But can't we do something—can't we all do something? It's not fair, your having the chance to do everything for her, Drona."

Seeing that Drona could not speak, Roddy said quietly: "We're going to arrange to have her with us, when we're married—but she'll need a lot of goodness. That's where you'll all come in."

Suddenly, there in the public lounge, Peggy began to touch at her lower eyelids. "I want to go home," she said quite simply, "and see my mother"—and there wasn't a trace of humor in anybody's eyes.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hunniwell, who had been dining out, came through the lounge and saw their group, and stopped for a word. Their group all rose solemnly, stood silently, murmured grave replies, and said good night.

"Arthur," said Mrs. Hunniwell excitedly, as they stood alone in the elevator, "Arthur, something has come over those young people."

"They looked," said Hunniwell slowly, "just exactly as if somehow they had come up against life—with no pretending."

Drona and Roddy followed them up to tell them. In the corridor Roddy said:

"Darling, do you know, you and I have had a quarrel today, and parted, and come together again—all with hardly a word. And I want to apologize."

She cried: "Don't, Roddy. I didn't want to be musby, and so I was a fraud. We've all been the whole bunch" . . .

They clung together in the dim, deserted passage.

THOSE who, not many weeks hence, will be smearing themselves with oil of citronella or wintergreen and making the night hideous with intermittent slapping at mosquitoes, may be cheered by the news that experiments now in progress at Cornell University may result eventually in the banishment of the mosquito—at least from those regions of the United States rich in limestone deposits. This will cause no cheering in the granite hills of New England or among the sand-bottomed ponds and alluvial swamps of the South. But to residents of other sections it may bring the joy of anticipation.

The current hope for the banishment of the mosquito lies in an humble plant, Nitella phaulotes, native of Australia. Nitella, as it is familiarly known, thrives in limestone districts. It is a peculiar sort of weed, without flowers, that grows in ponds and lakes. It never appears above water, but develops underneath the surface, and its peculiar effectiveness against the mosquito lies in its power, and blind necessity, to exude an oily fluid which rises to the surface of the body of water. The fluid is poisonous to mosquitoes and prevents the deposit of their eggs. Hence, where Nitella grows, the mosquito cannot thrive, and he departs for other sections.

Dr. L. O. Howard, former head of the Bureau of Entomology in Washington, recently became interested in Nitella and imported a number of specimens of the plant from Australia. He turned them over to Professor Robert Matheson of Cornell, who is now experimenting to see if there is any reason why the plant cannot thrive in this country. The neighborhood around Ithaca is ideally fitted for the work, due to the limestone deposits there which keep the lakes well charged with lime.

A PECULIAR virtue of Nitella is that its oily excretion, while poisonous to the mosquito, is not at all harmful to man, animal, fish or plant. E. W. I. Buhot, a scientist of Brisbane, Australia, first discovered this. There are a number of mosquito-fighting plants indigenous to Australia and he has spent many months studying them. He first found Nitella growing in a creek and later in lakes and lagoons. On the surface of the latter there was a green scum, which proved to be a bacterial growth, and a thin film resembling oil. This was found to be the product of the plant that grew beneath the surface. Subsequent experiments showed that the plant grew rapidly, reproduced freely and was easily transplanted. Experiment With Oil-Exuding Australian Growth Now Being Made at Cornell.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

ITHACA, New York.

THOSE who, not many weeks hence, will be smearing themselves with oil of citronella or wintergreen and making the night hideous with intermittent slapping at mosquitoes, may be cheered by the news that experiments now in progress at Cornell University may result eventually in the banishment of the mosquito—at least from those regions of the United States rich in limestone deposits. This will cause no cheering in the granite hills of New England or among the sand-bottomed ponds and alluvial swamps of the South. But to residents of other sections it may bring the joy of anticipation.

The current hope for the banishment of the mosquito lies in an humble plant, Nitella phaulotes, native of Australia. Nitella, as it is familiarly known, thrives in limestone districts. It is a peculiar sort of weed, without flowers, that grows in ponds and lakes. It never appears above water, but develops underneath the surface, and its peculiar effectiveness against the mosquito lies in its power, and blind necessity, to exude an oily fluid which rises to the surface of the body of water. The fluid is poisonous to mosquitoes and prevents the deposit of their eggs. Hence, where Nitella grows, the mosquito cannot thrive, and he departs for other sections.

Dr. L. O. Howard, former head of the Bureau of Entomology in Washington, recently became interested in Nitella and imported a number of specimens of the plant from Australia. He turned them over to Professor Robert Matheson of Cornell, who is now experimenting to see if there is any reason why the plant cannot thrive in this country. The neighborhood around Ithaca is ideally fitted for the work, due to the limestone deposits there which keep the lakes well charged with lime.

A PECULIAR virtue of Nitella is that its oily excretion, while poisonous to the mosquito, is not at all harmful to man, animal, fish or plant. E. W. L. Buhot, a scientist of Brisbane, Australia, first discovered this. There are a number of mosquito-fighting plants indigenous to Australia and he has spent many months studying them. He first found Nitella growing in a creek and later in lakes and lagoons. On the surface of the latter there was a green scum, which proved to be a bacterial growth, and a thin film resembling oil. This was found to be the product of the plant that grew beneath the surface. Subsequent experiments showed that the plant grew rapidly, reproduced freely and was easily transplanted. Whether it can be grown in the United States is a question which Professor Matheson is trying to solve.

Nature has provided, in her usual way, many enemies for the mosquito. Nitella is one of the lowest forms of these. It is one of the most elementary members of the vegetable realm, being one of the algae. The algae draw their membership from such beings as seaweed and the slimy scum that forms on stagnant ponds. Nitella is a high private in this rear rank. It is one of the highest algae.

If you plunge your hand into the water where Nitella grows and pull up a few stems of it you find them to be greenish and about a foot long. They have a central strawlike axis, or stalk, with whorls of short, pointed branches projecting star-fashion from each of the joints. It has no leaves or flowers.

Where Nitella wars against the mosquito by preventing it from laying its eggs where it would like to, other and higher types of plants carry the battle direct to the larva, or "wiggler," and some insects even to the full-fledged mosquito.

THE most curious of the former class is the bladderwort. This plant, seen above the water, is a beautiful yellow flower of very odd shape. Only the flower is visible, the leaves and stems lying under the water.

On these under-water stems nature has devised one of its oddest structures, consisting of a bladder, partially or entirely filled with water. Each plant is equipped with many of these. On one side there is a small, round opening, fitted with a trapdoor, or valve, that opens inward. The mosquito "wiggler" approaches. As he nears the trap, glands in the bladder produce a bait of some type agreeable to the wiggler. The victim nibbles at the bait, the valve suddenly opens, a current of water shoves the wiggler into the bladder, the valve closes and the wiggler never comes out again. He is literally eaten by the plant. These observations have been made by F. Brocker, a French observer, and confirmed by C. L. Withycombe, well-known English naturalist.

ANOTHER picturesque enemy of the mosquito is the dragon fly, which is a common inhabitant of this country. This insect resembles an airplane of the biplane type. It goes after the adult mosquito in the air in much the same manner as a pursuit plane swoops down on a slower aircraft.

Argentina produces a wild plant that works in a subtle fashion against the mosquito. It has been observed and studied in those regions of the country which are free from malaria during the annual attack of the disease. An abundant plant, like clover, it produces an attractive flower that is highly scented. This seems to be highly attractive to the malaria mosquito, which feeds upon the nectar of the flower.

The nectar is largely made up of coumarin, a sugar syrup. Well filled with this syrup, the mosquito is rendered incapable of producing the element that, transmitted to man, causes malaria.

In many regions of the South grows a plant immigrant from Africa called the water hyacinth. It was originally cultivated for its spikes of bright blue or purple flowers, but it escaped and ran wild, becoming a pest. At the present time it is so thick that navigation is threatened, due to the immense mats of vegetation it has produced. One benefit was observed, however, in the hyacinth regions: Mosquitoes were few.

INVESTIGATORS of the phenomena were puzzled. Obviously, the hyacinth itself was not killing the mosquitoes or preventing them from depositing eggs. That was plain from observation. It was finally discovered that the thick mats of hyacinth harbored the real foe of the mosquito. This was a voracious, little minnow, called Gambusia. Gambusia was looking for a good place to hide from the large predatory fish that made his life miserable. The hyacinth mats provided this refuge. There were places where the minnow could dart where the bigger fish couldn't insert a fin. So Gambusia located here and gathered his clans for big hunting parties and spent his time as master of the chase, with "wigglers" as the foxes.

While the bladderwort, the dragon fly and the hyacinth-Gambusia combination are the more picturesque and interesting, it is to the lowly Nitella that science is looking for the solution of the mosquito problem, or at least, a good start on it. It is the simplest of these forms and the most effective because it strikes at the source of the evil and is preventive rather than curative.

Killed a Quarter of a Million Rats

WAXAHACHIE, Texas.

THE characteristic American desire for setting records has been put to effective use here in Ellis County by the United States Biological Survey. The particular line of endeavor fostered by the Survey differed from the customary run of flagpole sitting, consecutive looping and Charleston dancing in that it achieved a definite and beneficial result for the community.

It was a rat-killing contest and now Ellis County holds the rat-killing championship of the United States by a big margin. The original mark was 10,000, set by Barnstable County, Mass. Monmouth County, New Jersey, easily topped this by exterminating 40,000 rodents.

Then came Ellis County. Rats were ruining the crops, stripping the fields, robbing pantries, barns, cellars and corn cribs and so overrunning the communities, particularly Waxahachie, that residents were considering leaving the scene for less rat-ridden localities. Appealed to in this desperate situation, the Biological Survey organized the residents of the county, had the merchants put up prizes in cash and merchandise for the persons killing the most rats and in one month counted 243,321 dead rats!

The campaign for the prizes was fast and furious. Boys were lured into the hunt by the promise of a rifle to the person accomplishing the biggest killing. The rifle went to a boy whose score was 9374 rats. Many of the girls shuffled their traditional fear of rodents to the background and helped in the slaughter. One girl killed 1123 victims.

To the generalship of L. C. Whitehead, Government biologist, who organized and led the campaign, is due most of the credit for the success of the war in Ellis County. Whitehead saw that if the war was to be successful, the residents of the county would have to be organized into a mammoth army. The army needed a spirit to unify it, so he spoke to meetings and hung out posters, warning of the danger and the property loss caused by the enemy, and soon had the county of 57,000 persons worked up over the idea. Then the merchants offered their prizes and the war was officially on.

IT would do no good to kill all the rats in Waxahachie, Whitehead told Ellis County, because rats from the rest of the county would flock right in. They had an uncanny sense of knowing where vacancies were. So the only thing feasible was to kill all the rats in the county at one swoop.

"You may kill every rat in your own residence and you'll be no better off than you were in the first place," said Whitehead. "Other rats will come in from next door and across the street. Slaughter them in an entire block and they will come from other parts of the city. Rats caught, marked and set free at one point have been captured miles away within a few days. The animals refuse to stay put. When one of them is killed, a dozen others seem to come for the purpose of seeing what happened.

"The same truth applies to the larger areas. Kill all the rats in town and new hordes will come in from the country. The creatures seem to know where there is unoccupied territory and they flock to it without loss of time."

ALL the anti-rat armament known to modern science was turned upon the rat forces. Traps were set, poisons were placed in convenient places and boys got out their cat-rifles. One of the most effective weapons used was the ordinary flivver, which furnished the poison gas. With one end of a rubber hose attached to the exhaust pipe and the other inserted in a rat hole, the whole family occupying the underground apartment was snuffed out of existence by the fumes from the motor.

Waxahachie and the villages of Ellis County became used to the sight of wheel-barrows of dead rats being trundled away for counting and disposition. The war furnished the boys with a new sport and the progress of the armies was the talk for miles around wherever people stopped to gossip.

When it was all over, Commander Whitehead said: "That's a record to be proud of. When the public can blaze away and kill more than the estimated rat population, that's something to talk about."

Ellis County had killed more rats in a month than the experts had believed existed in the area. The Government estimates that there are approximately three rats to every one human in the United States. The results of the campaign here showed that Ellis County had five rats for every person.

As a cold-blooded business proposition, the war was a great success. The cash outlay for prizes was $217, collected by popular subscription. This was supplemented by a few dozen merchandise awards contributed by storekeepers. As against this trifling outlay for expenses, the cash value of the achievement was approximately half a million dollars, or $2500 for every dollar expended.

While this computation may sound fantastic, it is based on mathematics and well-founded facts. Biologists estimate that a single rat in one year does damage to the extent of two dollars. This is based on a close study by the Biological Survey.

APPLYING the two-dollar-a-year estimate to the more than 243,000 victims of the campaign here, it was found that the saving for the year alone was $486,000 and this did not take into consideration the elimination of future broods, the potential damage of which it was impossible to estimate.

The Biological Survey declares the rat to be the most destructive animal in the world. Assuming a rat population of only one per person, it is seen that the annual loss over the United States is more than $200,000,000. This is in actual loss alone. It takes no account of the direct and constant fighting expense, including the very considerable expense of traps and poisons, the keeping of dogs and cats as guards against the enemy and the value of human labor expended. Other animals may be bigger than the rat and their destructiveness per individual much greater but, in the aggregate damage accomplished, the rat stands first. For one thing, it carries bubonic plague.

"THE rat's destructiveness is not confined to crops and property," says a recent official statement issued by the Biological Survey. "The animal menaces human life as well. This rodent is responsible for more deaths among human beings than all the wars of history. Not all the fatal epidemics were bubonic plague but enough of them have been so identified to show that almost every century of the Christian era has had at least one visitation from this scourge, which destroyed millions of people.

"The great plague of London, which killed more than half the inhabitants who did not flee the city, was by no means the worst outbreak that has been so recorded. The plague called 'black death' devastated Europe for 50 years in the fourteenth century, destroying two-thirds to three-fourths of the population of large territories and one-fourth of all the people, or about 20,000,000 persons. Since 1896 plague has carried away more than 10,000,000 people in India alone."

NEWEST ATTEMPT TO SALVAGE CALIGULA'S PLEASURE BARGES

twice as large, so that the waters of Nemi would have found a suitable reservoir in the larger lake. This plan was finally abandoned for one which involves less time and money.

The electrical firm of Ritta, Milan, in conjunction with the Ansaldo Motor Company and the gas and electric companies of Rome and the Campagna, volunteered to supply the necessary equipment for electrical pumps, which are forcing the water from the lake into the outlet which was originally constructed by Roman engineers in the second century A. D., and which leads by a tunnel under the hill on which Genzano stands to the plain of Ariccia, and ultimately to the sea. The five firms made their offer in the nature of a tribute to Mussolini, who is anxious to recover as many monuments as possible that will remind present-day Italians of the grandeur of ancient Rome.

Given the precarious condition of the ships, it would have been impossible to have lifted them out of the lake. It is even feared that they might suffer if the lake were drained too rapidly, and therefore the work is proceeding gradually. The fall in the water averages from 50 to 60 inches for every 30 days' pumping. In order to reach the lake from Genzano the electrical firm of Stigler has constructed a cable railway with a capacity of 40 passengers. Large numbers of sightseers are expected to come to Nemi with the beginning of the tourist season, very soon now.

If the work goes forward as planned the prow of the first ship should be visible in about five months. This much having been successfully accomplished, the work will proceed in conjunction with the Government archeological authorities, as the five firms in question have only undertaken the project to the point at which the first ship, which lies at a considerably higher level than the second, will be visible.

And—what is more important to the inhabitants of the little town of Nemi and its environs—enough water to fill the lake will be pumped back when once the boats have been completely revealed, and, with the most painstaking care, removed to museums in Rome.

At first the inhabitants were terrified at the invasion of their domains by laborers and engineers with their intricate machines. They had just suffered from a mild earthquake and they regarded the invasion as a new visitation of disaster. They were assured, however, that their fields would not be damaged. With the restoration of the water, when the project has been completed, it is probable that the old tranquillity and peace will also be restored to the lake of Nemi that has mirrored on its calm surface so much of bloodshed and cruelty.

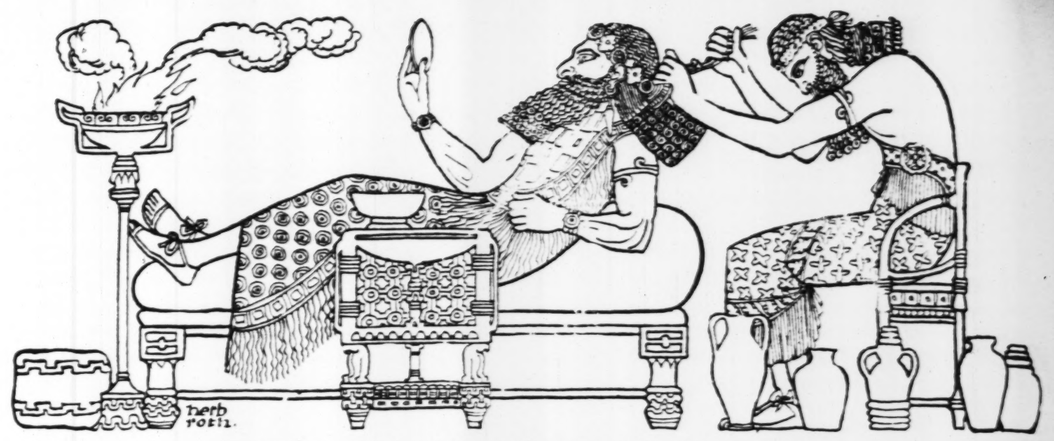
BEAUTY PARLORS Older Than Abraham

Babylonian Records Show Permanent Wave Dates From 2500 B. C. and Was Originally a Masculine, Not a Feminine, Embellishment.



Prince Mes Kalam Dug of Ur wore a wig of pure gold and a jeweled beard.

NEW YORK CITY.

THE beauty parlor is older than Abraham, the Biblical patriarch who led the forbears of Israel out of the once great city of Ur into the promised land. The permanent wave idea has at least 40 centuries behind it. And the wig—that hardy perennial of adornment, either simple for the bald, or colored, silken and bejeweled for sophisticated feminine beauty seekers—the wig was known to commercial vanity ticklers 2500 years or so before little Moses was found in the bulrushes. Likewise, the men of Ur, 4000 years ago, were keener about beauty shops than were their womenfolk.

Devastating as all this may be to claims of modern "beauticians" to originality, it is none the less borne out by recent discoveries of archeologists in the Ur region of the storied Tigris and Euphrates Valley, properly called the cradle of civilization. These amusing, if astonishing, finds were made by the American expedition of the University of Pennsylvania, under direction of the famous Prof. C. Leonard Woolley, amid the ancient and fabulously rich tombs of the historic, world-conquering rulers of Old Babylon.

The seeming facts unearthed by the excavators appear to prove that, in the matter of beauty shops at least, history has reversed itself completely. For in the parlors of Ur, apparently, men made up the vast majority of customers and the women then were in the same position as men today. The womenfolk of the vanished metropolis may or may not have slipped into a beauty emporium with the same misgivings as does the average male today, but in any event they got far less attention and the biggest and best things in elaborate hairdressing and beautifying were done for their lords and masters.

Assyrian priest, with coiffure bound in strands of gold and precious stones.

THAT the men of Ur—particularly Princes, leaders and warriors—went in for tall, tiered or waved head dressings, sometimes having as many as a dozen layers of waves, was well known. Every statue and monument of such figures uncovered during years of research in the Tigris and Euphrates Valley proved this beyond a reasonable doubt. Just why these ancients affected coiffures seemingly so conducive to headache was much less clear. Since war in that day was almost exclusively a hand-to-hand combat, the conjecture was frequently advanced that the long strands of heavy hair cultivated and wound high on the soldier's head took the place of helmet or other artificial protection.

When Prof. Woolley recently led his assistants into the tomb of Prince Mes Kalam Dug, who lived, according to contemporary record, about 2500 B. C., the mystery was solved. The fantastic headdresses were seen at once to have been votive offerings in the direction of beauty rather than to the god of war. For it was found that the elaborate coiffures were bound with strands of gold and festooned with precious and semi-precious stones, so that quite probably many an ambitious warrior or courtier carried, actually, his fortune upon his head. And the heads of dead rulers long in their graves showed evidences of great care and skill on the part of their contemporary beauticians.

Prince Dug, for example, had a wig of pure gold, the forerunner of the multi-colored silk wigs Paris put out not so long ago to cover bobbed hair in the ballroom. There was evidence, too, that when Prince Dug and his court entered upon a festival or ceremonial event he and his leaders were adorned somewhat like Solomon in all his glory. His hands glittered with jewels and henna; he was redolent of perfumes and beauty parlor lotions.

HIS soldiers did their best to follow suit—those not having wigs of gold contenting themselves with enormous coiffures woven delicately and craftily with jeweled gold chains.

In the tomb of Prince Dug the excavators found also the bodies of his wives and other feminine retainers, presumably suicides that they might be buried with him, or perhaps, sacrificed in accord with some ancient custom of his people. The women were buried in the clothing and ornaments which they had worn in their lifetime, and strange as it seems in this day, their trappings were distinctly inferior to those of the Prince and his men.

In contrast to the masculine gold wig, the women had only gold hair nets to keep their locks in place. Each wore very large crescent-shaped earrings, symbols of the moon, one of the chief divinities of Ur, to which the Prince no doubt claimed relationship. Each wore some kind of fabric veil held in place by a quite plain copper pin. Above the veil was another and lighter species of net made of narrow gold ribbons, crossed at the top of the head and with two bands across the forehead. In some cases strings of lapis lazuli and carnelian were suspended between the bands and little leaves of gold dangled above the brows.

In other words, the story revealed by the Prince's amazing tomb was that of a soft, very rich, beauty-parlor civilization. There were, of course, implements indicating the use of face powder, cosmetics and rouges of the day, similar to those found in other tombs of the race. But in this latest and seemingly richest tomb was indication that men were the big buyers of beauty shop comeliness. And that permanent waving of some sort was a high art.

BUT while these indications show that the beauty shop idea must be at least as old as the time of Prince Mes Kalam Dug, deductions of science also prove that it is probably hundreds of years older even than that. For such a wealthy, cultured, rouged civilization as that of Babylonia could not have been built in a day, and the assumption is that for perhaps four or five centuries before Prince Dug, the City of Ur was the center of a people who cultivated art and science and enjoyed refinements comparable with those of Egypt and Greece in their golden ages.

Biological observation points out that the passion for personal adornment is not mere vanity but of humans to command respect on the part of their enemies and, of their friends and rivals. Both rather a natural urge on the part and admiration—first, probably, in more secure times, on the part sexes display this urge.

BEAUTY is health's reflection

Specialists know that sallow, muddy skin is so often caused by a condition that may so easily be prevented.

BEAUTY is more than skin deep. It lies much deeper. It is the manifestation of inner health, a state of natural loveliness that no cosmetic can counterfeit.

Constipation is one of the greatest enemies of beauty. To this unnatural condition, physicians attribute a multitude of ills that impair bodily efficiency and destroy the loveliness that is woman's right.

One of the chief causes of constipation is lack of bulk in the diet. In most cases, constipation can be successfully avoided by eating regularly the kind of bulk food the body needs.

Millions of men and women have found Post's Bran Flakes the ideal bulk food. Its flavor is so delicious that it does not tire the palate. And normal persons find that eating it every day guards them against constipation.

Make this two weeks' test and note the difference

Constipation must not be neglected!* Start our test now. Mail the coupon for a free sample which shows how delicious this food is. Or order a large package from your grocer. Don't expect the one serving from the sample package to correct constipation. To be effective, bran must be eaten regularly.

Every day for two weeks, eat Post's Bran Flakes with milk or cream. Its crispness and flavor will delight you. Vary the dish, if you like, with fruit or berries. It also makes marvelous muffins and bran bread.

We predict that after two weeks you will find this delicious bulk food a natural regulator, and will notice a big difference in the way you feel.

Then follow the example of millions of healthy people who eat Post's Bran Flakes every morning.

The lovely freshness that is youth, how glorious and yet how fragile! To preserve it undimmed throughout the years is the dream of every woman. What folly to sacrifice it on the altar of careless habits!

*Ordinary cases of constipation, brought about by too little bulk in the diet, should yield to Post's Bran Flakes. If your case is abnormal, consult a competent physician at once and follow his advice.

Better than anything else, Miss Brandt would like to learn to paint well. And if her flashing teeth and attractive smile will help her, she will certainly be successful.

Lovely Teeth Since Girlhood Days

Miss Betty Brandt back in 1914

MISS BRANDT has a right to be proud of her teeth. They're so lovely . . . so flashing . . . such an addition to her smile.

She gives much of the credit to her mother, who started her using Colgate's years ago.

And yet Miss Brandt's case is not at all exceptional. In this country, and in foreign countries the world over, you will find men and women who began using Colgate's ten, fifteen, even twenty years ago, and whose teeth today are sound and beautiful.

There is nothing mysterious about these enviable results. The men and women fortunate enough to secure them did nothing that you cannot easily do yourself.

They visited their dentists for periodic inspections. And they used Colgate's.

Choose your dentifrice on the basis of results. Follow the lead of those who have kept their teeth sound for years.

Simply adopt for your own use the dentifrice most popular among people with well-preserved teeth. The one most dentists recommend.

CLEAN!

Years ago we set out to make the best dentifrice possible. We interviewed leading dental authorities. They told us that the one thing a dentifrice should do is to clean teeth. We then produced Ribbon Dental Cream—designing it to do that one thing superlatively well. It is not medicated, because all experiments in the meantime have sustained the original principle that cleansing is the only thing a dentifrice can do.

34th ANNIVERSARY SALE

We are celebrating our thirty-fourth year as Retailers of Food Products with a gigantic sale [illegible] until Sunday p. m., May 6th.

The intense effort and honest purpose of David Remley to give St. Louis housewives the utmost economy [illegible] prices for products of highest quality has raised the Remley [illegible] institution to a unique position in St. Louis.

Here is a striking example of retail marketing on a large scale, combining the market place with such important source of production as a packing plant, sausage factory and bake shop [illegible] Remley Arcade is a modern retail institution of today, a gigantic success as I visualized completeness—an expression of Remley's own ideals. As he has said in his own words: "I have dealt with my customers and have profited from square dealing. I chose the right method and laid the right foundation."

Chin-lines
tell frankly of Age

A DOUBLE CHIN is never flattering. It is a frank and unmistakable sign of age, or of tragic neglect.

Dorothy Gray's long experience in caring for women's faces showed her that the under-chin line is one of the places in which age first shows. She saw how a sluggish circulation will—unless corrected—allow the muscles of the face and throat to relax, so that stretched tissues and a drooping, elderly chin-line must inevitably result.

Dorothy Gray's treatment for double chin is therefore tremendously successful, because it is based on the stimulation of a healthy, vitalizing circulation, in combination with thorough cleansing and proper lubrication of the skin.

Dorothy Gray's preparations can be obtained, together with a booklet containing full directions for their use, at the leading St. Louis shops.

It is evident on every hand that people do lose fat in these days without starving. Look about you—note how slenderness prevails. Abnormal figures have largely disappeared.

One great reason lies in a discovery made by leading scientists. They found a cause for excess fat in a certain gland deficiency. It's a gland which assists nutrition. Thousands of tests proved that fat reduction came by correcting that lack.

A great medical laboratory then embodied that factor in Marmola prescription tablets. They have now been used for 20 years—millions of boxes of them. In every circle you can see the results. Almost anyone has friends who can tell them.

The users of Marmola have told others, and the use has grown. Now people are using some 5,000,000 tablets a month. And excess fat is fast becoming an affliction of the past.

Abnormal exercise or diet is neither required nor advised. One simply takes four Marmola tablets daily until weight comes down to normal.

The Marmola prescription is not secret. The full formula is given in every box, and a book states the reasons for all good effects. You will know that you are taking what modern physicians prescribe, and why the effects are natural and helpful.

Don't suffer longer from abnormal fat. It blights beauty, health and vitality. Learn how Marmola corrects the conditions, and why. Go get a box today, and this day may be a red-letter day in your calendar.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1.00 a box. Any druggist who is out will order from his jobber.

GRAY HAIR

SCIENCE now finds that hair can be restored to natural shade. No tell-tale, crude dyes that endanger hair health. No mess . . . but instead a clear, colorless 100% safe liquid is used that gives the hair its youthful shade and lustre. Faded hair sparkles with girlhood color. Gray streaks disappear entirely.

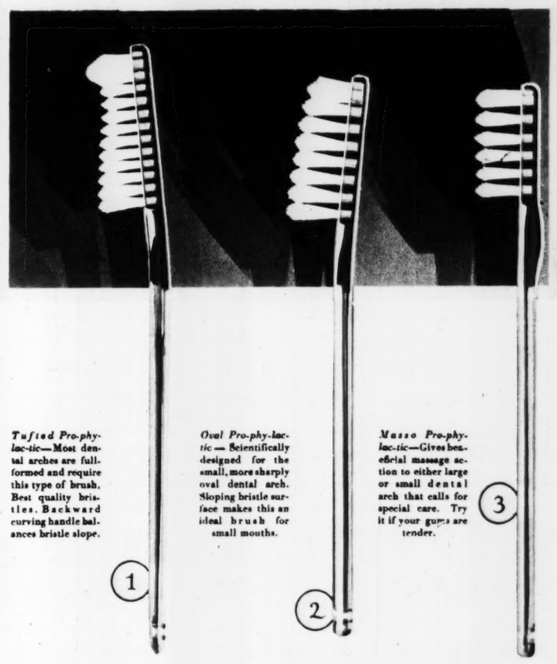
choose right Pro-phy-lac-tic



Tufted Pro-phy-lac-tic—Most dental arches are full-formed and require this type of brush. Best quality bristles. Backward curving handle balances bristle slope.

Oval Pro-phy-lac-tic—Scientifically designed for the small, more sharply oval dental arch. Sloping bristle surface makes this an ideal brush for small mouths.

Masso Pro-phy-lac-tic—Gives beneficial massage action to either large or small dental arch that calls for special care. Try it if your gums are tender.

Healthier teeth and gums yours if you use brush designed for your dental arch

SIMPLE as ABC's now to win strong, sturdy teeth . . . firm, healthy gums.

Ten seconds . . . your mirror . . . and you know what type of dental arch (teeth and gums) you have—what brush suits it best.

If your mirror reveals a full-formed face, your dental arch, too, is full-formed, of average size. The right brush for you is the Tufted Pro-phy-lac-tic.

A smaller facial contour indicates a small, more sharply oval arch. Then the Oval Pro-phy-lac-tic is the brush to use.

Extra care without extra effort

But . . . you may have either a large or small dental arch and require still a different type of brush—the Masso Pro-phy-lac-tic. This brush is for dental arches that call for special care, for teeth and gums that need massage action. Fits both large and small arches. It massages as it cleans.

All three new Pro-phy-lac-tics are alike in one respect—quality. High-grade bristles . . . Super-polished handles in transparent colors . . . Packed in individual, sanitary, air-sealed boxes . . . Guaranteed.

The Kelvinator Company
36 N. Tenth St., Allentown, Pennsylvania

Gentlemen: During the four years since our Kelvinator was installed it has rendered continuous service without any expense for up-keep or a single adjustment. In all our experience with electrical and mechanical household devices, our Kelvinator is the most nearly perfect.

Yours very truly,

★ The letters used in Kelvinator advertising are genuine. For obvious reasons we do not publish the names of the writers, but they are on file in our Detroit offices.

"... our Kelvinator is the most nearly perfect"

FOR more than four years the Kelvinator about which this letter was written has rendered constant, automatic refrigeration service without a single adjustment. The utter dependability of the Kelvinator . . . even in its earliest stages of pioneering the field of domestic electric refrigeration . . . testifies to the rugged simplicity and staunchness of its mechanical features.

Many of the first Kelvinators ever made and sold . . . the first electric refrigeration equipment ever offered the home . . . are still rendering satisfactory service. Some, naturally, have been replaced by newer and larger models, but a number of them are still plugging away, day in and day out, at their work of creating leisure, comfort and wholesomeness in the homes of their original owners . . . after twelve years.

Even this Kelvinator of four years ago is, comparatively speaking, an old model . . . for Kelvinator development has moved rapidly. The new, improved Kelvinator, in its wide range of styles and sizes to meet every home requirement, is ready to take up its automatic task in your home.

There is a size of Kelvinator cooling unit to fit your present refrigerator and its installation is quickly and simply accomplished.

Or, if you prefer, you may select a new cabinet from the famous Kelvinator line. You will find exactly the refrigerator you need among these Kelvinator cabinets. They are most moderately priced, depending on their capacity and design, and conveniently arranged deferred payments may be had if you prefer.

Let the local Kelvinator dealer tell you more about this faithful, economical servant in the home. Kelvinator Corporation, Detroit.

MODEL 272—Five cubic feet of actual food storage . . . 7 square feet of shelf space! Attractive and durable gray lacquer exterior and heavy white enamel interior.

MODEL P-6—Almost 6 cubic feet of food capacity . . . 9.94 sq. ft. shelf area! Heavy, easily cleaned porcelain within and without. Attractive French Gray borders.

MODEL P-9—Nine and a half cubic feet of food storage with almost 15 square feet of shelf space! Heavy, easy cleaning porcelain inside and out. Striking trimmings of French Gray.
